SMILE A LITTLE.

Smile a little, smile a little,
As you go along.
Not alone when life is pleasant,
But when things go wrong.
Care delights to see you frowning,
Loves to hear you sigh;
Turn a smiling face upon her,
Quick the dame will fly.

Smile a little, smile a little,
All along the road:
Every heart must have its burden,
Every heart its load.
Why sit down in gloom and darkness,
With your grief to sup?
As you drink fate's bitter tonic,
Smile across the cup.

Smile upon the troubled pilgrims
Whom you pass and meet;
Frowns are thorns, and smiles are blossoms
Oft the weary feet.
Do not make the way seem harder
By a sullen face.
Smile a little, Smile a little,
Brighten up the place.

Smile upon your undone labor;
Not for one who grieves
O'er his task waits wealth or glory;
He who smiles achieves.
Though you meet with loss and sorrow
In the passing years,
Smile a little, smile a little,
Even through your tears.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

NUMBER 1. Vol. 1. of Backbone published at St. Paul and Minneapolis is a bran new Temperance paper. It starts out as if in earnest in the cause of the suppression of the liquor traffic. George F. Wells is editor and manager at 1514 Capitol Avenue, St. Paul. Subscription 25 cts a year.

We hear that one of the newly elected County Commissioners, is liable to loose his job because he had not taken out his first papers before he was nominated to this important office. People must be hard up for timber for the county commissioners, when they can't find a citizen to run for the office.

THE GREAT ROUND WORLD and what is going on in it is the name of a new weekly newspaper for children. It is full of good wholesome reading on items of interest to everybody, and is up to date. Send to William Beverly Harrison, No. 59, Fifth Ave. N. Y. for a copy, 5 cents, or $2.50 per. year.

THERE seems to be considerable of a strife between the three branches of our Republican government to see who is the biggest. Congress wants to recognize Cuban iddependence. The President don't. And somebody has suggested that the Supreme Court should decide the case. Its just like this, the people of the United States know independence wherever and whenever they see it. They have an opportunity to vote they will soon give the different branches of our three cornered government an idea of what they had best do.

THE Litchfield Independent calls the Howard Lake Herald down rather hard for its Bright Example, of the Meeker County Candidates making an agreement to peddle no cigars or beverages during the campaign. The Independent says: "We did not know that there was any agreement," and that, "The Republicans, when they were driven out to fill appointments for speaking, paid their drivers so well that the latter out of goodness of their hearts, distributed cigars by the box to the assembled voters. The canidates just after their nomination, distributed personally in the convention hall at least a dozen boxes of cigars. What the fusion canidates did in this line we will leave to the opposition to tell."

WHAT a fine thing for Mr. Bryan that he did not get elected President of the United States last fall. With all the banks and other business houses that are going to the wall now, and which under the present gold standard was their inevitable fate, whoever was elected, he would have been charged with it all The republican and gold standard democratic orators and press preached to us that all that we needed was confidence. Some said the next day after McKinley was elected prosperity would begin, and some went so far as to fill the columns of the papers with articles going to prove that prosperity had already begun. But now when almost daily reports of banks and other business failures is received they do not tell us that Mr. Bryan did it. How could he if he was beaten half so bad as they try to make out?

IT looks as if McKinley intends to construct a cabinet from other material than Reeds.

JUDGE KERR, of St. Paul died this week in California where he had gone in search of health. He had just arrived there. His remains were brought home for burial.

THE Columbia National Bank and the Washington Bank, both of Minneapolis, closed their doors to business Tuesday. They still ask their customers to have "confidence" and they expect to pay in full.

ST. PAUL, if she expects to build her ice Parthenon, had better send down to Nashville and borrow their ice making machinery. She don't seem to stand in with the ice manufacturing powers of this part of the country.

If National banks, with all their privileges can't make a live of it it is of no use to arrange for more of them. The base thing to do is to use gold and silver coins for money as far as possible, and big paper money for the balance.

IT beats all how the National Banks are breaking through the country. It looks some as if there must be a concerted action to make people believe they can't make a living: or else times are really hard as the democrats claimed they must be under the gold standard.

JUST how any body in Wright County is going to be benefitted by having the tariff on lumber and wool put up to the highest notch by the new trriff tinkers we can't see. Don't everbody pay enough now for their lumber and for their woollen clothing? And if the tariff is not no raise the price so that somebody can make more dollars what is it for? And if the prices on lumber and woollens are raised are we not bound to pay our share of the raise whenever we buy any of them? For Wright County it looks to us as if it would be better not to raise the tariffs on these articles.

A FEW weeks ago a New York judge declared the Dakota divorces laws of no effect in that state. In at least one state in the Union no divorces are granted: in several it is an easy matter to secure a decree annulling marriage vows. This is wrong it tends to disrupt and dissolve family ties social and legal rights all over the country. If a deverce must be granted it should be for grounds sufficient to be recognized as worthy in all states and by all peoples. And when once granted should be good for at least the entire United States. This way of having people married in the eyes of the law in one state and not married in the eyes of the law of another state is entirely wrong and should be corrected by a law that will make people married or not married one or the other any place in the land. This would be a good subject for international legislation as well.

Among our Exchanges.

The First National Bank of Beatrice, reopened last week, after a suspension of three and a half months. Weeping Water (Neb) Rep.

St. Paul Globe: The agitation of the currency question does not cut much figure today. Very few people have any currency to talk about.

Minneapolis Times: A ferry boat has been named after John G. Carlisle. Happy thought; it is a ferryboat's business to hustle from one side to the other and from bank to bank.

Tomorrow is the day to swear off on some of your habits that are not commendable. Quit Smoking, Chewing, Drinking or Swearing for awhile and see how much more people will think of you. —Cokato Enterprise.

The warm praise by the St. Paul Dispatch of Senator Davis' fitness for the post of secretary of state is good evidence that Mr. Merriam has given up hope of getting a place in Mr. McKinley's cabinet. He would like to get Davis out of the senatorship and trust to comming legislature to elect him to the vacancy. —Duluth Herald.

Are these lumber men who are fighting for a high tariff on all the materials that enter into the construction of the cottages and frame dwellings of the farmers and the men of small means the same fellows who have been denuding regions of the headwaters of our rivers, and wantonly destroying great forest and bribing State Legislatures to let them have a free hand in their work of devastation?—New York World,

St. Paul Globe: Now, if all politicians would resolve to kick the "machine" out of politics.

Howard, Dodge and Wendell, under indictment by the grand jury for bribery of attempted birery of Juryman Otto in case of Czech vs. the Great Northern railway, seem to think there is no possibible way for them to obtain a fair trial in this county. The case has been much talked of throughout the county of course, but we hardly think the feeling against these men is so intense as to convict them if they are innocent. By circulating affidavits last spring to secure a chage of venue, Howard did more than the newspapers to cause comment on his case; some of it adverse comment too, for it don't look well for a man who claims to have proof of his innocence to work so almighty hard to have his case tried in some remote place where there is no knowledge of it or interest in it.—Maple Lake Messenger.

Solving a Puzzle.

Up in Michigan a Sabbath school superintendent, at the close of an address on the creation, which he was sure he had kept within the comprehension of the smaller schollars, smilingly invited questions. A tiny boy, with white, eager face, and a large brow, at once held up his hand.

"Please, sir, why was Adam never a baby?"

The superintendent coughed in some doubt as to what answer to give, but a little girl of 9, the eldest of several brothers and sisters, came promptly to his aid. "Please, sir," she said smartly "there was no body to nurse him".—The Musical Idea.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 25, 1896.

There is no more probability that the independence of Cuba will be recognized by the U. S. during President Cleveland's administration than there is of Grover Cleveland becoming president of the Cuban republic, and unless McKinley is misrepresented by republicans who are supposed to enjoy his confidence, the present policy will be continued by him until there is some decided change in Cuba. The resolution for the independence of Cuba which has been reported to the Senate will, of course, be made the basis of a lot of speeches when Congress reassembles, but more of them will be devoted to the claim of the administration, that the President alone has the power to recognize the independence of a nation, than to Cuba or anything connected with the unfortunate island. Whether a vote on the resolution itself will be had before the expiration of this Congress is a matter of doubt; but not of much importance, as it has already been given out by the republican leaders of the House that the resolution will not be allowed to come before that body at all. The constitutional question involved in the claim of the administration is an important one, and one upon which men who are regarded as able lawyers differ regardless of of politics, and the debate upon it will be in no sense partisan. There is pratically no precedent, though several have been cited as having a bearing upon the claim. And after all, nothing short of a discission of the U. S. Supreme Court will be accepted as settling it.

Senator Morgan, of Ala., has never set up for a wit, but if he gets off a few more flashes like his answer to Senator Vest's inquirery as to the meaning of that clause of the President's message dealing with the Pacific Railroads the tital will be forced upon him. Mr. Morgan was urging action to protect the people on the Pacific coast from these rail roads, or rather from the men who control them, the Ala. Senator said with a deprecatory gesture: "Now in all Egypt there was only one man, and he was divinely inspired, who could interpret the dreams of Pharaoh. The Senator ought not to ask me to interpret the President's message. If any man is capable of interpreting the message it is the Senator from Missouri".

Among the members of the House who did not go home to spend their Christmas are a number of republicans who were reelected to the new House, and who prefer to stand their office-seeking constituents off with letters which do not commit them, instead of meeting them face to face and being compelled to commit themselves. The little postmasterships are especially troublesome to the Representatives-elect on account of the numertous applicants for them. For instance, one Representative from New Jersey has received among other applications for a single postoffice in his district, one from each of three men who were delegates to the convention who nominated him and who took active parts in his campaign.

The Government isn't expecting war with Spain, but if war comes it is going to be as well prepared as possible for it. A secret meeting of high naval officers was held in Washington a few days ago for the purpose of preparing a complete programme, offensive and defensive, that might be carried on by our present navy if there should be war at short notice, and such a programme was prepared and is now in the hands of Secretary Herbert.

It is as true today as it was when written by Macaulay that, "That where you shed the honey, the buzzing flies will crowd". There is going to be honey shed by the republican tariff bill, and the flies, in the shape of those who are anticipating benefits through protection are already crowding Washington hotels, preparatory to telling the republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee, at the hearings which are to begin next week, just how much interest they want on their campaign contributions.

Representative Barham, of Cal., thinks the Pacific Railroad funding bill, which is to be considered by the House for four days beginning Jan. 7, can be defeated. He said: "If we can get enough time to show the whole thing up, I am satisfied that many votes will be changed. The passage of the present bill is a present of $100,000,000 to C. P. Huntington and his associates. If it becomes known that the U. S. is going to treat these debtors like it does all others there will be plenty of buyers at the full value of the property."

Maceo Still Lives

Latests reports say that Dr. Zertucha shot Maceo himself, for $50,000. That Macee fell and was supposed to have been dead. But was taken to a place of safety where he is now over the worst and on the road to recovery. This will greatly encourage the Cubans and their sympathisers.

LATE reports from Cuba, say that Gen. Ruis Rivera, Maceo's Successer, in Cuba was wounded so that he has since died. The Cuban generals seem to be having a hard time of it lately.

J. B. McCULLAGH, editor of the Globe Democrat, St. Louis, fell from a second story window and was fouud dead yesterday morning.

Uneasy is the head that holds a crown in Turkey. Of the 38 sultans who have ruled the Ottoman empire since the conquest of Constantinople by the Turks 34 have died violent deaths.

An exchange remarks: "The old drunkards are dying rapidly." But there seems to be a surplus of recruits from the young drunkards. Are they your boys? They are somebody's boys.

The picture of "Sheridan's Ride," by John Mulvaney, author of the famous "Custer's Last Rally," has been unveiled at Philadelphia and will soon be placed in the National art gallery at Washington.

A cargo of corn has been shipped from the United States to India for planting purposes, with a view to a better food supply for the future. It is the first cargo of corn ever shipped to India from this country.

The timber wealth of the United States gives a yearly product of over $1,000,000,000, or twice the value of the entire output of all the mines put together—gold, silver, coal, iron, copper, zinc, and all the rest.

There are now 70,000 postmasters in the United States, and it took $30,000,000 the last fiscal year to pay for the postal service. It comes high, but we must have it. The first year of Washington's administration we had 75 post offices, and the mail service cost $32,000 hard cash.

In New York physicians have successfully performed the feat of taking out a man's stomach, repairing it and cleaning it and oiling it and then replacing it. In this manner at least one man was restored to the enjoyment of the table. Where will modern science find a stopping place?

Arctic Explorer Von Prager explains that in his business "something besides drifting with the ice is necessary." That is expressing it too modestly. The regulation relief expedition, the triumphant return, and the lucrative lectures on what was not accomplished are all part of the "business."

That this is a great country for conventions is shown by the fact that a pamphlet is published weekly in Cincinnati devoted exclusively to a list of future conventions to be held in different states. In the last issue of the publication the list included nearly 400 conventions, all of which will be held within the next three months. The American people certainly enjoy talking, and they like to get together and compare views.

The statement by a lecturer before the American Geographical society that there are 50,000,000 slaves in Africa is startling to those who had supposed that human slavery had almost died out. If a half million lives are sacrificed every year in the traffic, it seems time for the philanthropic societies of the world to rekindle the agitation, that has almost ceased in the mistaken belief that there is no fuel for the flame, for the entire abolition of human chattelhood.

The word trocha is of such frequent occurrence in dispatches and news from Havana that it seems likely in time to become incorporated into the English speech. An explanation having been asked of the term, which is pronounced trotsha, with the accent on the first syllable, it may be stated that originally it denotes a footpath, pathway, or, sometimes, a short cut. During the present Cuban unpleasantness its signification has been applied to a fortified high road.

An old post office inspector says: "Money never should be inclosed in letters. In the first place it is unnecessary to do so, because money-orders are so cheap; and, in the second place, money in a letter offers a constant temptation to those who handle mail. It is practically impossible to place money in a letter so that the postal clerk into whose hands the letter falls will not instantly detect it. Paper money has a peculiar odor unlike anything else on earth, and the clerk who is dishonest uses his sense of smell in spotting valuable letters rather than the sense of touch.

When Phaeton tried to drive the chariot of the sun, which his father had long guided in safety, there was soon the making of a first class bonfire. The young Phaeton who has the steeds of Germany in harness drives furiously, but his father's discretion is lacking. Wilhelm II. after playing the army against the civilians and militarism against industrialism has alienated the newspapers. A nation without a free press is deaf and dumb, and in this age of mouths and ears the people can get along better without kings and army columns than without editors and newspaper columns.

The "King of Fanning Island" in the South seas is being subjected to considerable annoyance by the obstreperous executor of his father's estate. The royal potentate is even threatened with the appointment of a receiver on the petty ground that he has misused the funds of the island. Surely things have come to a pretty pass if a monarch cannot misuse his own funds if he wants to, and if "that divinity which does hedge a king" cannot hedge him enough to afford protection from a minion of the law. The king is in San Francisco awaitin the judgment of the court to ascertain whether he is a king or a jack.

PLUNGE OF A TRAIN.

It Goes Through a Trestle on an Alabama Railway.

The Disaster Caused by Wreckers Who, It Is Said, Rob Dead and Wounded—Twenty-Eight Persons Killed; Ten Hurt.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 28.—One of the most disastrous wrecks in the history of southern railroads happened 36 miles south of here Sunday morning at 7:50 o'clock, in which 28 persons were killed outright and ten others injured, two of whom will die. The ill-fated train was a Louisville & Nashville one, which runs from here to Blockton, a distance of 40 miles. The train left here at 5:30 a. m. in charge of Engineer Frank White and Conductor A. P. Connell. Four miles north of Blocton the entire train, made up of an engine, baggage and two passenger coaches, crashed through a bridge 700 feet long and 120 feet high into the Cahaba river.

Wreck Takes Fire.

It is the belief that the wreck was caused by fiends for the purpose of robbery. A rail had been removed from the track, and when the engine struck this 300 feet of the bridge gave way and went down with the train. Immediately the wreck took fire, the water being only about three feet deep, and before sufficient help could be secured the unfortunate passengers and trainmen who were pinioned under the debris were burned to death in sight of other unfortunate victims of the disaster. Some of the passengers not so badly hurt managed to crawl out and do all they could in assisting the others, but with little avail. The dead are:

The Victims.

Frank White, engineer, of Birmingham; George Carney, fireman, of Birmingham; A. P. Connell, conductor, of Birmingham; Tom Streeter, colored porter, of Birmingham; Jordan Powell, wife and eight children, of Blocton; Mrs. Henry Hanberry and two children, of Birmingham; James Boling, express messenger, of Guthrie, Ky.; L. W. Martin, of Brookwood; Bruce Phillips, of Blocton; S. W. Tibbs and wife, of Campbelltown; Andrew Bryson, of Blocton; George Glendall, Helena; four others unidentified.

The injured are: Ed Echols, slightly; Henry Hanbury, ribs broken; Powell child, feet badly burned; Mrs. Walker, of Blocton, internally, will die; Mrs. Walker's three children, slightly; Miss Booth, Blocton, internally, will die; Stan Stewart, arm broken.

The bridge was a ponderous wooden structure with an iron span of 200 feet in the center, and just at the beginning of the iron work train wreckers had pulled the spikes and removed one of the rails. When the engineer discovered this, as was evident from the position of his throttle and reverse lever, he immediately attempted to stop, but was running at such a rate of speed as to carry down the bridge. Every evidence showed that train wreckers had been at work.

THE LAST RITES.

Tributes to the Memory of Kate Field—Her Remains Cremated.

San Francisco, Dec. 28.—After months of weary waiting, while she slept in apparent neglect in the sun-kissed isles of the Pacific, those who knew and loved Kate Field personally and those who knew her not but loved and honored her for the splendid qualities with which she was endowed, have had an opportunity to pay the last tributes to her memory.

The services Sunday were in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Highton, who accompanied the remains from Honolulu, assisted by the press of San Francisco. Rev. George Walk, rector of Trinity Episcopal church and a former friend of Kate Field, placed his church at the disposal of those having the services in charge, and himself read the burial service of the Episcopal church over the remains. At two o'clock the great edifice was filled, for Miss Field had many warm personal friends here, besides hosts of admirers. The interior was decorated with potted plants and ferns, while the chancel was fairly banked with floral offerings. President and Mrs. Cleveland sent a beautiful wreath of roses and ferns tied with long violet ribbon. The black velvet casket was entirely covered with a pall of California violets, the tribute of Mrs. George Crocker, of New York. Gov. James H. Budd's token was a wreath of ferns with a cluster of orchids tied with violet ribbon. Besides these, Mayor Sutro, Mayor-elect Phelan, Miss Lilian Whiting, of Boston; Mrs. Sol Smith, Miss Marian Y. Bunner, of Current Literature; H. H. Kohlsaat, members of the Chicago Times-Herald editorial staff and many others, both here and at the east, laid floral offerings on her bier.

Gov. Budd and his staff, and Col. W. R. Shafter, U. S. A., and staff were present in uniform.

The Grant Monument.

New York, Dec. 29.—At the suggestion of Gen. Horace Porter, president of the Grant Monument association, the board of estimate has appropriated the sum of $50,000 to pay the expenses attending the dedication of the Grant monument on April 27 next. In his statement to the board, Gen. Porter said that the ceremonies should be under the direction of the city authorities, as the dedication of the monument is to be distinctly a city affair. He further stated that President-elect McKinley had agreed to be present at the ceremony, and that all the members of the cabinet, the diplomatic corps, the legislature, governors of states and mayors of all large cities ought to be invited. The government should invite all nations maintaining fleets in the Atlantic to participate in a naval parade.

None of Our Business.

London, Dec. 28.—A dispatch from Madrid to the Central News says that Senor Canovas del Castillo, the prime minister, denies that negotiations have been or will be opened with the United States looking to the pacification of Cuba. The prime minister holds that the Cuban question is one of internal politics which in no wise concerns the United States or any other foreign power, and he is still confident that Spain is fully able to suppress the insurrection in Cuba without asking for or accepting the good offices of any government to secure that end.

Sang for Charity.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 25.—Miss Anna Held, the French actress, who is playing at the Grand opera house, sang on the public streets of this city Thursday for the benefit of a charitable institution. The crowds were so pleased with the young woman's efforts that over $800 was poured into her carriage.

An American Diplomat Dead.

Paris, Dec. 28.—Gen. John Meredith Read died Sunday morning from pneumonia.

MANY FAILURES.

Several Banking Concerns Go to the Wall—A Receiver for Norton & Co.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Otto Wasmansdorff, of the banking firm of Wasmansdorff & Heinemann, which failed here last Monday as a result of the collapse of the National Bank of Illinois, committed suicide at his home, 549 Cleveland avenue, Sunday morning by shooting himself in the right temple with a revolver. The constant worry and mental anxiety of the past week consequent upon the failure is believed to have been the cause. He had scarcely slept during that time, and although it is generally believed that the bank will discharge its obligations in full Mr. Wasmansdorff saw that his standing in financial circles had been imperiled.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—The Atlas national bank of Chicago has decided to retire from business, and the clearing house committee, at a special meeting Sunday night decided that the associated banks of the city would advance the amount needed to pay its depositors in full. The amount required is in the neighborhood of $600,000. The bank will not receive any deposits from date. Checks on it will be settled through the clearing house as usual. The meeting was held at the home of Isaac G. Lombard, a member of the committee, about 11 o'clock Sunday night. The officers of the Atlas national are: President, W. C. D. Grannis; vice president, C. F. Farwell; cashier, S. W. Stone; assistant cashier, W. S. Tillotson.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Norton & Co., of Chicago and Lockport, Ill., millers and grain dealers, went into the hands of a receiver late Saturday afternoon. The affairs of the firm were in such shape that it was impossible to learn definitely what the assets and liabilities are. It was represented that the assets might approach $500,000, and it was stated that the liabilities were considerably under that figure. Norton & Co. have been known for 40 years through their operation of the Lockport mills. They added other enterprises to their early business, and in addition to their flouring mill they have grain elevators and an electric light plant at Lockport. They have also a large grocery store at Romeo, on the Illinois & Michigan canal, and in Chicago a large flouring establishment. The company also owns a paper mill at Niagara Falls and is largely interested in the water and electric power scheme at the falls. They have done a private banking business of enormous proportions in Lockport, and nearly half of the Lockport population is directly interested through deposits. The business integrity of the company has never been questioned here, and the failure is a gloomy surprise. However, assurance is given that the embarrassment is only temporary. The company was caught deep by the failure of the National Bank of Illinois, and finding themselves thus unable to continue the operation of their extensive properties and meet the demands of depositors until they could realize from other sources a receiver was applied for as the most safe and equitable mode of adjusting the financial difficulties.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 28.—The board of directors of the Security Mortgage & Trust company, a local financial concern, has made application to Judge W. J. J. Smith, of the Fourteenth judicial district court, for the appointment of a receiver. The court appointed H. A. Kabler, for four years past the manager of the Security Mortgage & Trust company, as receiver. The liabilities of the company are approximately $2,000,000; assets, nominally the same, but they will not probably realize more than $1,000,000 in the market. The company has been doing business for nine years.

Geneva, Ill., Dec. 29.—William M. and W. M. Van Nortwick, bankers at Batavia, Ill., made an assignment in the Kane county court here Monday evening. All their property, both in the Batavia bank and stock in the large corporations in which they are interested were turned over to the Equitable Trust company, of Chicago. There were three assignments in all. John S. and William M. assigned all their personal property and homes, and then assigned as a firm. The failure was due to the liquidation of the Atlas national bank of Chicago, in which the Van Nortwicks were heavy stockholders.

West Superior, Wis., Dec. 29. — The Bank of Superior, doing business at the east end, suspended on account of a run with which it was threatened after the recent failures.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 29.—The McCoy Banking company of Independence went into voluntary liquidation Monday. The bank refused to receive deposits in the morning and began paying its depositors in full. There was no run on the bank, and the directors put an advertisement in the Independence newspapers asking depositors to come after their money. The reason given for the bank going out of business is that its president, William McCoy, is too advanced in years to manage its affairs longer. He is 85 years old. The capital stock of the bank is $50,000. On August 10, when the last report was made, it owed to its depositors $55,180. Its outstanding loans amounted to $72,262.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 29. — The Scandia bank suspended Monday. It was one of the smaller banks of the city and was loaded up with real estate on which it could not realize.

Laconia, N. H., Dec. 29.—The Laconia Car company was forced into insolvency Monday. The total liabilities are placed at $617,000 and assets at $407,000.

Greater New York.

New York, Dec. 25.—The preliminary draft of the new charter for the Greater New York has been completed, and was made public Thursday. The commission before submitting the charter to the legislature will hold public hearings from January 4 to 16. The preliminary charter divides the city into five boroughs—Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn, Richmond and Queens. The central government of the city will be in the hands of a municipal assembly consisting of two houses. A lower house of 104 members elected from senatorial districts, and upper house of 37 members elected from council districts created by the charter. There will be one mayor, but each of the five boroughs will have a president to care for local concerns, and there will be 22 local boards, one for each senatorial district.

Utah's Vote.

Salt Lake City, Dec. 25.—The official returns for the election in the state of Utah were given out by the state board of canvassers Thursday as follows: President—Bryan and Sewall, 64,432; McKinley and Hobart, 13,456; Palmer and Buckner, 22. Congressional—W. H. King (dem.), 47,356; Lafayette Holbrook (rep.), 27,813; Warren Foster (pop.), 2,279.

LIVES CRUSHED OUT,

Nine Persons Killed by a Landslide in Ireland.

Dublin, Dec. 29.—A landslide has occurred near Rathmore, County Kerry, doing great damage to property and causing the loss of at least nine lives. Heavy rains have fallen in that part of Ireland lately, with the result that some places that are generally dry now resemble vast morasses. Near Rathmore there is an eminence about 1,000 feet high, known as Boy hill, and it was here that the landslide occurred. The rains percolating through the ground gradually loosened a huge mass of earth, and on Sunday night, apparently without the slightest warning, a large part of the surface of the hill began to slide towards the valley. Gaining momentum as it moved, it swept downward with a roaring sound, carrying rocks, trees and everything before it for miles. In some places the path of the landslide was a mile wide, and as it moved along it buried everything, entirely changing the aspect of the section over which it passed.

The residence of Mr. Donnelly, steward of Lord Kenmare, one of whose seats, Killarney house, is at Killarney, was engulfed in the mass of earth and debris and all of its occupants, Mr. Donnelly, his wife and seven children, were killed. It is supposed that the house was swept from its foundations by the crushing mass, overturned and buried to a great depth. As its present locality is not known, it is hardly probable that the bodies will be recovered. All the cattle, pigs and horses on the place were also buried, and there is now a scene of utter desolation where, on Sunday, stood the neat dwelling and outbuildings of Mr. Donnelly.

The movement of the landslide was to the southwest, in the direction of the River Flesk, into which a large portion of the earth slipped, blocking it up. The current of the river was employed in running dynamos, which furnished electric light for the Kerry lunatic asylum and some buildings in Killarney. The blocking of the river, of course, stopped the current and rendered the dynamos temporarily useless. All the buildings using the light from this source were plunged into darkness and it was some time before other lights could be obtained.

The part of the hill where the slide began was a bog, and much of the earth that moved was very soft. Huge quantities plunged into the river, and there is danger of the back water flooding the country around about unless the current is able to carry the debris down with it. If anybody was passing along the roads at the time the slide passed over the highways they would surely have been buried. There have been no reports of anybody being missing, and on this is based the belief that there was no loss of life outside the Donnelly family.

SPAIN'S REQUEST.

She Will Ask the United States to Act as Mediator.

Washington, Dec. 29.—The Post this morning says it has been learned from an authoritative source that Secretary Olney and Senor Dupuy de Lome, the Spanish minister, have practically terminated negotiations on the Cuban question, which are to be submitted to congress when it convenes January 5. The terms of the agreement are based on the recent official communication from Premier Canovas, addressed to the secretary of state.

The premier states clearly the terms which Spain will accord to the insurgents and practically asks the United States to propose these conditions to her rebellious subjects. In return for our good offices Spain assures this government that she sincerely deplores the great commercial loss which we have sustained on account of the Cuban disturbance. She assures us that she is even now considering a reciprocity treaty which shall deal mainly with Cuban products and which will be framed in such advantageous terms toward this government that our losses, both in commerce and in the destruction of American property in Cuba, will be most generously compensated.

Premier Canovas says that Spain cannot, of course, as a self-respecting and respected nation, stand before the world as having been coerced into measures by the United States. She has freely granted all that she now offers, and that in the face of a rebellion. But she accepts the good offices of the United States to act as mediator and to guarantee to the insurgents amnesty and the enforcement of the new reform law which she is about to proclaim in Cuba.

The form of government offered is, the Spanish statesman declares, the limit of independence which can be granted to a province by any nation, without absolutely severing the bonds of union with the mother country. Autonomy, as enjoyed by the Canadians, can never be granted in Cuba.

What Spain is willing to grant the insurgents, if they lay down their arms, and what she asks the United States to guarantee, is an act which provides for a council of administration, which shall control all matters pertaining to the commerce of the Indies and all estimates upon the general taxation and expenditures of the island as well as its general home government.

The Strike in Boston.

Boston, Dec. 26.—The West End street car men are sick of strikes. Fully 800 striking employes of the road were locked out Friday. With daybreak came the resumption of car service, and the majority of strikers who applied for work at the several division headquarters were given cars in the order of application. Many, however, were told that their services would not be required, and it was noticeable that this applied to every man who had been active in the strike and who had served on the union committees. The company hired fully 800 new hands, and were enabled to run cars on schedule time. These new men were, as a rule, given regular jobs, while the old men taken on later in the day were put on the extra list, which means that they will get only occasional work by the hour's pay.

Six Miners Meet Death.

Princeton, Ind., Dec. 28.—As a result of a gas explosion in the mine of the Maule Coal company here Saturday six men were killed and eight badly injured. One man, Robert Poneylight, is still underground and all hope of his being rescued alive has been given up.

"Do you study all those books?"

"No, sah; dey's my brudder's. I'se a ignorant kind er nigger side him, boss. You jest orter see dat nigger figgerin'. He done gone an' ciphered clean through addition, partition, subtraction, distraction, abomination, justification, creation, amputation and adoption."

Nicholas of Scotch Origin.

A claim is put forth that the czar is to some extent a Scotsman. Czar Paul, when in London, is said to have fallen in love with a Miss MacGregor, a young woman noted for her beauty, who happened to be riding her Shetland pony in Hyde Park. He married her privately, so the story goes, and she was the mother of Nicholas I. The present czar would, therefore, be her great-grandson.

OLD YEAR AND NEW.

AH, WE have been true friends for many a day,
No matter whether skies were grave or gay—
The old, old year and I.
Now, in the hush of midnight, silently
It comes and softly whispers unto me:
"Good-by, good-by."

Old year, so many blessings you have brought;
So many glad, sweet lessons you have taught;
And yet so much of pain!
Days, both of joy and grief, you gave to me—
Sweet songs of interwoven harmony.
With many a minor strain.

Old year, could I recall so many a day
You gladly gave, would I not haste to say
Sweet words I left unsaid!
But what avails it now that I should weep?
Since those they would have gladdened are asleep
In cities of the dead!

Old year, I will be strong; I will not grieve;
But in the silence of the past will leave
Every regret and tear;
And, looking upward, trustingly will say:
God give me strength and hope for every day
Within the glad new year.

For ere the shadows of the night are flown;
Before me stands a hopeful, radiant one—
So I both smile and sigh
While welcoming the year so glad and new;
And, looking backward, whisper unto you:
"Old year, good-by, good-by."

PINKHAM'S VIGILS.

IT was a jolly house-party at Cliveden during the holidays that winter. Cliveden was not an ancestral hall. It was merely the country-seat of Joshua Warren, capitalist, who had built it just three years previously, and it owned neither a ghost nor a gallery of solemn-visaged ancestors. As a matter of fact, Mr. Warren, albeit a quiet man, and one not given to boasting, was rather proud of the fact that he had neither a pedigree nor a family skeleton to keep him awake nights. His principal desire, now that he had made his fortune, was to enjoy life and to make those about him happy without worrying his head about genealogical trees or ways and means of forcing himself into the "upper ten." On these points his wife and their only daughter, Madge, agreed with him—and being agreed, they succeeded in making the most of life. They were jolly entertainers, and always had a houseful, more or less, of company, usually a lot of young people, whom they preferred as being more likely to make things lively; and during these particular holidays they were housing at least a dozen young folks, on account of Madge, who was to be married in the middle of January to Will Braden.

There were all kinds of jolly times during that closing fortnight of the old year. The sleighing was faultless, there were lots of social festivities at Cliveden and neighboring houses, and there was every opportunity in the world to drive dull care away—yet Will Braden, despite his approaching marriage with quite the sweetest girl in the world, was unhappy. Not all the time; for occasionally Madge would devote to him an entire five minutes, all at once, thereby filling him with ecstacy—after which, alas! she would neglect him for hours together to attend to her duties as hostess, whereupon he was plunged into despair, and became gloomy and sullen, much to the amusement of all the rest, who called him "Hamlet," behind his back, and cracked jokes about "green-eyed monsters," and so on, to the mystification of Mrs. Warren, who earnestly insisted that "poor, dear Willie's" eyes were not green, but hazel.

But there was no doubt that Will was jealous, just as most young men are likely to be when the attentions of the adored one are demanded in other quarters, even though by the laws of hospitality. He told himself he didn't mind it, but he did. What galled him particularly was the presence of that pedigreed prig from Philadelphia, Mr. Martindale, whom he had long suspected of a speaking affection for Madge, who, by the way, was particularly pleasant to him, not to say somewhat confidential with him. For, at least a half dozen times, Will had seen them, apart from the rest, talking in guarded tones about something or other, and at these times both had looked very serious. It was getting past endurance, decided Mr. Braden, and he proposed to put a stop to it. So when they returned from their sleighing party, on New Year's eve, he drew Madge, who had seemed to be flirting desperately all the evening with Martindale, into a recess in the hall, where he proceeded to protest with much vigor against the treatment accorded him.

Madge laughed merrily, then pretended to be offended. "Don't be an idiot, Will," she said, sharply. "I think I know what I'm about."

"You know nothing of the sort, or else you don't care!" declared Will, with some heat. "It seems to me I am entitled to some consideration, instead of which you do your best to make me feel badly and to make a laughing-stock of me. Darling," he went on, more gently, "this is the last year of our single lives. Can't we watch it out and the new one in just by ourselves, since the New Year means so much to us both?"

Madge was touched, but for some inscrutable reason did not choose to let him see it just then. "Don't be a 'spoon,' Will," she answered, pettishly. "We've all our lives to be 'spooney' in, and, besides, I have other obligations." She turned and left him, regardless of the pleading, reproachful eyes that she knew were following her, and for the rest of the evening she hardly noticed him at all. Indeed, he kept out of the way as much as possible, for all this merriment was to him, in his present mood, gall and wormwood.

He had just returned from a lonely smoke in the library, and, somewhat soothed, was returning to join the others, who were gathering about the big fireplace in what good Mrs. Warren designated as the "sittin'-room," to observe that time-honored custom of watching the Old Year out and the New Year in. He told himself, sentimentally, that he would quietly take a seat at Madge's side, gain surreptitious possession of her hand, and thus they would enter upon the New Year together.

But Madge was not in the group about the fireplace, nor was she in the room; and, even as he looked, the offensively handsome and aristocratic Martindale rose quietly and made his exit through the other door. For a moment Braden stood dazed—then, with jealous intuition he turned and made his way to the conservatory, and there, not ten feet from the door, he recognized the figure of Martindale. But the latter did not see nor hear the eavesdropper. He was busy kissing the willing lips of some one in feminine attire whose face could not be seen, but whose dress and figure, in the dim light, looked only too familiar to poor Braden. Utterly crushed, the latter turned silently and hastened up to his room.

"Where's Will?" some one asked, suddenly, when New Year's greetings had been exchanged and the merriment had subsided to some extent. No one present had seen him, and Mr. Warren interrogated the servants.

"No, sir, 'e hain't in 'is room, sir, Mr. Braden hain't," said Alfred, the butler. "Hi saw 'im go hout the front door habout a hour hago, sir. Yes, sir, 'e 'ad 'is 'at an' coat on, sir."

It seemed very strange, indeed, until Mr. Warren, who had gone to his study for a good-night smoke, found on his desk a note from Will. In it the young man begged forgiveness for thus abruptly taking his departure, intimated that Madge would doubtless explain and requested that his luggage be forwarded to him at Philadelphia. That was all.

"The young scoundrel!" stormed Papa Warren, as, at a most unseemly hour, he prepared to retire, "to go off like that when—confound it! I suppose my poor little girl will cry her eyes out, but she's well rid of him, just the same!" Which is a way parents have of trying to console themselves in such cases.

"WE HAVE ALL OUR LIVES TO BE SPOONEY."

Near the end of the one street in a little western prairie town stood a tiny one-story frame building containing two rooms. In front of it two weather-beaten tin "shingles" swung and rattled in the winter winds, making doleful music for the occupants of the "shack" to listen to in bad weather. On one of these signs was painted: "W. A. Braden, J. P." and on the other "John Pinkham, Constable."

It was a bleak December afternoon, rapidly merging into dusk, when Mr. John Pinkham emerged from the heat and tobacco smoke of the stuffy little office into the frosty outside air. He was a ruddy, corpulent man, with good-humored eyes and a ready laugh that could, it was claimed, be heard all over the township. But this evening he looked serious and neglected to whistle, as usual, on his way up the street.

He walked into the office of the "hotel," and with a profound sigh seated himself by the fire, all by himself. Presently Birch Hunter, the landlord, entered with a supply of firewood.

"Hullo, John!"

"Hullo, Birch!"

Hunter busied himself about the stove for a few minutes, then looked up suddenly and asked:

"Comin' up t' th' New Year's ball, I reckon, John?"

Pinkham shook his head and sighed, ponderously: "Nope. I got t' keep wigil ag'in t'-night."

Hunter nodded understandingly. "Jedge havin' one o' his spells?"

"Yep. Wuss'n ever, this time. Even tells me, awhile ago, he wish't I'd git out an' leave 'im alone."

"I'd do it, then," said the landlord, warmly. "'Tain't right f'r you t' give up all these yere New Year's goin's on jes' t' watch him."

Pinkham shook his head again.

"'I got a charge t' keep,'" he quoted, somewhat uncertainly. "F'r three s'ceedin' year, Birch, I've kep' this yere New Year's vigil t' keep th' jedge fr'm doin' 'isself any harm in one o' them blue spells; an' I propose to keep them wigils jest 's long 's 'e has them spells."

Hunter shook his head deprecatingly. He could not understand why John should give up his enjoyment of the season to watch another who had annual "blue spells." "Ef 'e wants t' git away with 'imself John can't help it—none whatever," he reasoned. But he knew there was no use arguing with the constable, who, as a matter of fact, got not a little mournful satisfaction out of his martyrdom.

"He's wuss'n ever, this time," he repeated. "Sets by th' hour starin' at nothin' an' mutterin', then gits up an goes walkin', walkin' up an' down an' mutterin' some more. I'm goin' t' watch 'im t'-night ef 'e likes it 'r not. Say, tell th' women t' put up 'is supper in a basket, an' I'll take it when I go back. Th' judge hain't et all day."

As Pinkham approached the office with Braden's supper, he almost collided with the station agent, who, coatless and hatless, was running madly up the street.

"Hurry!" he panted. "Get the doctor, quick! Get—"

"Here, what's up?" demanded Pinkham.

"Wild engine comin' down from Hilton—just got word. No. 4 already left Chapelle—sent Jim to flag 'er, but no use—they're bound to meet about here. If it wasn't for them cars—" The agent pointed with a sob toward a line of box-cars on the side track—"we might save 'em. But—" It was all over so quickly that none of the citizens had time to reach the scene of the collision before it occurred. The flagged express halted and had started to back to Chapelle, but it was too late. The wild engine bore down upon it too swiftly.

Fortunately, no one was killed, despite the completeness of the wreck, and but few persons were injured. These were at once taken to houses near the track, to be cared for, while the rest went to the Hotel Hunter.

Will Braden, stalking gloomily up and down the floor of the room occupied jointly by himself and Pinkham, heard not a sound, until the door was suddenly thrown open and Pinkham and some one else entered, supporting an elderly man who had been cut about the head. Behind them came two or three other persons, and one of these, a pretty young woman, halted just at the threshold with a wild cry:

"Will!"

"Madge!"

Then she fainted in his arms, and all was confusion for a time.

"Tell ye what," chuckled John Pinkham to his crony, Hunter, as they sat by the stove in the hotel office the next night recounting the events of the previous evening, "but ye jest ought t' see how chirked up th' jedge is! Say, 'twas better'n a play. In we comes, carryin' th' ol' gent, th' gyurl an' 'er ma right behind, an' th' jedge turns on us all of a sudden like 'e'd bite our heads off. Then th' gyurl an' him both screeches, an' she falls over onto 'is neck like she was there t' stay—an' she is' so t' speak.

"Ye see, it was girl-trouble, jest like I allus allowed. Th' jedge, he was jealous, an,' one night, when he thinks 'e sees another feller makin' love to 'er, he up an' slides, 'thout sayin' a word. Come to find out, twas 'er cousin th' feller was makin' love to, an' they gits married later. Wa-al," he concluded, in a contented voice, "I'm glad them wigils is over, an' I c'n go an' shake a foot wi' th' rest of ye next year. Them wigils o' mine was a sore trial, Birch, a sore trial."

Down at the little shack Will and Madge, hand in hand, with the old folks looking on approvingly, had kept their own New Year vigil, just as they had expected to do on that night gone by.

LESTER KETCHUM.

WHY HE LIKED THE PRACTICE.

"It's too bad," said Willie Wishington, "that the good old custom of making calls on New Year's day is slowly but surely dying out."

"Do you like the practice?"

"Verwy much. When you cawn't think of anything else, you can say: 'Happy New Year,' and it's the only time when I evah feel weally at home as a conversationalist." — Washington Star.

A Curious Superstition.

In Scotland there is a superstition that the complexion of the first caller on New Year's day indicates the good or ill-fortune to befall the house during the following year. If the caller is a blonde, the indication is favorable for good luck; if a brunette, the contrary. So much confidence is placed in the indication by some persons that families have been known to have a blonde ready at the door to walk in the moment after the clock strikes 12.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

Youthful Highwaymen.

Duluth has had an experience with youthful highwaymen. Fred Holland 13 years old, and John Jordan, 11 years old, were arrested on the charge of having held up Bazie McIntyre, a stenographer, two weeks ago, and robbing her of her pocketbook. Miss McIntyre was on her way home from the theater and having missed her car walked alone from Second avenue East to Tenth avenue. At that point and First street the two boys, who had followed her, took her pocket book from and ran. Since then the detectives have been working on the case and obtained a clue involving the younger boy. When arrested he confessed his guilt and implicated young Holland. The latter firmly denies the charge.

Bran for Germany.

The Pillsbury-Washburn company shipped 25 cars of bran out over the Minneapolis & St. Louis for Germany. It is rather unusual to consign bran to foreign ports, but Eichenburg & Co., of Hamburg, wanted some of the article to feed German stock, and so placed an order through Andrews & Co. The bran was taken out by a special freight, and will be transferred to the steamer at Newport News. The destination of the trainload will be well advertised, for the cars were covered with banners stating to whom consigned and the purpose for which the shipment will be sent across the briny.

An Old Warrior.

Obegwoodanier, a once noted Chippewa brave and warrior and member of the counsel of sachems of the nation, died at Pine Point at a very advanced age. In the early days of Indian chivalry and warfare he became noted for his daring and doughty prowess on the warpath against the Sioux, their once inveterate foes, and many a Sioux warrior bit the dust, the victims of the unerring aim with the bow and arrow and flint lock. He was an oracle in the grand medicine lodge and had attained the coveted degree of the white dog in that sacred order.

Want a Receiver.

Application was made for a receiver for the Inman tug line, at Duluth. The affairs of the line are in a sadly mixed condition. The fleet is mortgaged for $90,000, and a number of the boats have been libelled for fuel bills, repair bills and other claims, while labor claims amounting, it is estimated, to $5,000, are unpaid. Inman has been in the towing business many years, and until the Singer line entered the field, had a monopoly of the vessel towing business. The tug war in large part is responsible.

A Defeated Proposition.

The state canvassing board decided against counting the returns of the towns of Higdens and Woodside in Polk county, cast upon the proposition to create the new county of Garfield. The board refused to throw out the returns, as argued by counsel previously, and will canvass the returns as made by the county canvassing board. According to this ruling the proposition to create Garfield county will stand defeated by five votes.

What the Railroads Paid.

The total amount of taxes on gross earnings of railroads for the year ending Dec. 31, 1895, certified by the commission to the state auditor, was $1,009,224.40; for the previous year the taxes $840,109.48, showing an increase for 1895 over 1894 of $169,114.92 in taxes. The gross earnings of the roads for the entire year ending Dec. 31, in 1895, were $36,218,978.53, being an increase over the previous year of $5,745,612.53.

Caught in the Act.

Frank Graves, of Mankato, was caught in the act of burglarizing Kron's department store at midnight. He tried to escape, but could not, and hid in a pile of carpets, where he feigned drunkenness. Graves was lodged in jail, and will answer the charge of burglary. He formerly lived in Minneapolis, where his wife died last spring. The family bore rather a bad reputation.

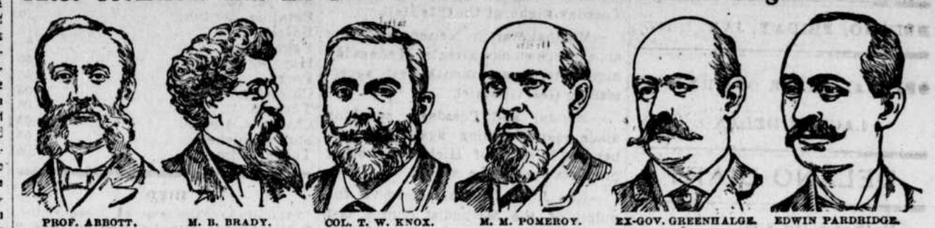
AMONG THE DEAD OF THE YEAR.

These Prominent Men All Died of that Great Modern Curse—Bright's Disease.



PROF. ABBOTT. M. B. BRADY. COL. T. W. KNOX. M. M. POMEROY. EX-GOV. GREENHALGE. EDWIN PARDRIDGE.

The year just closed has furnished an alarming array of prominent men who have died of Bright's disease of the kidneys. The number includes Professor Austin Abbott, the great jurist and author of law books; M. B. Brady, the famous photographer; Col. Thos. W. Knox, the author of the "Boy Travellers"; Mark M. Pomeroy, the well-known editor; Mr. Edwin Pardridge, the prominent Chicago merchant, and ex-Governor Greenhalge, of Massachusetts.

If "death loves a shining mark," it is also certain that Bright's disease finds its victims among the prominent as well as among the millions of people who are suffering with it to-day, and yet do not realize this serious fact.

There are men and women in every portion of America who feel out of sorts and who do not realize what it is that affects them. They may have peculiar pains in various parts of the body, strange lassitude, a bad taste in the mouth, pains in the back and about the loins, and a general irregularity of the system.

These things mean Bright's Disease in some one of its various stages, and no man or woman is safe who has them.

This terrible disease was once considered incurable. Eminent doctors so declared, but constant scientific and chemical experiments resulted in a discovery, which is an absolute cure for Bright's disease, even in its advanced stages. It is the one and only known remedy for this terrible complaint; its name is Warner's Safe Cure.

It is simply marvelous how many people are to-day kept in perfect health and strength through its use. It has a pleasing, soothing and quieting effect upon the kidneys and all adjacent organs. It relieves promptly, puts the system in a condition of health, and substitutes happiness for misery. Testimonials of its great power could be furnished by the thousands, but all intelligent men and women, as well as the medical profession, know its great power and the grand work it is doing in the world.

QUICK PROFITS.

A Boy's Improvement on the Usual Programme in Fairy Stories.

"Business" is the watchword of the day and the small boy is developing on that line with a rapidity which astonishes the previous generation. But the practical side of his nature has not obscured the poetry of childhood. The fairy tale, says the Washington Star, is as potent as ever, and there was a smile of pleasure on the face of the lad who remarked at breakfast:

"I had a beautiful dream last night."

"What was it?" his father asked.

"I thought I was out in the woods and I saw a most gorgeously dressed lady coming toward me."

"That is a good deal like some of the stories that you have been reading."

"Yes. It doesn't get very different until the end. I knew by her looks that she was the fairy queen, and I made up my mind that I wasn't going to lose chances like some of the boys in story books, who didn't know a good chance when they saw it."

"Did she offer you three wishes?"

"Yes. And I called to mind how she sometimes took advantage of a mortal's being excited and nervous when he wished in order to make him waste his opportunities and have a good laugh at him. So when she said: 'Little boy, I'll give you three wishes,' I didn't jump at the chance. I said: 'Will you give me whatever I ask for?' She answered: 'Yes; you may have three wishes.'"

"What did you do?"

"I wished for four."

SHE CARRIES THE MAIL.

Plucky Ida Minton and Her Life in the Mountains.

The road from Castlow to Andersonville is through one of the roughest regions of Kentucky, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. Robberies are frequent, and many a brave man has hesitated and looked well to his gun before entering on the trip. To Mrs. Minton, however, the highway has no terrors. She enjoys the unique distinction of being probably the only female mail-carrier in Uncle Sam's service who rides horseback fearlessly through the forests with her pouch, which contains the missives which are the only means of communication with the world at large to the residents of Andersonville.

She is a typical Kentucky mountain girl, active, strong, fearless and very intelligent. She is an excellent horsewoman. No animal is too high spirited for her, nor does she need help in mounting and dismounting. With the mail pouch thrown across the pommel of her saddle, she rides fearlessly along the lonely highway, and it is safe to say that anyone interfering with Uncle Sam's mail would have to be a better and quicker shot than the ordinary man, or very well mounted, to stop the mail.

Mrs. Minton has been married two years. It was from her own inclination to help earn money that she took the contract to carry the mails for three years. She has now completed eight months of her contract.

THE PLEBEIAN PEANUT.

A Valuable Addition to Meat Dressings and Soups.

The peanut, which for so many years has been the popular feature of the country fair and the circus, is now creeping into prominence. Doctors have found that the peanut is an article of food, "rich in albumen, of which it contains 50 per cent.," and are now recommending them as a valuable addition to the diet in the form of soups, purees and mush. The following are some of the ways in which they may be used:

Peanuts rolled fine and added to the bread stuffing for ducks is a great addition and greatly improves it. Make a mayonnaise dressing, mash the peanuts fine, and stir them in thickly and spread between thin slices of bread as a sandwich; or plain buttered bread may be sprinkled lightly with the nuts. They may also be finely chopped and eaten with milk. A very good soup may be made of peanuts by boiling and mashing. The Chinese boil peanuts, roll them fine, mold them in a dough, and bake. Many other ways may be discovered by the contriving housewife for the use of this hitherto despised article of diet.

Mushroom Society.

A society for the study of mushrooms has been organized in Philadelphia. It will meet every two weeks, and members will read papers on such topics as "Mushrooms That Have Helped Me." The organizers say that there are about 235 edible kinds of mushrooms to be found around Philadelphia, and that tons of the delicious food go to waste, simply because people have a horror of what are known as toadstools, only four kinds of which are really poisonous.

5,904,900,000,000 Descendants.

Every known plant is occasionally inhabited by its own peculiar aphis or plant louse. These curious insects breed with wonderful rapidity—a French naturalist proving that a pair of them will, within six weeks, produce five generations, or a grand total of 5,904,900,000,000 descendants.

One Secret of Longevity.

Those anxious to prolong this rapid transitory existence of ours beyond the average span, should foster his digestion, negatively by abstaining from indiscretions in diet, and affirmatively by the use of that peerless stomachic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, when he experiences symptoms of indigestion. The impairment of the digestive function is fatal to vigor. Subdue with the Bitters, also, fever and ague, biliousness and constipation.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, JAN. 1, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Dr. Neyen Jan. 8 & 10.

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—School will begin Monday January 4, 1897.

—Thuesday was warm and foggy, reminding people of Tennessee weather.

—Simon Weldele moved into the Bruggeman building corner R.R. Ave. and River St. next morning after the fire.

—The gallery under the Maples has been painted green. Mr. Carver now has a manopoly on the picture business being the only one left in town.

—There will likely be some brick buildings built on River street in the spring, to take the place of some that were recently burned.

—Since the nice weather and good sleighing came the price of wood went down. The coal barrons can't get up a corner on the weather if they can on the fuel.

—Justice Walter heard Fred Adicks Jr. with O. L. Billings for attorney and Gotlieb Fautsch with M. A. O'Hair attorney argue over athreshing settlement, on Wednesday.

—Santa Claus demolished Prof. Bohn's stock of old chairs and replaced them with a bran new set of high backs, and the Professor is growing prouder than ever.

—George P. Schaffer moved what goods were saved from his stock, into the rear end of Charle's Eppels building on Bridge and River street and opened up for bussness soon after the fire. Geo. is a rustler and proposes to loose no time.

—Several people in this vicinity were more or less intrested in the Bank of Minnesota, of St. Paul, which closed its doors the other day. They have had there "confidence" considerably shaken, and may turn out in favor of 16 to 1, as being a "sounder currency".

—All births and deaths must be reported to the Health Officer in the Village, or the Town Clerk in the country, before ten days, after their occurance. There is a fine attached to those neglecting to do so. Physicians, relatives and others should be on their gaurd.

—Health officer Catlin made the annual inspection of the village lockup, in accordance with law, on Wednesday. He reports that the room needs sweeping; the bed should be put onto a bedstead instead of being on the floor; that the mattress and pillow are dirty. If people are to be confined in jail they should have things respectable at least. The general appearance is that the jail is seldom used and its condition and appearance little cared for.

—The Lyndale and Minnetrista Literary Societies ware to have a joint discussion on Wednesday this week on the financial question. The Lyndale society for 1. There is nothing like looking up these important questions and throughly understanding them, between elections then people will when the time comes to vote as they believe, and they will know what they do believe themselves, without waiting for some one to come around and tell them how they must vote to save the party and never mind the country.

—F. H. Lindsley says he had a little experience the other evening as he came home from Minneapolis. He had a market basket filled with articles purchased in the city and as he went into the car he left it near the door, but kept an eye on it from his seat near the middle of the car. At Long Lake a six footer got up to leave the car and Mr. L. discovered that he carried his market basket. Mr. L. made for the door and told the man that he was carrying off his basket. The man simply said "Well take it then", and surrendered it to its owner. It was rather a narrow escape all around.

—At three o'clock Wednesday morning the fire bell rang out and called the sleeping denizens of Delano to their windows to behold a splendid sight. The whole town was lit up and the light reflected from the snow looked like a huge red fire illumination. People hustled to River Street from whence the flames leaped high in the air. There they found W. R. Johns' store nearly burned to the ground. The flames spread each way and soon in spite of the fire companies who had three streams on, Caspar Janikulas' Place, Simon Weldele's Senate, and George P. Schaffer's store were a heap of burning embers. At six o'clock the alarm was again given and the timely appearance of a sufficient force saved John B. Plattner's brick store which stood next to the fire. A hole was burned in the floor around the oil tank and a couple of hundred dollars damage from fire and water was Mr. P's. share in the conflagration.

INSURANCE.

Geo. P. Schaffer, store, insurance $4000, on stock.

Simon Weldelee, saloon, insurance $700 on two buildings and stock.

W. R. Johns, store, $900.

Casper Janikula, $1800 on building household goods and saloon.

—The Watertown Creamery shipped a consignment of butter via Delano to the Cities Wednesday.

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Don't forget the Literary Society Tuesday night, at the City Hall.

—Marshal Martin Nelson made his appearance on our streets Wednesday night after several months rest, superseeding Geo. Goodrick.

—Monday and Tuesday's sunshine made poor sleighing again, December has, in spite of Hick's and other prophets been a fine month.

—Rev. J. W. Powell occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church last Sunday Morning. Mr. Powell was formerly pastor of the Methodist church in this city.—St. Peter Free Press.

—Oats, corn, wheat, wood, hay or anything goes now for trade, wherever people can get rid of it. Such currency is sometimes a little inconvenient but it beats "confidence" all to pieces now.

—Never put off till tomorrow what you can do to-day." To-day, the first of the New Year, is a good time to make your good resolves; and be sure not to fail to resolve to keep the resolves for at least one year.

—The Executive Committee of the Delano Literary Society met Wednesday evening and made a splendid programme for Tuesday evening Jan. 5. A big meeting is expected on that occasion after resting through the holidays.

—Several cases of fever, colds, sore throat, etc., etc., have occurred recently among Delano children. Patents should be on their guard. People visiting during holidays from a distance may bring diphtheria or other contagious disease.

—Owing to the electric light wires being broken by the fire and by the moving of Babb's new kitchen, several Delaneites had to resurrect their old kerosene lamps Wednesday evening. Mr. Muckey got them going Thursday all right.

—Such mild winter weather as we have had for a few weeks causes many old settlers to remark on how our climate has changed: and wonder if the numerous connections by rail with the seaboards in either direction has any thing to do with it; or if the heat and smoke given off from the engines of the Great Northern, alone are responsible for our summer like atmesphere in December.

In selecting an agricultural paper one should be taken whose teachings will be applicable to our climatic conditions. Papers published in the east while ably edited and very valuable for their localities and constituency, are of doubtful value to Minnesota, the Dakotas, Western Wisconsin, Northern Iowa and Nebraska. Farm Stock and Home, Minneapolis, Minn., is an agricultural journal that fills all the requirements of the northwestern farmer. It is published the first and fifteenth of each month, consists of from 16 to 24 pages and its regular price is but fifty cents per year. However by a special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer it with the BUFFALO GAZETTE one year for $1.30

NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

BY MRS. J. E. AKERS.

Softly, speak softly, the old-year is dying,
Round his couch gather with reverent tread,
Solemnly list to his last weary sighing,
Toll the bell sadly: the old year is dead.
Gone, with its sunshine and its showers,
Its luscious fruits and its fragrant flowers,
Its springtime beauty and Summer's glow,
Its autumn's harvest and winters snow;
Leaving deep traces of sorrow and care
On the faces of many that joy used to wear.
But while some to the dregs drank life's bitterest cup,
To others with gladness and joy 'twas filled up;
There were happy meetings and sad farewells,
There were wedding flowers and funeral knells
Honor's laurels and peans of fame,
There were moans of anguish and signs of shame:
All passions and powers, all deads and thoughts,
While the old year tarried by men were wrought:
But his days are numbered, his moments fled,
Toll the bell sadly, the old year is dead.
Mearrily ring out the New Year bells
On the frosty air, how their Music swells,
Sending a "Happy New Year" to all
To the rich and the poor, to the great and the small,
And royally will we welcome him here,
With happy greetings and right good cheer.
We know that spring time's buns and leaves,
And Summers's flowers and autumn's sheaves,
Will come again, and the stars by night
Will bloom in the blue sky like jewls of light:
The same bright sun will illumine our day,
The same fair moon light at midnight our way;
And man the great lord of creation, will still
His place in the scale of intelligence fill;
For a premium, wisdom and folly will drive.
Evil and good for mastery strive:
Virtue and infamy stalk over the earth
Just as they have since old Time had his birth:
All creeds and all maxims, all hopes and all fears,
Will be borne on the waves of the passing year.
And now that the new year to us has been given,
With hours unnumbered for each to improve:
May our good deeds and words be a handful of leaven, diffusing its life through the nation in love.
Let us in the year's history write deeds of denial,
Write words gentle spoken when aching hearts bled,
Write patience and love midst temptations and trial,
Write poverty's children clothed, sheltered and fed.
Our deeds may not be made immortal in story
But miles in the great day, their measure will tell,
And who would not give a whole age of earth's glory
To know that his life work was surley done well.

HAMLINE Dec. 31. 1896. —Interurban.

ONE of the worst blizzards of the season prevailed over the Northwest Sunday and Monday, stopping trains and suspending business generally.

THE banking mains in St. Paul is not so great as it used to be. The Germania and the Allemania both closed their doors this week.

MR. HAMMOND the vice president of the Bank of Illinois that recently failed and who was considered responsible for the failure, is supposed to have suicided by jumping into Lake Michigan.

A ST. CLOUD jury gave a verdict for $5000, damages to Mrs. Julia Guthrie for the death of her husband caused by being run over by a Great Northern engine. The R.R. will of course appeal to the Supreme Court.

SINCE St. Paul gave up her notion of building a Parthenon of ice the weather seems to have been making up for all dificiencies in the way of blizzard snow and cold. St. Paul don't hit things right; not if she wants an ice Parthenon.

THE Legislature is once more in session, and the city dailies are giving the usual number of cuts of I. Donnelly. A man that can so meekly live through the abuse and vilification of the daily press of the twin cities as Mr. Donnelly has certainly must be great; or such abuse has been so overdone as to have lost its sting.

THE Germania Bank, of St. Paul, joined the lengthening list of suspended banks, on Monday. The directors attended to the business of appointing an assignee themselves without consulting the State Bank Examiner, so the dailies say. But then Mr. Kenyon was busy in Minneapolis with busted banks, and he can't keep up with the rapidly increasing number. Perhaps it would be well to appoint another assistant or two for the Bank examiner unless England soon consents to allow the United States to have bimetallism.

IF laws that become such by a vote of the people at the last election are to be considered as having gone into effect as soon as the polls were closed or the vote counted, how about the law creating a board of pardons? And would Governor Clough's pardon of Phil Scheig and Mrs. Anna Smith just before Christmas be legal?

THE County Commissioners of Anoka county, according to a Minneapolis Times Special, on Jan. 6: by a vote of four to one elected John Tierney, democrat, sheriff. That settles the question of the tie vote receiyed by the canidates. It was a tight squeeze but the goods have been delivered, and Anoka is safely in the list of Republican counties with a democratic sheriff. We don't know, but think he is certainly a gold standard man.

DR. S. G. SMITH, the member of the commission for locating the Fourth Hospital for Insane is considerably conceited when he undertakes to tell the Commission that Chaska is the place. Had he visited Delano with the rest of the board possibly he would have appreciated our location. Just how he knows so well without examining all the sites that Chaska is so superior is a mistery to many. Delano is the proper place on many accounts.

Senator Culkin Defines not a Republican.

In the course of a discussion in the State Senate Republican Caucus as to whether or not Senator Morgan should vote Senator Culkin, of Wright, is reported by the Globe to have fired the following bot shot: "Senator Culkin concurred in the views expressed by Senator Collister, he said Senator Morgan was not a republican, according to his own statement, as he still believes in the free coinage at 16 to 1. He wanted the burden of the discussion left with Senator Morgan and in accordance with this idea he moved to lay the resolution on the table."

The resolution in question was by Senator Stevens to invite Senator Morgan to a seat in the caucus, and was made after a written statment read by Senator Morgan that he did not support the candidates nominated at St. Louis but supported Bryan and Sewall. He said "Like the other members of the Senate, I was elected upon a platform adopted by the Republican state convention in 1894, that declared in plain terms that 'The republican party believes in bimetallism and that the restoration of silver as ultimate money to the currency of the world is absolutely necessary for business prosperity, proper rates of wages and the welfare of the people.' In my judgment the declaration thus made was true then, and is true today; and so believing, I declined to support the declaration of the national republican platform that until an 'international agreement with the leading commercial nations can be obtained, the existing gold standard must be preserved.'"

Mr. Morgan further said he as a silver republican believed in the immediate re-establishment of bimetallism, and the enforcement of a vigorous protective tariff policy.

Yet Mr. Culkin who was elected Senator on the same platform as Mr. Morgan couldn't resist the temptation to prove his party fealty by getting up and telling the caucus that "Senator Morgan was not a republican", according to his own statement, as he still believed in free coinage at 16 to 1."

According to Mr. Culkin then he don't believe in the platform of the Republican party of 1894, under which he was elected Senator. Why don't he resign then? Or has the Republican party rerlly changed as Charley Towne claimed it had?

Prohibition a Success.

Slayton Gazette: Prohibition in Slayton has been a success the past year, a greater success than the most ardent anti-saloonist in the place had hoped for. This is in a large measure due to the vigorous measures taken against those that were first found under the influence of liquor after the saloons closed and also to the knowledge that if any of the boys were caught violating the liquor laws they would be shure to go to jail if their case ever got into the district court. A number of those that were strongly in favor of license last spring have seen the good results of no license, and have changed their views of the question. —Pioneer Press.

Why are banks failing every day? Because under the gold standard values of property have gone down, until the bank funds, which are loaned upon the security of one or another form of property, have become impossible of collection because of poor security. Nothing can be plainer. The borrower, under the constant shrinkage of values, finally finds his property so reduced in value that it will not sell for enough to pay his debts. The bank then is obliged to take it, and presently finds itself loaded up with a lot of unsalable property as assets. Then comes the failure.—Litchfield Independent.

Duluth Herald: An "honest money" conference is to be held at Indianapolis on Jan. 12. Why is it thus? Did not "honest money," triumph at the polls last November? Why then have a conference? Is not congress competent to provide the desired legislation?

Sunday Times: Referring to the talk of a new political party, The Times is moved to remark that the kind of party this country wants is one that will be in touch with plain people who do not seek office, who attend to their business constantly and to the adjacent saloons rarely; and who fear God and not any political boss. The bulk of voters in both the great parties is composed of such men, and while the proportion is larger in one party than in the other, it is lage enough in either to take control if it only knew how to handle the ropes.

A NEW RECUIT.

From the Minneapolis Tribune.

"I used to consider the Salvation Army a good deal of a nuisance," said a Woodbridge street commission merchant, "and have even thought it the duty of the authorities to prohibit their noisy and unmusical demonstrations on the street. But never again. Why? I'll tell you. Christmas day I was called to a part of town that led me through Cadillac Square, and seeing a crowd on the opposite sidewalk I crossed over, drawn by the curiosity that a crowd usually stirs in an average man. Say, maybe I'm ignorant and don't know much of the world outside of my own stamping ground, but ten minuites before I'd have bet fifteen dollars against a bushel of next year's potatoes that such proverty didn't exist anywhere, let alone in Detroit. Pitiful? Worse, almost criminal. Their must have been several hundred, mostly women and children, huddled together waiting for a door to open. Clothing mostly rags, and few of them had enough to keep them from shivering in the raw air. Misery? Heavens man you never saw such wretchedness. There wasn't a smile in the crowd, though they were waiting, as I learned, for a Christmas entertainment.

"My curiosity was strong enough to keep me there till they went in, and I followed. And then I saw it all. The Salvation Army had invited these poor folks to a little Christmas cheer, with some substantials thrown in, and I tell you no organization ever did a finer thing. The papers all had accounts of it, but none of them, I believe, caught that outside scene, with many of the little tots crying because half frozen for the want of enough covering. They did justice to the brighter scene inside, though. It was genuine charity and, if I am a judge, simon pure religion: and you can't say so to often.

"However the Salvation Army may toot their horns and pound their drums all they want, so far as I am concerned, and I'll cut any man's acquaintance who says a word against them."—Detroit Free Press.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 1, 1897.

No President, not even Andy Johnson, ever held a New Year reception that was attended by fewer Senators and Representatives than were at the White House today. The President gave no sign indicating that he noticed their absence, but it is nevertheless certain that he did. Otherwise the reception was a grand success. Mrs. Cleveland never looked better, the cortege of lady assistance never made a more gorgeous showing and the army, navy and marine officers were out in force in spick and span new uniforms with gold lace and brass buttons galore.

The Cuban question is awaiting the reassembling of Congress, next week, although there are daily, almost hourly, reports of steps being taken either in Spain or by Gen. Weyler, or by Sec. Olney and the Spanish Minister which will result in placing it where there will be no occasion for congress to act upon it. That most of these rumors are originated by persons who are either friendly toward Spain or at least opposed to any action by the present Congress is generally believed in Washington. The oppinion is growing that they will be successful, at least to the extent of postponing action until after McKinley assumes office. In fact, that purpose was pratically accomplished when the republican leaders of the House decided that nothing should be done.

The Democratic National Committee makes no secret of using all the influence it can command towards bringing about the reelection of Senator Dubois, of Idaho, who is being opposed by Hanna and his crowd, because he followed his convictions and supported the democratic platform and ticket in the late campaign, and because they think that his defeat would result in frightening other silver Senators into continuing to act with the republican party. Most democrats who know the active part Dubios took in fighting for Bryan endorse Senator Blackburn's language—"We owe Dubois a debt of gratitude, and nothing should be allowed to stand in the way of its settlement. It is a debt of honor, and, like all debts of honor, should be payed in advance of all other obligations."

Gen. Wheeler, of Ala., one of the democratic members of the House committee on Ways and Means who is carefully attending the tariff hearings now in progress, although he knows that he and his democratic colleagues will not be allowed to have any hand in making the tariff bill, is always emphatic in speech and often dramatic. Nobody was surprised, therefore, when Mr. W. R. Craig, of Vicksburg, Miss., as the representative of the cotton growers of the Mississippi Valley, appeared before the Committee and asked that a duty of 3 cents a pound be put on Egyptian cotton, to see the wiry old soldier stiffen up and to hear him say: "The South would be selling its birthright for a mess of pottage to ask for this protection." Representative Payne thought to faze General Wheeler when he asked him, "What do you call its birthright?" Without turning a hair the Alabamian replied: "Free institutions, free trade, free everything."

Senator Call's term expires March 3, and the Florida legislature which will elect his successor does not meet until April, so that if McKinley calls the extra session together in March, Florida will for a time have only one Senator. According to a member of the Florida legislature, who is now in Washington, Senator Call will certainly be his own successor, notwithstanding the red hot fight which is being madeagainsi him. This gentleman says: "The only way that Senator Call can be defeated for reelection is to cede the State back to Spain or abolish the office. I am a member of the Farmer's Alliance and as a great majority of the members of the legislature are Farmers' Aliance men, and not lawyers, I know what I am talking about."

At a public meeting of the McKinley and Hobart Club of this city ex-Commissioner Douglass said that the club organization would be kept up for the purpose of supporting McKinley and Hobart in 1900. When a friend told Speaker Reed about that speech his only comment was "hum". Mr. Reed knows it isn't the ticket for 1900, but the offices of '97, that the "ex" and the other members of the club are worried about.

One thing has been made very clear by the first week of the tariff hearings. That is, that the men who have asked for higher duties, on the ground that their business under the present tariff is unprofitable, must have had a big surplus to draw upon. None of them looked like men engaged in unprofitable occupations. On the contrary to a man they appeared well-dressed, well-fed and prosperous, and if they haven't been making money they must have inherited money. They certainly didn't look like men who were "hard up".

McGary Again.

INDEPENDENCE, Minn., Jan. 5th '97.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE:—"The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider."

We have just entered upon another era or a New Year. But not under the most favorable circumstances as a nation. For a hundred and twenty years we have maintained our end as a nation, and stood at the head of all other nations of the world in improvements, trade, commerce, education, art and civilization, but it seems that under the present condition of things in some respects, we have become degenerated.

A half a century ago the man of brains was looked up to as the peer in the town, village or city where he lived, but now days it is the man who has large wealth who is chief among many thousands. And this is one thing that is bringing corruption into both church and state. Money now a days can buy virtue, life, liberty and property.

We read in the Holy Write that the love of money is the root of all evil (Not money itself but the love of it).

This country has just come out from under a very exciting political campaign, which was very hot and contentious and never was there a time in the history of our nation. When logical talk, sound argument and reason had so little weight against money and party prejudice. They have sown to the wind and by and by they will reap the whirlwind and now I believe many would be willing to go into the confessional box and there make atonement far their past sins. We read that there was a man called Moses who led the Children of Israel out of Egyptian bondage, and there was a vast army of fighting men beside women and children. This was undoubtedly brought about by the providence of God, and nothing is impossible with Him. But I cannot conceive how Mark Alonzo Hanna and his subordinates could lead over seven million strong men to the polls to vote, and have no Red Sea to cross either. Now if my friend who voted for single gold standard last fall will consult the statistics of the last census report, (which is not political but official) he will find that there is a bonded and mortgaged debt hanging over this country, big enough to sink it into oblivion should close in upon us. Then why was it that a few waspy silver tongued politicans could work so many of the rest of the people to vote against their own interest. We have the domain and the resources and all the material necessary to start a financial boom, but it can not be done on mere paper and assumption. The nation, the states, the cities, the villages and individuals, are too much involved. Realestate must first take a start, money must seak investment, labor must find work in order to make some money to pay his debts and support his family. What has become of the promises made to the poor laboring man last fall by the crafty politican that he would have plenty of work within 48 hours after McKinley's election,—has it come to pass? No but the reverse has come to pass. The man of money who voted for the single gold standard last fall took great pride in himself though, by so doing he would soon become a millionair, he saw in his night vissions collossal mansions stand up befor him thick as ghosts in a country graveyard. I would say to you my friend your anticipations will never materialize if you expect it to come about by a single gold standard, impoverishing the many to enrich the few. It must be remembered that the prosperity os any country rests upon the masses instead of the classes.

Last fall Bryan was called a babbler going around trying to stir up a sedition and strife. So was the Apostle Paul called a babbler but he had the true doctrine and made Felix tremble when brought before him. In two months more Cleveland will abdicate the throne and McKinley will be inaugurated standing on a single gold standard platform. No doubt there will be great demonstration at his inaugural and we hope it will be carried on with patriotism and civilty which no doubt it will. What we need most is some wise and just legislation for the common people.

The fellows on the other side keep telling us how bad we got beaten. We admit the fact. But my friends that is only a small part of the affair. The great question is what do you intend to do for your country when you are there. The worst for you is to come yet. We do not want any more tools, Cleveland has been a tool to fit any kind of business, but now days it is not popular for a man to have an opinion of his own. He must go according to the creed and the political prognosticators. They told us last fall there was a lack of confidence. But there is a lack of something greater than that. Their is a lack of Statesmanship, backbone and a will to work for country instead of party. The time has come when we are in need of a regenesis. There needs to be a cleaning out from center to circumferance. Such men as John Sherman have been there too long. They should be sent home. But Mr. Editor what has this got to do with our municipal corruption at our county seat (Minneapolis), and this seems to be the way public business is being done all over. By and by the end will come.

J. W. Bryan made a fine speech at the Jackson Day celebration held in Chicago last night. He thinks it a hard matter to keep bimetallists and gold standard people in the same ranks. He said the Democrats believe in a majority rule. People who support their own ticket ought not to be governed by a few who voted Republican.

There are now 70,000 postmasters in the United States, and it took $90,000,000 the last fiscal year to pay for the postal service. It comes high, but we must have it. The first year of Washington's administration we had 75 post offices, and the mail service cost $32,000 hard cash.

The secretary of state at Springfield, Ill., the other day recognized the corporate existence of the Central Verban Chemaliger Deutcher Soldaten Von Chicago and Umgegend, and the Sesko Scobodomysina Skola Vojta Naprstek, also of Chicago. And the next day a cold wave came.

There is no outlook more cheerless than that of the discharged convict who wishes to lead an honest life. His past hangs like lead upon his future. There is a similar institution in Philadelphia. England has 70 such homes and France 50.

The statement by a lecturer before the American Geographical society that there are 50,000,000 slaves in Africa is startling to those who had supposed that human slavery had almost died out. If a half million lives are sacrificed every year in the traffic, it seems time for the philanthropic societies of the world to rekindle the agitation, that has almost ceased in the mistaken belief that there is no fuel for the flame, for the entire abolition of human chattelhood.

An old post office inspector says: "Money never should be inclosed in letters. In the first place it is unnecessary to do so, because money-orders are so cheap; and, in the second place, money in a letter offers a constant temptation to those who handle mail. It is practically impossible to place money in a letter so that the postal clerk into whose hands the letter falls will not instantly detect it. Paper money has a peculiar odor unlike anything else on earth, and the clerk who is dishonest uses his sense of smell in spotting valuable letters rather than the sense of touch.

When Phaeton tried to drive the chariot of the sun, which his father had long guided in safety, there was soon the making of a first class bonfire. The young Phaeton who has the steeds of Germany in harness drives furiously, but his father's discretion is lacking. Wilhelm II. after playing the army against the civilians and militarism against industrialism has alienated the newspapers. A nation without a free press is deaf and dumb, and in this age of mouths and ears the people can get along better without kings and army columns than without editors and newspaper columns.

The numerous hold-ups of passenger trains in the west and the wreckings sometimes used to accomplish the purpose suggest the necessity for more effective means of prevention. Lives of passengers are in jeopardy from men who to get money will plunge hundreds of people into dizzy abysses. Convictions are hard to reach; therefore punishment should be severe and unrelenting. It seems as if the law might be strengthened in dealing with these fiendish crimes. A responsibility rests also upon the railroad companies, to carefully patrol the trucks and to thoroughly arm their employes.

SPRUNG A LEAK.

Loss of the Cuban Filibustering Steamer Commodore.

Goes Down with a Cargo of Arms and Supplies—Fifteen of Her Crew Reach Land—Fate of Others Unknown—Treachery Feared.

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 4.—The steamer Commodore, which cleared from this port for Cienfuegos, Cuba, Thursday, with a cargo of arms and ammunition, foundered off New Smyrna at an early hour Saturday morning. Of the crew, 12 are in Jacksonville, three alive and one dead are at Daytona. Four are reported to have arrived near Armond, but the report is not confirmed and eight are at sea on a life raft. Capt. Murphy, Steven Crane, the novelist, C. B. Montgomery, the cook, and William Higgins, a stoker, landed at Daytona Sunday morning. Their boat was turned over in the surf and Higgins received a wound which caused his death soon after getting ashore.

A Story of the Disaster

A dispatch from a member of the party of survivors says that about ten o'clock Friday night a suspicious leak was discovered in the fireroom and Capt. Murphy immediately started the pumps which undoubtedly had been tampered with, as they were in working order when Capt. Murphy and Chief Engineer Redigan left watch at eight o'clock. The fires were extinguished and the boat came to a standstill about 13 miles from Mosquito light. Capt. Murphy took full charge of the handling of the ship while the first mate superintended the launching of the boats. The Cubans took possession of the big boat and loaded it with baggage, so that only 12 men left the tug in it. They reached shore at four o'clock Saturday and left for Jacksonville.

Say the Boat Was Overloaded.

River men say the boat was overloaded with coal and that her seams opened. The cargo was shipped by Henry P. Tritot to Salvador Cisneros, Cienfuegos, Cuba. The manifest shows the cargo and value of the same to be as follows:

Two hundred and three thousand cartridges	$2,030
One thousand pounds giant powder	200
Forty bundles of rifles	1,400
Two electric batteries	50
Three hundred machetes	300
Fourteen cases of drugs	350
Four bundles of clothing	135
Total	$4,465

While there is considerable talk of treachery in connection with the sinking of the Commodore, nothing definite can be learned from the Cubans that arrived here. One sailor openly accuses the pilot of betraying them or being in Spanish pay, as they ran aground twice in going out of St. John's bay.

MORE BANKS FAIL.

Three Institutions in St. Paul Close Their Doors.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—The Germania, the Allemania and West Side banks, all doing business as state banks, on Monday closed their doors, every one of them being literally pulled down by their depositors. The failure of the Bank of Minnesota December 22 caused unrest in the community and depositors withdrew their money from the three banks above to such an extent that they were forced to go to the wall because they had not funds enough immediately in hand to meet the demands made upon them. Each of the three, however, is solvent, and all of them will reorganize as soon as the machinery for that purpose can be put into use. The directors of the Germania met Monday evening and appointed a committee on reorganization. The Germania is in the hands of P. M. Kerst as assignee and the other two are in the hands of Bank Examiner Kenyon. A receiver will be appointed for the Allemania to-day and the West Side bank will try to make arrangements with its creditors and reopen without the intervention of a receiver.

STORM IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

Snowdrifts Stop Railway Traffic. Three Lives Lost.

Huron, S. D., Jan. 5.—The heaviest snow and windstorm since 1888 has prevailed here and over this part of the state since Sunday morning. The temperature is below zero, and the wind is from the north at 60 miles an hour. Fifteen inches of snow have fallen, filling the railway cuts and piling drifts 10 to 15 feet high. All trains on the Dakota Central division of the Chicago & Northwestern are tied up and the engines housed. The Great Northern trains are all abandoned and no effort will be made to move trains on either line till the storm abates. The telegraph service is seriously interrupted. Suffering is certain to result among the settlers, as fuel is said to be limited.

Reports from Huron and other points in South Dakota show 13 inches of snow. A special to the World-Herald from Vermillion, S. D., states that the wind has drifted the snow from 10 to 20 feet in places. Three stock men are reported to have been frozen to death seven miles northeast of Nelson, Neb.

Idaho's New Governor.

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 5.—Gov. Frank C. Steunenberg and the other state officers were sworn in shortly before noon Monday without any ceremony of any kind. Both branches of the legislature met at noon and were organized by the democrats and silver republicans. The latter voted solidly for the democratic nominees. The populists, who fused with the democrats in the election, did not get a place. A. Halford, of Lewiston, is speaker.

Accused by His Son.

Wilmington, O., Jan. 5.—James Harvey, the alleged wife murderer now confined in the county jail charged with the murder of his wife, Ida, on December 18, Monday forenoon filed an affidavit before the mayor charging his father, William P. Harvey, 69 years old and a Quaker preacher, with being her murderer. He has shown signs of weakening for several days and wished to make a confession a week ago, but was prevented by his attorney. His father was lodged in jail Monday night, but denied being implicated in the crime. Great excitement prevails here.

Bad Fire at Nashville.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 4.—The destructive conflagration which visited this city Saturday night at 11:15 was not well under control before three a. m. Buildings on Market street and the public square were destroyed. The total estimated damage is $600,000, of which slightly more than 50 per cent. is covered by insurance. Several accidents of trifling consequence were reported.

Cincinnati Firm Assigns.

Cincinnati, Jan. 5.—F. C. Bailess, commission merchant, has asigned to C. W. Scott. Assets, $21,000; liabilities, $37,000.

BUSINESS REVIEW.

More Failures in 1896 Than Any Year Except 1893.

New York, Jan. 1.—R. G. Dun & Co. in their weekly review of trade say:

"There have been more commercial failures in 1896 than in any previous year except 1893, about 14,850, against 13,197 last year, with liabilities of about $225,000,000, against $173,196,050 last year, an increase in number of about 12 per cent. and in liabilities of 29 per cent.

"The year closes with an epidemic of failures, mainly at the west, and in banks, loan and trust companies, or concerns dependent on them. The action of clearing houses in various places indicates no want of confidence, and several banks which have failed will be enabled to pay in full, but disclosures of unsoundness in a few widely-known institutions, in the abnormal state of popular feeling after an excited contest on monetary issues, has caused distrust and suspicion where it is frequently undeserved. There has been no monetary pressure to cause trouble, nor have important western products declined in value. There has evidently been too liberal assistance given by some fiduciary concerns to speculative operations. No drain on eastern funds has resulted since the first alarm at two large failures, and the money then sent has all returned. Failures often grow more frequent as annual settlements approach.

"The year 1896 has been one of singular and confusing fluctuations in prices, of which very full details are given. Wheat rose to 81 cents February 8, fell to 69½ June 23, and rose to 92 cents December 29. Cotton started at $8.31, with stories of scanty supply, fell to $7.62 March 5, rose to $8.37 May 7, dropped to $7.05 July 15, when a heavy surplus was pressing, rose to $8.87 September 10, with stories that the new crop was ruined, fell to $7.06, but closed at $7.12. Wool rose to an average of $14.74 for all domestic grades, February 1, fell to $12.16 September 1, rose to $13.66 December 1, and has since declined. Iron and its products rose 3 per cent. to April 1 and then declined every month to December 1, in all about 20 per cent., since rising slightly. Boots and shoes fell 13 per cent. in the spring, against leather 18 and hides 21 per cent. Then shoes rose gradually 20 per cent. to December and leather 17 per cent., but has since fallen 3 per cent., while hides rose 25 per cent. to June 3, dropped 22 per cent. to July 8, rose to 50 per cent. to November 1 and have since declined 13 per cent. Cotton goods were at the highest point January 1, fell 17 per cent. to August 6, rose about 7 per cent. to November 9, and have since declined about 2 per cent. The incongruity of these changes shows what obstacles business has had to face.

"In none of the industries mentioned has there been activity the past week. Holiday dullness has been intensified by the failures and the efforts of great combinations to make new arrangements. With iron, coke, wool, cotton and hides all somewhat lower, there is almost universal confidence that business will soon become large and safer than before for a long time. Cotton mills have enormous stocks of unsold goods in some lines, the surplus of print cloths being the largest ever known and about a quarter of a year's consumption. Wool sales decreased 24 per cent. in the first four months, and were smaller than for five years; decreased 56 per cent. in the second four months when new wool was coming forward, and were much the smallest ever known, except in the panic of 1873; but enormous sales, mainly speculative, made the aggregate during the last four months nearly equal to that of last year.

"The volume of business during the year 1896 has varied remarkably. Payments through the clearing houses were slightly larger in each of the first four months than in 1895, but 20 per cent. smaller than in 1892. In the six months, May and October inclusive, payments were every month smaller than last year, 15 per cent. in September, and in that month and October about 24 per cent. smaller than in 1892. In November a small improvement over 1895 appeared, and the decrease from 1892 was but 12 per cent., but in December payments were 9.3 per cent smaller than last year, and 23.8 per cent. smaller than in 1892. Railroad earnings were slightly larger than last year in each of the first seven months, and smaller each month than in 1892. In August and the later months there has been a decrease as great as 12 per cent. in November from 1895 and 16.2 per cent. in August from 1892.

"Wheat has risen to the highest point since June, 1892, because western receipts in five weeks have been but 13,280,000 bushels, against 22,606,357 last year. The exports from New York in December were five per cent. larger and imports 12 per cent. smaller than last year."

Miners Quit Work.

Massillon, O., Jan. 4.—The employes of all the mines in this district, about 2,000 men, have struck on account of a reduction in the price of pick mining, from 61 to 51 cents per ton. The notices of reduction state that, as a rate of 60 cents has been agreed upon in Pennsylvania, under the long established system whereby the Ohio rate is nine cents less than that of the Pittsburgh district, the 51-cent rate will be established and maintained. If, however, the joint convention of operators and miners to be held at Columbus, January 12, shall fix a higher rate for the Hocking valley than 51 cents, the Massillon operators will pay that rate from January 1, provided the miners in the Massillon district continue at work during the month of January.

Mississippi Rising.

St. Louis, Jan. 5.—At noon Sunday the official measurement of the river's depth was given as eight feet and six inches. At six o'clock Monday eveing it was 24 feet, being a rise of 15½ feet in 36 hours. This phenomenal rise is accounted for by the dispatches from every quarter recording heavy and continuous rains, beginning Saturday noon. The danger line for high water is 32 feet. But the worst is believed to be over, as a freezing blizzard began with sunrise Monday, and cut off the volume of water from small streams.

Gov. Scofield Inaugurated.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5.—At high noon Gov. William Henry Upham's administration ended, and the reign of Maj. Edward Scofield commenced. The assembly chamber in the capitol building was crowded to the doors by a multitude of citizens of Madison and visitors from every section of the state. After music by a band stationed in the gallery the oath of office was administered to the new governor. The other state officers in succession took the oath, and short informal receptions were then held.

A Sunday Tragedy.

Sumter, S. C., Jan. 5.—Thomas Rhame and Ralph Deschamps, of Panola, met at the house of Mr. H. D. Rhame Sunday night and began firing at each other. Rhame was mortally wounded and died within 20 minutes. Deschamps disappeared immediately and it is believed has since died.

Thrown Out of Work.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 5.—About 400 employes of the Cahal Dover rolling mills received their discharge Saturday, when they were paid off. Many are sadly in need of employment. No cause has been given for the wholesale discharge.

Expires in Church.

Quincy, Ill., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Clara Freeman, of Denmark, Ia., who was visiting her son here, attended services at the Elm Street Methodist church, and in the midst of prayer fell in her seat and died suddenly of heart trouble, which is supposed to have been aggravated by religious excitement.

Elections in France.

Paris, Jan. 5.—The official returns of the elections which were held in France for the choice of one-third of the members of the senate show that 69 republicans, 13 radicals, 3 socialists and 12 reactionists were elected.

BANKER COMMITS SUICIDE.

W. A. Hammond, of Chicago, Throws Himself Into the Lake.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—William A. Hammond, who was second vice president of the failed National Bank of Illinois, went from his Evanston home partly dressed and evidently demented, into the gloomy darkness and wind-swept rain about two o'clock Saturday morning, and leaving a trail of torn and twisted private papers in his path, sought the Dempster street pier, from which he threw himself into the icy water of Lake Michigan to obtain relief from the troubles which have piled upon him in the last two weeks. The body was found shortly after noon by two boys at the foot of Church street, whither it had been carried by the under tow. It was taken to the morgue, where an inquest by the coroner was held.

The intelligence of the banker's self-destruction, so closely following that of Banker Otto Wasmansdorff, was a distressing shock to Chicago bankers and the friends of the dead man, although not altogether a surprise to those who knew under what terrible mental strain Mr. Hammond had been living since he had been held up to public scorn as the wrecker of the National Bank of Illinois—a charge which is indignantly characterized as a malicious lie by the suicide's intimate friends and lawyer. Although despondent to an unusual degree Friday night, Mr. Hammond gave no warning to friend or family, and there is nothing in the circumstances surrounding his tragic end which would warrant the assumption that he had contemplated killing himself for any length of time.

Ten days ago a local morning paper published a sensational and lengthy attack upon the dead man's honesty as an officer of the bank of Illinois. It directly accused him of wrecking the institution, of playing the role of "kiter," of speculating with other people's money, of practicing carefully planned deception on his fellow directors and the depositors for years and of sealing the lips of President Schneider by allowing the accounts of Weiss and Berger, sons-in-law of the president, to pass safe bounds. This paper alleged: "He has violated, wilfully and deliberately, the law which is supposed to protect the public from the operations of such as he."

ENVOY OF BIMETALLISM.

Senator Wolcott Goes to Attend an International Conference.

New York, Jan. 4.—Senator Wolcott sailed on the Campania Saturday as the envoy of bimetallism. Before the end of this month an international conference in the interest of bimetallism will be held in London. The representatives of five governments will be present. The conference will be informal, but those who will meet are accredited representatives of their governments and out of this meeting will grow a formal conference. The Bimetallic league of Great Britain has been for some time working for this end, and a deep enough interest in bimetallism in the United States, France, Germany and Russia for them to send representatives to the conference has resulted.

Senator Wolcott, the representative from this country, said just before sailing: "This conference will be entirely unofficial. My invitation comes from prominent bimetallists in England. This is an auspicious time for discussing the subject. I feel very hopeful that something will grow out of our meeting." Senator Wolcott declined to discuss his powers, which were bestowed by the congressional caucus with the advice and consent of President-elect William McKinley.

A North Dakota Failure.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 1.—At a meeting of the directors of the Second national bank Thursday morning they decided not to open for business. The action is announced to be due to recent heavy withdrawals of depositors and the impossibility of realizing on assets. Immediately following the failure of the National bank of Illinois and the bank of Minnesota, the bank had sustained a shrinkage of $40,000, while their deposits amounted to about $17,000 during the past 14 days. On last Monday the bank published a statement of their condition at the close of business, December 17, which showed loans and discounts, $158,086.92; due from national and state banks and approved reserve agents, $9,342.59; due to banks and depositors, $179,749.76; rediscounts, $4,600; capital stock paid in $50,000, with undivided profits amounting to $4,000.

Did Not Last Long.

Webster, S. D., Jan. 1.—The new bank, recently organized here, is already insolvent. T. E. Egge, the moving spirit, collected 50 per cent. of the capital stock and deposited it in the defunct Bank of Minnesota, of St. Paul, and the Columbia national bank, of Minneapolis. The new bank was to be of $20,000 capital and to commence business on or about January 1, 1897. Mr. Egge had collected the amount above stated and deposited the same to his credit, and when the crash came he gave his personal note to each and every stockholder. The total amount involved is $13,500.

T., Jan. 5.—An explosion occurred in the Anderson mines at four o'clock Monday morning in which five miners were killed, named as follows: Martin Roy, Joe Cox, Tom Currey, William Bishop and Simon Pitty. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by Fire Boss Cox unscrewing the bottom of a safety lamp which ignited the gas.

Work Resumed.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 5.—Two thousand employes of the Westinghouse Air Brake company started to work in the Wilmerding shops Monday after an idleness of almost a month. Large orders have been received and the works will probably run steadily from now on.

Died from Fright.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 5.—The Wyoming state general hospital at Rock Springs, Wyo., burned to the ground. The ten patients were removed, but one woman died from fright while being taken to the temporary quarters. The loss is $45,000, with $15,000 insurance.

GRANT AS A YOUNG DEBATER.

Took a Prominent Part in a Kentucky Club.

Apparently Grant entered the Philomathean Debating club, Maysville, Ky., for the first time at its thirty-third meeting, January 3, 1837. He took a prominent part at once, says McClure's. By a curious coincidence, the question for this first evening was: "Resolved, That the Texans were not justifiable in giving Santa Anna his liberty." In the names of the debaters this night there appeared on the record H. U. Grant. He was on the affirmative side. He was on the affirmative side at the thirty-fourth meeting, with this question: "Resolved, That females wield greater influence in society than the males." The affirmative side won in this case as well as the other. At the thirty-fifth meeting his name appears on the affirmative of the question (a very vital one at that time): "Resolved, That it would not be just and politic to liberate the slaves at this time." Again he was on the winning side. At the thirty-sixth meeting the name appears "U. Grant" on the affirmative side of the resolution that "Intemperance is a greater evil than war."

At the thirty-seventh meeting he was elected, together with his friend, A. H. Markland, and W. Richeson, as a member of the committee; he also took part in the debate on the question: "Resolved, That Socrates was right in not escaping when the prison doors were opened to him." He took the affirmative and it was again the successful side. And in all the succeeding meetings, down to March 27, 1837, the record shows him to have been active, but after that date his name does not appear. The probabilities are that he returned home to help put in the crop.

FOX HOUNDS.

A Description of a Hunt That Makes One's Blood Tingle.

We became aware, from the shouts of the darkies, as they urged the dogs into the thickets, that these animals had names of famous flavor, though their appelations had not been bestowed by one who possessed a fine sense of the historical or chronological unities, says Lippincott's. "Hi, yo' Clovis!" "Come hyar, Uncas!" "Git on, Brutus, git on! What yo' sulkin' 'bout?" These ejaculations were accompanied by sundry kicks, delivered upon the representatives of these and other renowned characters. To such uses do men's names come after death.

After the disappearance of the hounds in the thicket we rode slowly along the devious ways of the pine lands, listening intently for that peculiar canine cry which announces the discovery of a trail. It was not long delayed, for gray foxes are almost as numerous in eastern Virginia as rabbits are in the western states. Suddenly, amidst the chorus of sharp, short yelps, we heard a long-drawn, wailing cry which at night would be interpreted as a cry of the banshee, but which, ringing out on the air of a bright November morning, loses its ominous significance for every one except the trail has been "struck." As the cry rose and swelled and was taken up by 30 other mouths, our slow-filing cavalcade became enthused with the life and animation of a cavalry company that has just received orders to charge. Reins were tightened, knees were pressed closer to the saddles, hats were pulled down over eyes and men leaned forward over their horses' necks like jockeys waiting for the fall of the starter's flag.

Curious Cuban Caves.

There is a series of small and large caverns in the marble rocks of the Cuban mountains which are being gradually filled up, and that, too, in a most remarkable manner. The common land snails, of which there are so many species and varieties in Cuba, make these caves a resort during the dry season. They congregate on the floors of the caverns in immense numbers and millions of them never leave. The reason is this: The water which drops from the roofs or ceiling of the different caverns contains a large per cent. of carbonate of lime. When the water evaporates the lime is left behind, and, acting as a cement, it glues great layers of the snail shells together every year. This process going on season after season is gradually filling up the Cuban caves, and it is only a question of time when there will not be a single cavern left on the island.

MY OLD FRIEND IS NOT HERE.

I hark to the harsh discordant notes
Of clamorous toil and strife,
I drag my feet through the dust and heat
Of the broad highroad of life;
But I catch not the sound of a well-known voice—
And the road is brown and sere,
And my eyesight blears with unshed tears—
For my old friend is not here.

With a backward glance and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered far away
To a land that lies under cloudless skies—
Where the sun shines all the day;
And his form is lost in the hurrying throng
That gathers from far and near,
And I miss the grace of his kindly face—
For my old friend is not here.

But I caught a glimpse of that unknown land,
As my old friend hurried through
The outer gate, where the dear ones wait
For the pilgrim who is due;
And I know that the sun shines all the day,
That the flow'rs bloom all the year—
I shall miss his smile through the after-while,
For my old friend is not here.

HIS MIRACLE.

BY CARL SMITH.

The section foreman's boy, red of hair and freckled of face, offered to show him the way to the church, but he declined the proffered courtesy, preferring to walk up the railroad track until he should get tired of the jaunt, when he would stop at a cattle guard and rest, and then return in time for dinner. Church going had been an unknown quantity with him in the city, where there were great cathedrals in half a dozen different parts of the town, and he hardly saw the occasion for departing from custom simply because his exile in the little country town was so uninterestingly eventless. He started with a swinging, athletic-club stride up the line of gravel, therefore, and the section foreman's boy, palpably starchy and awkward in his Sunday clothes, went hurrying down the street from the station, his red hair crimsonly signaling his approach to the little frame church while he was yet a great distance away.

Kennedy was the new telegraph operator. He was an aspiring fellow and an intelligent one, and some day he hoped to be a trick dispatcher, and possibly, after reasonable lapse of time, the superintendent of telegraph. He spent the long and lonesome nights in reading on social economics, and he knew more about the history of strange and peculiar things associated with government than almost anybody whose name or fame is now suggested to mind. He was the chief telegrapher of his division of the telegraphers' labor union, which met in the city 30 miles away, and he was the man who made the best speeches on Tuesday nights, when lodge proceedings had got as far along as the "good of the order." The others of the division thought highly of him, and usually they sent him as their lodge delegate to the sessions of the international convention. He could argue splendidly and he said he was an agnostic.

As he walked up the track this Sunday morning the Sabbath feeling seemed to rise up as though to offend against his reasoning and reasonable agnosticism. Across the fields came the mellowness of a church bell, and seeming far, far, far away, its sound was the sweeter for the distance. Over to the right a farmer's wagon was creeping along the section line road as the sleek brown horses dragged the family toward the place of worship in the town. Around the curve ahead of him there rose a quiet rumbling, and, looking to see what unexpected train was bearing down upon him, he received the hail of Michael Doolan, foreman of Section 43, several miles up the parallel line of rails, who, with his men and their women and children, was whirring along in the direction of the little parish church toward which the redheaded boy had sped several minutes before. The men were on a hand car, to which a little flat had been attached, and this flat accommodated the women and children.

"I suppose it's all right for them," Kennedy murmured, as the twin cars disappeared around the other bend of the curve, "but that isn't for me. Religion is a good enough thing—an indispensable thing, indeed, but it hasn't got around to me yet, and it never will. It's a good, handy thing to have for the purpose of swearing people in courts and impressing ignorant persons whose characters require some sort of ballast of mysticism, not only for their own comfort, but for the safety of the public. Such people, without a weight or anchorage of some kind, would rattle around annoyingly and even harmfully to others. I wish I could believe as they do. Doubtless it is a comforting thing to be as they are, but—"

And he closed his statement of opinion by picking up a stone and throwing it at a rabbit.

He walked to the cattleguard, and, resting, returned, and found he had vastly miscalculated distance and time, and that it was still very early in the day. He looked about and saw the hand-car on a siding, and it suggested something to him. Kennedy prided himself on being a liberal sort of person, and the thought came to him that it would be a fair and reasonable thing for him to drop into the little church, just to show that he had really no feeling against religion. He found the white-painted structure with the cross over its queer little cupola, and, entering, took the rearmost seat. The services were nearly closing. He looked forward, over the heads of half a hundred devout worshipers, at the priest in vestments, which—although Kennedy did not know it—he had brought at great labor from the city, for the parish was too poor to support a resident pastor. He noted that the worshipers seemed to consider every movement of the begowned man as to some especial import, and genuflected and crossed themselves and murmured unintelligible utterances, which he took for prayers. It was very interesting, and in his heart he wished that reason might show him how to be as happily satisfied with the priest's teachings as were these.

"If a miracle could be enacted in those old days, why should not one be performed now?" he inquired inwardly. "Oh, no. It is all opposed to sense and science. Faith?"—for he had arrived in time to hear enough of the sermon to know that the priest had discoursed on faith—"yes, by a miracle I could have faith, but—"

His self-communion was interrupted by the sound of a silvery voice coming from the gallery above his head.

"O salutaris!" the hair rose pure and sweet—such a voice as the agnostic had never before heard. "O salutaris!" and the church was filled with the wonder of a music which caused him to think that an angel sung, quite ignoring the fact that according to his philosophy no such thing as an angel could exist. He listened as one entranced, and he left the church with his very soul brimming with the joy of that heavenly soprano.

The next Sunday he walked up the track again, but only a little way. The section foreman's boy had invited him as before to accompany him, but Kennedy hesitated, and, hesitating, was not lost. Now, however, as he again looked up at the cheery hail of the happy passengers of the handcar, he hesitated again, and this hesitation sent him churchward. He took his former seat in the rear, under the odd little choir loft, and to-day a new priest talked, and, strangely enough, of the "Miracle of Faith." As though answering a question of Kennedy's the clergyman said: "Who are the believers? The greatest of all the great in learning, statecraft and material advancement. Presidents, prime ministers, men of mighty mind accept the divinity of Christ—and if these men, wise enough to be great, and great enough to be honest, accept by faith, why should you or I cry out for a miracle to be enacted for our special behoof. There are many millions of people in the world—"

Kennedy could have told him how many.

"—and what right has one man to ask God to miraculously perform for him so that he might be badgered and forced reluctantly into accepting what worthier, more learned men and men of infinitely greater responsibility and vaster temptation gladly and gratefully take as a boon?"

"This," thought Kennedy, "sounds reasonable, but I cannot blindly accept their belief on unsupported, unwitnessed sentiment." And as he thought upon it the voice of the soprano rose in glorification. It was what he had waited for. It filled him with great happiness. The undeserved miracle was beginning of performance.

Every Sunday after this he came in after the others and took his back seat. Her voice had sung him almost into the acceptance toward which the reasoning of the priest was powerless to persuade. He seemed to partake of the feeling of the singer. He exulted with her in the Latin praise of the Redeemer. He learned the words, and they rose almost to his lips as she sung. What a woman she must be! What a heart of purity to well up in such witness of the might of Christian love and Christian mercy! He had never seen her, for he was an agnostic, and he could not yield the stubborness of his unbelief to ask about her or to even wait in the church to watch her. He came into church late and he left early. He was an agnostic, and she—

But was he?

One day after the services were concluded he advanced past the half-hundred humble worshipers, and, greeting the priest, said: "Father, I want to come into the church." His heart leaped with that acknowledgment, and the little edifice seemed filled with the glory of the Shepherd of the lost sheep. Suddenly, from the organ loft, which now for the first time was visible to his eyes, came the swelling sound of that heavenly voice in some song of praise.

He looked for the singer. It was the section foreman's boy.

And this was his miracle.—Chicago Record.

WASHINGTON AS FIREMAN.

During His Younger Days the First President Fought the Flames.

Some interesting little stories are told of George Washington in connection with the "Friendship Fire company," organized in 1774, in his home, Alexandria.

At first the company consisted of citizens who, out of "mutual friendship," agreed to carry to every fire "two leathern buckets and one great bag of oznaburg or wider linnen." Washington was made an honorary member, and when he went as a delegate to the congress of 1774 at Philadelphia he examined the fire-engines in use there. On his return to Philadelphia to the continental congress in 1775, he bought from a man named Gibbs a small fourth-class engine, for the sum of 80 pounds 10 shillings, and just before he set out for Boston heights to become commander-in-chief, he dispatched this little engine to the Friendship company.

During his younger days he always attended fires in Alexandria and helped to extinguish them. In the last year of his life a fire occurred near the market. He was riding down King street at the time, followed by his servant, who was also on horseback.

Washington saw that the Friendship engine was insufficiently manned, and riding up to a group of well-dressed gentlemen standing near the scene of action, he called out authoritatively:

"Why are you idle there, gentlemen? It is your business to lead in these matters."

After which he leaped off his horse, and seizing the brakes was followed by a crowd that gave the engine such a shaking up as it had not had for many a day.—Youth's Companion.

Why He Needed a Gun.

It was a western town, and the young fellow had been arrested for carrying a concealed weapon. Fresh from the east, he imagined that bad men lurked in the shadows, and he had bought a pistol that had a bore as large as a cough-drop. When arraigned before the police judge he had no defense to make, and the magistrate said: "I shall have to fine you."

"Please let me off," said the young fellow. "I have no money to pay a fine, and if you fine me I shall have to go to jail, and that would disgrace me. I have done nothing wrong except carry the revolver, and I am sorry for that. I have no friends from whom I could secure the money to pay the fine."

"What did you carry the artillery for?" asked the judge.

"Why, er—er—to protect my valuables."

"To protect your valuables? What valuables have you? You say you have no money to pay a fine. What else have you of value?"

"Why, you see—that is—er—I have the gun. It cost me $12."

He went to jail.—N. Y. World.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

Wrecked the Store.

The safe in the store of Henry Leathers, at St. Francis, was blown open by burglars. When the charge exploded it blew the front of the safe clear across the store. Here it smashed into a barrel tank filled with kerosene, broke a gross of lamp chimneys and knocked down a large portion of the stock piled on shelves, the whole being piled in a chaotic heap. Every light in the building was broken, including the large show wiudows. The large hanging lamps suspended from the ceiling were thrown from their hooks and smashed. The whole store looked as if a cyclone had struck it. The money drawer of the safe, contrining $200, was blown across the room.

The explosion woke nearly everyone in the village, and the burglar had no time to take advantage of his work.

Indicted.

The first fruits of the Hennepin grand jury investigation and all the fruits that will be secured were apparent when George A. Durnam, alderman from the Third ward, was arraigned before Judge Pond on an indictment charging him with asking a bribe of $10,000 from the firm of Halvorsen, Richards & Co., for voting for and aiding in securing the passage of the resolution accepting their bid on reservoir work.

Pending his trial, set for Jan. 18, he will be held in $5,000 bail, his bondsmen being George T. D. Baxter and John A. Gilman.

Feels Hopeful.

In the opinion of John D. O'Brien, attorney for the Bank of Minnesota of St. Paul, the affairs of the bank are in such condition that a speedy re-organization should be expected. As a business proposition the stockholders desire it; the depositors of the bank are hopeful that the receivers will soon be discharged and the affairs of the bank again placed in the hands of the officers. Mr. O'Brien said that he thought the suspension of the bank was pressed forward with too great rapidity.

Found Soft Coal.

It has leaked out that arrangements have been made to develop a vein of soft coal in the northern part of Minnesota, to ascertain whether it is extensive or not. The gentlemen interested will not talk, but enough was learned to know they believe they have a "good thing." The samples from the vein are equal to the best Illinois grade and suitable for the manufacture of coke. A crew of men, with drills and other implements, will leave for the location at once.

Another Rotary.

A prominent citizen of Belgrade claims to have invented a rotary engine superior to the Brambel Sleepy Eye machine, and experts who have examined the model say that it has solved the question of cheaper steam power. Patents have been applied for. The The inventor says his model works wonderfully and that an engine will be constructed at once that will run a sawmill. He is a practical engineer and is confident that his is the discovery of the year.

Pardoned.

Following the release of Phil Schieg, Mrs. Anna Smith, who had served four of a twenty-four-year sentence for manslaughter, was pardoned by Gov. Clough. She is a colored woman, and while working as housekeeper for a man named Hennige, near Bass lake in Ramsey county, in July, 1892, shot and killed a stranger, who was trespassing on the land of her employer, and who was at the time engaged in an altercation with Hennige.

CAST ASIDE.

National Prohibition Party Requests Mrs. Gougar to Get Out.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Helen M. Gougar, the pioneer champion of prohibition and universal suffrage, is a woman without a party. At the meeting of the central committee of the national party Friday at the Sherman house a resolution was adopted reciting that since Mrs. Gougar, who was a member of the committee, had signified her intention to support a candidate for president in 1890 who might not be the nominee of the national party, her resignation would be accepted. The action which caused the adoption of the resolution was Mrs. Gougar's objection to a motion which had been presented that the members of the central and executive committees should pledge themselves to "oppose any compromising or entangling alliances with other political parties," and she told the committee that if "Mr. Bryan's party" could be induced to incorporate a temperance plank in its platform she wanted to be free to support it, and that she would vote against any proposal to bind her to support the nominee of the national party.

The motion failed to carry, but the committee considered her words treasonable enough to warrant her expulsion from the councils of the party. During the debate Mrs. Gougar said that the temperance question was no longer the paramount issue, and that if she had had a vote in November she was not sure that she would not have supported Mr. Bryan. The fight lasted for more than three hours, and when the motion was tabled by a close vote Mr. Thomas immediately offered the resolutions expelling Mrs. Gougar.

DEATH AND RUIN.

Shreveport, La., Jan. 4.—A cyclone from the southwest struck and almost literally demolished the town of Mooringsport, just north of this city, at 3:45 p. m. Saturday. Over 20 dwellings were blown down, and only seven were left intact. Four were killed and 23 wounded. The dead are Willie, Maud, Hall and an infant, all children of Jesse Goodman, who is also injured with his daughter Alice, his wife and nephew, Claude. Their home is a wreck. Three of the wounded will probably die. The cyclone came without warning, and lasted only about one minute. The following houses were destroyed: lasted only about one minute.

Mooringsport is a town of 800 or 1,000 inhabitants, situated on the Kansas City, Pittsburgh & Gulf railroad, 25 miles west of Texarkana. The town is an old one, but its population was considerably augmented by the advent of the Gulf railroad a few months ago.

Benton, Ark., Jan. 4.—At 6:40 o'clock Saturday night a cyclone struck this town, wrecked nearly every building in South Benton, and passed on in a northeasterly direction, wrecking every building in its path. In an outhouse near the depot, a tramp was killed. The destruction of property was simply awful, many families being left without homes. The property values will reach into the thousands.

New Year's at the White House.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The annual New Year's reception at the white house took place Friday according to long established custom. It constitutes the yearly ordeal of the president and the mistress of the white house, for they must shake hands with many hundreds—several thousand in fact—of their fellow citizens, and a large number of distinguished foreigners. As on last New Year's day the crowd that participated in and witnessed the reception was very large. It was the last function of its sort in which Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland will figure as the principal characters, and this may be responsible in part for the throng that paraded corridors and apartments during the time set apart for the reception.

Slain by Hundreds.

Madrid, Jan. 4.—A dispatch received here from Manilla says that a great battle has been fought in the Philippine islands, resulting in the signal defeat of the insurgents, of whom 3,000 were killed. The battle was fought at Bulacan, a town in the province of Luzon, located on the River Bulacon, 20 miles northwest of Manilla. Gen. Ensebro, a leader of the Philippine island insurgents, is said to have been killed in the conflict. Of the Spaniards, 25 were killed and 68 wounded. It is reported that seven cannon were captured from the insurgents.

Landslide Causes Death.

Holden, Mo., Jan. 4.—Early Sunday morning a freight train on the Missouri Pacific railway ran into a landslide near this place. The locomotive toppled over an embankment and three of the crew were almost instantly killed. The dead are: Gomer Evans, engineer; Harry Hukop, fireman; J. E. McQueen, brakeman. The men lived in St. Louis. Two other members of the crew were slightly injured. The recent heavy rains caused a huge mass of earth to slide down upon the track and the train crashed into the obstruction while running at a rate of 12 miles an hour, derailing the engine and a dozen cars.

McCullagh's Death Accidental.

NOBLE MOTIVES.

Suggestions Regarding the Proper Teaching of Children.

It seems strange that any mother who loves her child should ever instill into his mind anything but the noblest motives for conduct. Children easily appreciate high motives and learn to despise unworthy ones. It is a great mistake to ask a child to be good because some one is looking at it, or for some paltry reward or from fear of punishment. The motive from which a child acts should be more carefully considered than its action. Conscientious children are often guilty of grievous blunders. The child in such a case needs only instruction, and never condemnation. So long as the motive was sincere the action is of trivial consideration, because it does not affect the formation of character. On the other hand, a most worthy action may sometimes be clouded by a contemptible motive. Where it is clearly shown that a child acts merely from love of praise the matter is one for the serious consideration of the mother. No trait of character is more easily acquired by a child and none is more disagreeable or difficult to overcome than that of the infantile prig. Self-sufficiency is a common fault of petted children, and one that is particularly unlovely.

Until taught by motives of fear or greed to be cunning and underhanded a child is naturally frank, and is easily susceptible to the noblest motives. The mother should appeal to the little one to be good and truthful, because goodness is lovely and because such a course is the only noble one. It is rare that the child does not instantly appreciate the motive. Nature has implanted in every childish heart a natural love of beauty and truth. It is instinctive for a child to speak the truth until fear causes him to do otherwise. A vivid imagination sometimes causes children to relate wonderful tales of their experiences. This is not to be considered as untruthfulness, but the habit is one to be watched, for it may develop in adult life into an unhappy habit of exaggeration. The child should be questioned and taught to distinguish between the unreal world of its fancy and the real world in which it lives. The habit of exact and truthful statement cannot be formed too early.

All the instruction of the child of today tends to make him methodical in thought. A bright child soon recognizes inferior motives and estimates accordingly those who advance them. If you expect to retain the respect of your children do not give them a motive for action that you yourself would despise. Teach them to understand and live up to the highest standard.—N. Y. Tribune.

A GAME PIE.

How to Prepare a Very Palatable Holiday Dish.

The most simple method is to make what is generally called a timbale. To raise the crust from the pie with the hands is a difficult task and can only be accomplished by skilled and experienced hands. Therefore the raised pies are usually made in a mold, and have the advantage of being more easily made than where the paste is raised with the hands. Make a stiff, short crust; to every pound of flour allow half a pound of butter, the yolks of two eggs and half a pint of water. Work it up very smoothly. Butter a raised pie-mold and line with the paste. Previous to making the crust, bone the game—partridge, quail, woodcock, or whatever is to be used—and rub well with pounded mace, allspice, pepper and salt; then spread over all a layer of force-meat made by chopping two ounces of ham, one teaspoonful of parsley and the peel of half a lemon; mince very fine, add a seasoning to taste of salt, cayenne and mace; blend all thoroughly together with six ounces of breadcrumbs. Beat two eggs, work these up with the other ingredients, and use as directed. Roll the fowl over the force-meat. Line the pie with force-meat; put in the game, packing it in well; wet the edges, put on a cover of paste, pinch the edges together; brush over with the beaten yolk of an egg, and bake in a moderate oven for four hours. In the meantime, make a good, strong gravy from the bones; pour it through a funnel into the hole at the top, and the pie is ready for use. If the pie is to be eaten cold the gravy must be considerably reduced before it is poured into the pie, as, when cold, it should form a firm jelly, hence it is wise to use a knuckle of veal in making the jelly. Should the pie acquire too much color in baking cover with a piece of brown paper, as the crust should not in the least degree be burned. Mushrooms, truffles or oysters may be added to enrich the flavor of these pies. These pies are more frequently served cold than hot. The cover is sometimes carefully removed, leaving the perfect edges, and the top garnished with bits of bright aspic and sprigs of fresh parsley, which gives an exceedingly pretty effect.—Ladies' Home Jornal.

The Mark of Breeding.

A dainty table is a mark of good breeding, and an untidy table proclaims to all beholders a lack in the housewife of all the finer sensibilities. It really does not take a great deal of time or much more trouble to set the table attractively, and to serve the food in a dainty, appetizing way, and the gain is inestimable. A little green for garnishing the meat plate can always be procured; water is plentiful in most places, soap is cheap and every day is 24 hours long, so that there is small excuse for soiled linen on the table. There is no place where thoughtful care is more needed or more productive of gratifying results.—St. Louis Republic.

Roast Partridges.

Partridges for roasting should be young and carefully plucked, drawn and washed. A very delicious method of serving partridges is to cover the breasts with thin slices of lemon (removing all the rind), and then encase the birds in thin slices of bacon secured with strings or skewers; place in a hot oven, and baste frequently; cook about 25 minutes; serve with clear gravy, to which is added some allspice and lemon juice. Bread sauce is frequently served with roast partridge. Serve with currant jelly. — Ladies' Home Journal.

A Probable Result.

Keeper—Eh, mon, I'm thinking the pure bird may ha' died a natural death. —London Sketch.

THERE are no excuses not to use St. Jacobs Oil for bruises.

A young woman about to be presented at court receives the fullest instructions as to her behavior. She is told how to dress; how to manage her train; how to courtesy correctly. Every incident is carefully rehearsed so that she may commit no blunder in the presence of royalty. If all this trouble is worth while for the satisfaction of one brief moment, how infinitely more important it is that a young girl about to enter into the sacred precincts of womanhood, should be properly instructed in all that concerns a life-time of possible happiness, or possible misery.

Every mother ought to see to it that her daughters are healthy and strong in a womanly way. She ought to make them aware that any neglect or irregularity of the special functions of womanhood may result in life-long weakness and disease.

Any mother or daughter may write concerning these delicate ailments, with the utmost confidence to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. Her letter will be answered free of charge with suggestions for self-treatment at home, by which these complaints may be overcome without need of mortifying examinations.

Dr. Pierce has had over thirty years' experience in the treatment of women's diseases, and is an eminent specialist in this particular field of practice. His "Favorite Prescription" cures completely and permanently the most obstinate cases of feminine weakness and disease. It heals all inflamed conditions, strengthens and tones the nerve-centres and the entire womanly organism.

For prospective mothers and nursing mothers, the "Favorite Prescription" is a perfect strength sustainer.

Danger Environs Us

If we live in a region where malaria is prevalent. It is useless to hope to escape it if unprovided with a medicinal safeguard. Wherever the endemic is most prevalent and malignant—in South and Central America, the West Indies and certain portions of Mexico and the Isthmus of Panama, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have proved a remedy for and preventive of the disease in every form. Not less effective is it in curing rheumatism, liver and kidney complaints, dyspepsia, biliousness and nervousness.

A GREAT deal of nonsense has been written—and believed, about blood purifiers. What purifies the blood? .. .. ..

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD

AND THEY ALONE.

If diseased, however, they cannot, and the blood continually becomes more impure. Every drop of blood in the body goes through the kidneys, the sewers of the system, every three minutes, night and day, while life endures.

Warner's Safe Cure

puts the kidneys in perfect health, and nature does the rest.

The heavy, dragged out feeling, the bilious attacks, headaches, nervous unrest, fickle appetite, all caused by poisoned blood, will disappear when the kidneys properly perform their functions.

There is no doubt about this. Thousands have so testified. The theory is right, the cure is right and health follows as a natural sequence.

Be self-convinced through personal proof.

A-head of Pearline?

Never! Not a bit of it! That is out of the question. Probably not one of the many washing-powders that have been made to imitate Pearline would claim to excel it in any way. All they ask is to be considered "the same as" or "as good as" Pearline. But they're not even that. Pearline is to-day, just as it has been from the first, the best thing in the world for every kind of washing and cleaning.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

--Don't forget the Literary Society Tuesday night, at the City Hall.

—A couble of sun dogs followed the sun during most of Tuesday forenoon.

—The Social at the M. E. Manse, Friday evening was an enjoyable affair.

—Gilmer Hotel is a new sign in town, that takes the place of Danforth House.

—Casper Janikula has moved his saloon into the old Eagle office in South Delano.

—Geo. P. Schaffer received a fine stock of groceries yesterday, to take the place of those lost in the fire.

—A housewarming at Eph Jacobs' last night was attended by about 5 dozen people. They had a fine time.

—On Wednesday morning the remains of Aaron Noren who died Sunday in Minneapolis was brought via Delano to Watertown for interment.

—The insurance adjusters visited town Monday and settled up with the parties who were burned out last week and business once more moves on much as before.

—The Eagle Printing Company has ordered a folding machine for their extensive business. This will insure nice work, but knocks the girls out of lots of dimes.

—A new barber shop is about to be opened up on R. R. Aye. Three tonsorial artists ought to be able to keep the town and all the country round from becoming populists so far as hirsuit appendages are concerned.

—John McGary of Independence, says Providence permitting, he will participate in the discussion of the Woman Suffrage question with some of our home talent Tuesday evening. Be prepared boys. Don't allow our laurels to pass into Hennepin County.

—In order to get through early it has been thought to begin the exercises of the Literary society promptly at 7:30. A good program has been prepared for next Tuesday evening and it is expected that every number will be given promptly. The program for the next meeting will be read at the meeting.

—It is not generally known that U. S. Grant was a debater. Some of our readers may become acquainted with his success in this line by reading an article on the inside of this paper. It seems most great men have been good in debate.

—Angus McEachran's little girl was taken sick with Diphtheria Sunday. The house was quarantined and everything done to prevent the spread of the disease. People can't be to careful about carrying such a contagious disease.

—Jas. R. Sutten, an old Delano boy who is now manager of the St. Louis branch of D. Appleton & Co, Publishers writes: "Am anxious to hear what is going on each week so keep me on the list." Jim has been in the employ of that firm for several years and is getting to the front, —Geoge P. Schaffer has now thoroughly established himself in the rear room of the Charley Eppel building where he will be pleased to wait upon his old customers and as many new ones as he can. If you don't see what you want call for it, as his goods are distributed around in three or four different rooms.

—It may be that the west side of N. Second St. will new take a boom and build up since more business buildings are needed in town. The lots there front the East, are pleasantly located, handy to the depot and would make good business places, besides adding much to the appearance of the town as viewed from the R. R.

—On Sunday and Monday a good fall of snow covered the ground. The morning train Monday from the west failed to come. A snow plow went west and things began to look winterish. On Tuesday morning the mecury hung close around zero and things felt considerably winterish. We have had about as much winter this week as any week this season.

--The village Council should secure another stove for the City Hall; one don't heat it. On Tuesday evening the stove was red hot for a while yet people in the rear of the hall left because it was cold. Several traveling companies have complained of the hall being too cold. And even the boys attending a dance there had to go to other places to get warm. There should be stoves enough to have people comfortable surley.

—The Literary meeting on Tuesday evening was well attended for a cold night, and an interesting session held. The people are anxious and hungry for literary food as is evidenced by their coming out and so patiently listening to what exercises are presented. The greatest difficulty seems to be with getting people to fill the program. Many are busy, and think they can't spare the time to prepare; but now that holidays are past things in this line will doubtless move more smoothly. If those who can would volunteer to occupy the time of those on the programme who are absent it would furnish a full programme each evening and materially help out.

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

--Tomorrow, Saturday January 9 will be Delano Fair Day.

--An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Boller was buried today from the Catholic church.

—All persons willing to take part in the exercises of the Literary society are requested to hand in their names to the Secretary and express their preference as to what part they will take. That will save the committee on program a lot of trouble in hunting around for some one to put on the program.

—Angus McEachran's little girl who has been sick with Diphtheria since Sunday, is now improving some. On Tuesday evening her life was dispared of. Dr. Chilton, of Howard Lake was called and with the assistance of Drs. Shrader and Catlin intubation was performed. The little sufferer has been improving ever since, and hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Personal.

Mr. Oliver smiled on his Delano friends this week.

The two Misses Becker visited Minneapolis Monday.

Rev. Sava visited Minneapolis on business Tuesday.

Dick Murphy, of Minneapolis, visited home this week.

C. J. Buckley made a business trip to Minneapolis Monday.

I. H. Harvey, of Rockford, was a GAZETTE caller yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Johnson visited Cokato friends last week.

Miss Grace O'Hair and Ed Freeman returned to the "U" Monday.

Miss Ethyl Guptil, of Rockford, visited old Delano friends Saturday.

Sidney Dostal, formerly operator here, visited Delano friends Thursday.

Miss Rose Harris, of St. Paul, visited Delano friends returning home Tuesday.

Messrs Cassel and Niefel, of Lyndale, made Delano a business visit Saturday.

Dr. E. Y. Chilton, of Howard Lake, made a consultation visit in Delano on Tuesday.

Miss Hattie Gross visited home for the holidays, returning to the St. Cloud Normal, Monday.

F. W. Gladden of R. G. Dunn & Co. Mercantile ageney called on Delano business men this week.

Mrs. Erb who has been sojourning for a season with her sister Mrs. Strauch has returned home

Dr. Halgren, his mother, and his sister Mrs. Dr. Shrader, of Watertown visited friends in Minneapolis, this week.

John Swedeback, of Two Rivers, came home with his mother, who had been visiting him last week. He returned Monday.

Mrs. M. A. Chance, fell down stars at her sister's, Mrs. Mulford's, last week. No harm done but several scares and a few bruises.

The School teachers succeeded in getting home from their holiday vacation except Prof. Hawker who placed too much "confidence" in the Interurban street car line and Jim Hill's ability to get him here on time Monday, and succeeded in getting tardy.

County Cullings.

The Court House is to be heated with stoves for a while yet. No steam heat at present.

The oldest daughter of Goy. Frank Briggs, of N. Dak., died in Minneapolis. Funeral today at Howard Lake.

Representative Dare has introduced a bill to redistrict the State. It is about time something in this line was done.

The new County officials have been installed. Sheriff Nugent appointed court deputies, A. O. Bryant, John Tracy, Peter Schaffer and Joe Reems.

On motion of the County Attorney the case of State vs. Trosch was dismissed. That's one for Tarbox so soon to put up against Cutting's long list.

F. B. Lampson has been appointed Assistant Sergeant at arms of the State Senate. This, of course, is Wright County's piece of pie for this session. Frank will make a good man for the place all right.

The argument of the motion to set aside the indictment of Howard took up the time of court for part of three days, then was denied The judge reserved until next Monday his decision as to whether or not he will certify the questions raised to the Supreme Court.

County Commissioner Johnson has been duly installed into office after all, and it turns out that he and his constituents were better posted as to whether or not he was a citizen of the United States than were some of the attorneys who were going to bust up the Grand Jury indictments because he was a member of that body.

County Attorney Tarbox opened up his batteries in the Howard case, and his constituents are anxiously waiting to learn if he meets with the same kind of success in prosecuting indited people that he claims Mr. Cutting did during his term of office. Should he allow Mr Howard to get clear he will have to hear about it often.

TWICE-A-WEEK COURRIER-JOURNAL.

Beginning the first of the new year, the Weekly Courrier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., will be changed to the Twice-a-week Courier-Journal. It will be published Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The paper will be six pages, or twelve pages a week, instead of ten pages weekly, as at present, an increase of 832 columns of matter during the year. The Wednesday issue will be devoted exclusively to news and politics, while the Satnrday issue will be strictly a family paper—filled with stories, miscellany, pictures, poetry, sketches, etc. The politics of the paper will not be changed, and the battle for pure Democracy and true Democratic principles will be continued successfully, in the future as in the past. In spite of the expence involved in the inprovements noted, the price of the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal will remain the same, one dollar a year, with liberal inducements to agents or to old subscribers who send in new ones. A feature during the coming year will be the editorials of Mr. Henry Watterson on political and other topics of the day.

BE A MAN.

(A Resolution for the New Year—Or Any Other Time.)

How many men go through the world
E'en as the beasts go through,
Unwilling to do aught save that
Which they're compelled to do—
Mere plodders in the beaten way,
Who only live from day to day—
Go though and be a man!

How many cross the earthly span,
And, when they die, at last
Leave naught behind to mark the ways
Along which they have passed—
Who, sleeping, dream and, walking, think
But of the things they eat and drink—
Go thou and be a man!

He is a man who sees ahead
A glorious height he would ascend—
Who makes the labors of the day
But serve as means unto an end—
Who with high purposes in mind,
Marks well the path he leaves behind—
'Tis grand to be a man!

Go then and be a beast no more!
Toil not, because you must, alone,
For thhre is a goal somewhere ahead
That you can strive to make your own!
Have some excuse for loving life—
Have hope to lead you through the strife—
Go though and be a man!

What though the goal is not attained
When he that seeks it sinks to rest?
Ah, yet he triumps in defeat,
For hope has bided in his breakfast!
Though death o'er take him on the way
He has been more than common clay—
'Tis hope that makes the man!
—Cleveland Leader.

CABINET builders are still at work, but until McKinley anounces his Cabinet it is hardly likely that anybody will know who they are.

THE New York Dispatch has been purchased by the Greater New York Publishing Company. The paper has been considerably changed in appearance.

IF the moneyed interests of a few citizens of the United States in Cuba, were out of the way the Cuban war would doubtless come to an abrupt termination very soon.

THE truth concerning the Cuban insurrection seems very hard to get at Too many conflicting interests make too many stories, made to suit the parties giving them.

JOHN LIND claimsto haye been elected Governor of Minnesota. Why don't some of the gold standard papers say like they do about Kansas that because the state elected a Populist Governor the banks are breaking and business is going to peaces?

AND still the tail wants to wag the dog. This time John P. Irish a gold standard democrat from California says he expects that the new gold stanbard party will soon take the name of the Democratic-Republican party

CONSUL to Cuba, Gen Lee, is said to deny the statements given out by Senator Money concerning his views on the Cuban question, and claims he sent no word by him but that his communications are made direct to the government officials.

GOV. CLOUGH has suspended Dr. Hewitt the Secretary of the State Board of Health for nearly a quarter of a century by appointing Dr. Regnolds, a veterinary surgeon. Since horse serum is all the fad there is nothing like having a man on the board of health who knows a horse when he sees it.

SOME of the political papers are advocating that people should read only their own party papers. That is a good way to keep things in the old rut. If only one side is read people grow narrow minded. They think what they read is all right and don't try to see where in it is lame. If both sides are read they compare notes. They do little thinking on their own hook, and often come nearer the truth than what they have read.

SOME of our "enterprising" citizens are lobbying around the committees of Congress on tariff legislation trying to have a tariff on such materials as enter into the construction of binding twine. How will that strike the Minnesota wheat raiser? Will our farmers gladly contribute from their wealth a cent or two a pound on their binding twine for the purpose of enriching a few big farmers who can make more raising flax, hemp, etc., provided they can get a big enough tariff on importations?

THE discovery by boys that the Minneapolis jail would not hold prisoners may result in having it fixed so is will by the time some of those in high places find their way into it.

GOV. NELSON found a road to the to the U. S. Senate. Who knows but if Senator Davis should get into the McKinley Cabnet Gov Clough would come prancing up to the Capitol to fill his old shoes?

THE Penny Press is to occupy the Century building in Minneapolis. This is centrally located and will make a good office. A weekly edition is to be issued. This is a good move. Peoin the country should have a home paper, and a big weekly from the city. Then they keep posted on the doings of the times.

IGNATIUS DONNELY, noted for springing sensations is out with a new one in the House. He wants an investigation into the act whereby the state to relinkuish its title to the land on which is the Mountain Iron Mine. It is to be hoped that if there is any thing in the matter it will be brought to light and the guilty parties be properly dealt with.

THE latest thing in the great republican argument of over productions is from a Dr. Hole, of Salem, Ohio. He argues that if over production is the cause of all our trouble and that manufacturing in different lines should be shut down that this must apply to the over production of people also, and advocates raising smaller families. How can there be an over production of both consumablet and consumers?

SENATOR WALCOTT has gone to England to look up an international monetary conference. The republicans promised they would use their best endeavors to bring about an international agreement to use both gold and silyer as money. In case they fail, which seems altogether likely, of course the people will yote next time for what they want, bimetallism, and let England have her single gold standard if she wants it.

DAVID B. HILL, Senator from New York has introduced a bill into the U. S. Senate, making the terms of 4th class Post Masters four yerrs. If an office becomes vacant and is filled by another it shall be for the unexpired term only. This would give each President an opportunity to have his friends for Post Masters. He should add that the P. M's. shall be elected by the pations of the offices. This would relieve Congressmen and other offiicials of a vast amount of trouble.

THE prosposition to pay a bounty for beet sugar made in Minnesota, from the state treasury is entirely wrong. The man who raises wheat, corn or oats, or cows, horses or swine is just as much entitled to aid from the state as is the sugar beet raiser. This state is said to be a good beet raising state, if so there should be no more need for everybody in the state to pay a few cents a pound more for sugar and force people to live on beet sugar, for the sake of having our farmers change from what they do raise. As for paying a bonus to get some beet sugar manufactories in the state it would be just as much in order to pay a bounty from the State Treasury to every man that will build an oat meal mill or even an ordinary grist mill.

QUITE a commotion has been stired up throughout the State by the action of Gov. Clough in appointing a successor to Dr. Hewitt the Secretary of the Board of Health, whose name is familiar with all who have dealings with the State Board of Health, and who has traveled in foreign lands in the interest of Sanatary science. Whose reputation is international, as an authority on the subject he has chosen to give the best years of his life to. He has the credit of making Minnesota's Board of Health one of the up to date and model boards of the country. The change was a great surprise to the medical men of the state. If a veterinary surgeon is necesary on the board a place could be had for him without retiring Dr. Hewitt. If the Governor has any good reasons for retiring the old Secretary they will doubtless be known before the Senate takes action on the appointment of his successor.

GOV. CLOUGH and the Senate are having kind of a Grover Cleveland of a time about appointments. As the Governer and most of the Senators were elected by the Republican party it would seem that they ought to work in harmony. The Senate voted to hold up appointments for three days before taking action. This would allow the dissatisfied to enter complaints. Of course there is bound to be some dissatisfied and complaints numerous. It has been customary for the Lieutenant Governor to announce his committees the first named to be cearman. But this don't seem to suit the disaffected of the Judicary committee and they propose to break away from preciddnt by electing their own chairman. Some fellow on the committee probably is sharpening up his weapons for a battle for Congress or some other fat office in two years from now and wants to derive experience in wire pulling, and the reputation of being a big man by having downed the Governor and his friends in something, not much matter what.

Money Talks.

Senator Money, of Minneapolis, lately returned from a visit to Cuba is reported to have given out as his opinon that the Spaniards are far from having the insurrection quelled. He thinks Maceo's army of 8000 fully armed men is still in the hills of Pinar del Reo, and that Consul Lee is of the same opinion. This may have a tendency to change the actions of the U. S. goyernment toward the Cubans.

Looks Different When You are Interested.

The New York Dispatch has all along been a very radical McKinley organ. Now that it has been sold, and changed hands it comes out as follows:

The storms of 1896 were the most destructive for a great period of time, over $14,000,000 worth of property was destroyed in that year.

The denuding of the country forests has changed the quality of both the air and the water.

The States, by stringent legislation, should regulate the cutting of all trees and forests. New York State is particularly interested in the subject. It effects our water ways, our chanels, our water supplies, streams and atmosphere and merits immediate and close attention.

Greater New York has only one source of potable water—the great Adirondacks water shed—and at the rate the forests are being stripped there is only one result possible—suffering by future generations due to our own stupidity and inaction.

The Legislation should at once recognize the facts and act before the majority of our forests have gone.

And yet our congressman from the Sixth Minnesota district and others are trying to have a $2 tariff put onto lumber so some rich lumbermen can grow richer faster at the expence of our poorer people, and make money cutting off our trees.

A Broken Back.

A broken back has heretofore been regarded as uncurable. At Marblehead, Mass., a man broke his by falling from a tree. The doctors strung him up by the head and shoulders and encased his body in plaster of Paris, and he is now a well and sound man. Though it is a great feat in surgery the cure is almost as bad as the injury. —St. Paul Dispatch.

In Delano Minn., a few years ago a man with a broken back, caused by a fall backwards from the rear of the stage from Buffalo, was treated more humanly. The enjury was in the small of the back and a hand could be placed between the disjointed vertobrae. The man was straightened out on a board and made as comfortable as possible He didn't remain on his splint long but got himself off into bead. Afterwards he was allowed to lie on the soft bed and by position being bolstered up as best could be done, he made a recovery. When he first began to stand on his feet he placed a hand on each hip, as a support and thus his arms supplied the place in a measure of his backbone. He eyently recovered so as to walk after the usual style. So broken backs, in Delano at least have not for years been regarded as incurable.

Among our Exchanges.

New York Dispatch: When women oppose a candidate, it is usually because of some grudge they feel against the women folks.

New York Dispatch: Our idea of something awful would be to become a great musician with long hair, and then get bald.

St. Cloud Times: MAY WHITE, the Minneapolis girl highwayman, plead guilty on Thursday, and was sentenced to the St. Cloud Reformatory. But, what will Supt. Houlton do with her?

Minneapolis Tribune: Senator Sherman expresses himself in empathic terms against the proposition to create a tariff commission. He thinks congress is a good enough tariff commission—and it certainly ought to be.

St. Paul Globe: Henry Watterson hit McKinleyism a body blow at the Jackson day banquet in Chicago last night when he said: "If taxing the whole people to pay tribute to a part of the people be not wrong, nothing is wrong."

Litchfield Independent: If there is pleuty of money in the country where is it? They used to say that the banks had it, but it has been demonstrated of late that some of these institutions haven't as much as they would like. The farmers certainly haven't got to much.

Wabasha Democrat: From Madrid comes the astounding news that Gen. Maximo Gomez and other Cuban leaders are ready to surrender to the Spaniards. It is probably as nearly true as most of the other news relating to the Cuban rebellion emanating from Spanish sources.

Penny Press: Minnetonka Lake is stocked with fish for the benefit of the people. In the summer our sportsmen go there and slaughter them by the wholesale, taking boat loads for the mere pleasure of the thing. When in the winter time the residents of the 'Tonka reagon catch for their own and their neighbors' use, the state swoops down on them and destroyes the shanties with which they shelter themselves from the storms. This is a great world.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8, 1897.

Andrew Jackson Day could not have been more enthusiastically observed at the annual banquet of the Jackson Democratic Assoication of Washington had the defeat of last November been a victory. In addition to the large number of prominent democratic guests of the association an innovation was introduced this year by inviting a woman—Mrs. Mary Donaldson Wilcox, daughter of A. J. Donaldson, who was private secretary to President Jackson. This lady enjoys the distinction of having been the first child born in the White House, and resides in Washington.

Presto! Change! Great is the power of public pap. The republican Senators who were expressing their willingness to have American blood—not their own, of course—shed, if necessary, to free Cuba from the tyranny of Spain, when Congress adjourned for the Christmas recess came back to their seats this week as meek as suckling lambs. They have heard from McKinley, and as far as they are concerned suffering Cuba can keep on suffering. Senator Call, of Fla., not having the fear of McKinley's anger to keep him mum, made a speech on his reolution, which was adopted, calling for the official correspondence in the case of Julio Sanguilly, a newspaper correspondent and citizen of the U. S., who has been sentenced to prison for life by the Spanish authorities, in which he did some very plain talking about the attitude of this government towards Cuba, and the delay of the Senate in acting upon the Cameron resolution.

The House passed the Loud bill depriving books and sample copies of newspapers of the privilege of second class mail, and is now wrestling with the Pacific Railroad funding bill, which the Huntington lobby is moving heaven and earth to get passed, as their last chance to prevent the foreclosing of Uncle Sam's mortgage on the Union Pacific railroad.

Senator Gibson, of Md., is indignant over the statement made by the Baltimore Sun that he had predicted the defeat of Senator Gorman and continued ascendency of the republicans in Maryland. After characterizing the publication as false and malicious, Senator Gibson said: "Instead of believing that the republican party is in control of Maryland for an indefinite time, I believe that it will not be long before the democratic party, which gave the State a splendid adminstration, is re called to power. Maryland has simply suffered from the wave that has overspread the country, and there will come a time when the wave will recede. The bolters from the democratic party in the State bear about the same relation to entire rank and file that the 120,000 Palmer democrats bear to the 6,500,000 who voted for Bryan."

Senator Allison, who was chairman of the U. S. delegation to the international monetary conference of 1892, said soon fater his return: "The sending of another American Commission in behalf of silver to the old world will be a farce, unless it is invited by Great Britain. I, for one, will never go again on such a bootless errand, no matter what is urged," Senator Allison has never said anything since to indicate that his mind has undergone any change on the subject.

Senator Jones, of Ark., and other prominent democrats are confident that the Senate in the next Congress will contain a majority of silver men, notwithstanding the extraordinary efforts of Mark Hanna to get a gold majority by the lavish use of money and of promises of patronage under the McKinley administration

Secretary Herbert's investigation of the cost of manufacturing steel armor plates, made by the direction of Congress to which his report was this week sent, doesn't show the Carnegie and Bethlehem Steel companies in a very complimentary light. They both refused to give the Secretary information until after they found that he had obtained it from European makers of armor; then, according to Secretary Herbert's report, they gave him misleading information. The report says the two establishments have made a combination to force the government to pay fancy prices for armor, and shows that they can furnish armor for one-third less than the government is now paying them and then make in the neighborhood of $150 on each ton. Secretary Herbert's report is being commended on all sides for its thoroughness and fearlessness. What effect it will have upon Congress will be seen when the Naval appropriation bill is taken up.

It is perhaps fortunate that this week is the last of the tariff hearings. Last week, those who appeared before the Ways and Means Committee only asked that the new tariff restore the McKinley duties, but this week a number of them had the cheek to ask that the McKinley rates be raised. After all, it is a grab game, and it is human to grab as much as you can.

INDEPENDENCE.

Not much news in this neck of the woods since election and the holidays.

John Cunningham of Greenwood member of our State Legislature was doing business in our town last Saturday. Mr. Cunningham said the Legislature had not got down to business yet, but would be ready for operation in a few days.

Elder Kelley and W. H. Jackson, of Rockford, are holding revival meetings at the A. C. Church, Armstrong.

M. G. Cobb, of Viola, Olmsted Co., Minn., was doing business in our town part of last week.

Gorden Granger Post 120 of Maple Plain and W. R. C. had installation of officers last Saturday afternoon.

W. W. Mills expects to start for the south next monday. Mr. Mills has been a resident of Independence for about forty years, and his family friends that he will leave behind, wish him and his family health and prosperity in their new home.

A little more snow would be a benefit to the sleighing.

Hard times still hang around the threshold and will not be lifted for some time to come.

Some say the fishing is quite good on the lakes now.

Wm. Mills Jr. and wife droye to Minneapolis last Sunday returning on Monday.

TWICE-A-WEEK COURRIER-JOURNAL.

Beginning the first of the new year, the Weekly Courrier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., will be changed to the Twice-a-week Courier-Journal. It will be published Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The paper will be six pages, or twelve pages a week, instead of ten pages weekly, as at present, an increase of 832 columns of matter during the year. The Wednesday issue will be devoted exclusively to news and politics, while the Saturday issue will be strictly a family paper—filled with stories, miscellany, pictures, poetry, sketches, etc. The politics of the paper will not be changed, and the battle for pure Democracy and true Democratic principles will be continued successfully, in the future as in the past. In spite of the expence involved in the inprovements noted, the price of the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal will remain the same, one dollar a year, with liberal inducements to agents or to old subscribers who send in new ones. A feature during the coming year will be the editorials of Mr. Henry Watterson on political and other topics of the day.

This morning's dailies haye reports that General Gomez stormed and captured the city of Santa Clara on Jan. 9, and is now moving on Hayanna with 18,000. It looks as if tho Insurgents are not all dead; nor eyen pacified.

The St. Cloud Times, of the 13th inst. says; "The axe again fell at the Great Northern repair shops last evening, and ninety men were laid off." "The reduction made last evening makes the total of the men who have been thrown out of work since the first of the year about 180." The Breckinridge line is also reducing forces. The men will remember the yellow literature circulated by the Rail Road Age, just before election, warning them of this state of affairs provided Bryan should be elected

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

The first day of January and the first day of October in any year fall on the same day of the week unless it be a leap year.

The newest thing in house letter boxes is a box with an electric attachment which will ring a bell in the kitchen when a letter is dropped in.

The mother and daughter who walked all the way from Spokane to New York on a wager have completed their journey of 4,600 miles. When women resolve to do a thing they generally do it.

The financial record doesn't mention the fact, but the year 1896 closed with a big stock of miserable old bachelors left over from the wreck. Too bad, when the land is full of beautiful girls.

Pedestrian Weston, 58 years old, recently finished a walk of 103 miles in 24 hours. He failed to cover the desired 112 miles; but how many men half his age could match his achievement?

The high silk hat as an article of apparel is now a hundred years old. Its centennial will be celebrated, doubtless, by an attempt to make the style of 1897 a little uglier than usual if possible.

There are more ways than one to get the girl one loves. A young Kentuckian got a license to marry, the girl's mother objected, and he got out a writ of habeas corpus to secure possession of his prize.

A Massachusetts man dreamt he was a burglar and shot himself after a violent struggle with himself in which he was victorious. This certainly should be regarded as conclusive proof of either the dual or duel nature of man.

Gov. Atkinson, of Georgia, has signed an anti-trust bill, recently passed by the legislature of that state, which puts under the ban all "arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts or combinations made with a view to lessen or which may tend to lessen" free competition in the importation, manufacture or sale of any article or product.

More than one-third of the entire population of the United States now live in cities. In some states it is much greater: In Massachusetts, 70 per cent.; in New York, 60 per cent.; in Connecticut, 54 per cent.; in New Jersey, 52 per cent. In 1790 there were but six "cities" (i. e., having a population of more than 8,000), in 1890 there were 448 such cities.

The latest enumeration of the animals known to science includes no less than 386,000 recognized species. The real number is believed to be very much larger. It has been estimated that of insects alone the earth harbors 2,000,000 species, but the late Prof. Riley regarded even that estimate as far too low. According to his opinion 10,000,000 would be a moderate estimate of the number of insect species.

Dairy Commissioner Anderson, of Minnesota, in his annual report to the state legislature, reveals dreadful things about the manufacture of spices. Pepper that is half ground stone, and mustard with an equal proportion of wood pulp, are among the exhibits he shows, and he urges the passage of a law giving his department control of this trade and power to prevent the sale of these vilely adulterated goods.

How near to realization is the dream of general disarmament and universal peace is shown by the decision that the French ministry ask that the army be increased by 160,000 men. That looks more like war than peace. But the other European nations will now in all probability increase their standing armies in the same ratio. Each will continue to bear a chip on its shoulder, and the others will be afraid to knock the chip off.

On the western coast of Africa they have a singular and always fatal malady known as the sleeping disease. The person attacked by it is seized with drowsiness, which continues to increase in spite of efforts made to throw it off. Finally the patient sinks into a profound sleep, which continues for about three weeks, or until death ensues. The pulse and temperature are normal and the patient may be easily aroused and will take nourishment. This seems to be the disease that affects many children during the hour before breakfast. The best prescription is an active and indignant father.

The death of Gen. Francis A. Walker removes one of the most useful and honored citizens of this country. He was born in Boston and was graduated at Amherst college, and almost immediately upon graduating, in 1861, he joined a Massachusetts regiment and served with such distinction as to rise to the rank of adjutant general and a brigadier generalship by brevet. The great success of his life was the organization and administration of the Masachusetts institute of technology, the most prominent school of its kind in the United States. Diplomas of that institution are a passport to any position.

Mr. Cramp, the Philadelphia shipbuilder, says that the cornstalks which farmers now throw away as useless can be made to yield an income of $225,000,000 annually on an acreage of 40,000,000. Mr. Cramp bases his assertion on the results of experiments made by chemists in his employ. These men have been working for two years on the theory that the constituent elements of the cornstalk could be utilized for making a cellulose with which to line ships and also into a form of smokeless gunpowder. Mr. Cramp also says that the stalks can be converted into alcohol, mattings, carpets, paper and superior cattle food.

The military academy appropriation bill was considered and a bill was passed fixing the minimum limit of capital for national banks in cities and towns between 50,000 and 3,000 inhabitants.

ARBITRATION TREATY.

A Plan Adopted by Great Britain and the United States.

Signed by Secretary of State Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote—King Oscar of Sweden Will Act as Final Arbitrator.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The Anglo-American general arbitration treaty was signed in the diplomatic parlor of the state department at 20 minutes past 12 by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote. The latter was accompanied by Lord Gough, secretary of embassy. The American witnesses were Chief of the Diplomatic Bureau Cridler and Private Secretary Blandford. The meeting was devoid of any spectacular proceedings, the two plenipotentiaries simply signing their names to the two copies of the important document, one of which will be sent to the senate for ratification and the other to Lord Salisbury by special messenger, who will sail on the Majestic from New York on Wednesday.

Copies of the signed treaty were prepared at the department of state for the action of congress and sent to the capitol before adjournment of either the house or senate.

Message of the President.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The president sent the following message to the senate Monday afternoon, transmitting the Anglo-American general arbitration treaty:

"To the Senate: I transmit herewith a treaty for the arbitration of all matters in difference between the United States and Great Britain. The provisions of the treaty are the result of long and patient deliberation and represent concessions made by each party for the sake of agreement upon the general scheme. Though the result reached may not meet the views of the advocates of immediate, unlimited and irrevocable arbitration of all international controversies, it is nevertheless confidently believed that the treaty cannot fail to be everywhere recognized as making a long step in the right direction and as embodying a practical working plan by which dispute between the two countries will reach a peaceful adjustment as matter of course and in ordinary routine. In the initiation of such an important movement it must be expected that some of its features will assume a tentative character looking to a further advance, and yet it is apparent that the treaty which has been formulated not only makes war between the parties to it a remote possibility, but precludes those fears and rumors of war which of themselves too often assume the proportions of a national disaster.

"It is eminently fitting as well as fortunate that the attempt to achieve results so beneficent should be initiated by kindred peoples, speaking the same tongue and joined together by all the ties of common traditions, common institutions and common aspirations. The experiment of substituting civilized methods for brute force as the means of settling international questions of right will thus be tried under the happiest auspices. Its success ought not to be doubtful, and the fact that its ultimate ensuing benefits are not likely to be limited to the two countries immediately concerned should cause it to be promoted all the more eagerly. The example set and the lesson furnished by the successful operation of this treaty are sure to be felt and taken to heart sooner or later by other nations, and will thus mark the beginning of a new epoch in civilization.

"Profoundly impressed as I am, therefore, by the promise of transcendent good which this treaty affords, I do not hesitate to accompany its transmission with an expression of my earnest hope that it may commend itself to the favorable consideration of the senate.

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

King Oscar Final Arbitrator.

It is learned that King Oscar, of Sweden, has been selected and will be named in the general arbitration treaty as the final arbiter in case of a tie vote by the arbitration tribunal on any matter. He either will sit or hear the matter in dispute himself, or will name a deputy who will act as the final arbiter. The treaty is to run for five years, and thus the Swedish king, for that length of time, will be the final umpire of all disputes between the two great English-speaking nations.

The last step, aside from ratification of the treaty by the congress of Venezuela, necessary to give effect to the Venezuelan arbitration agreement between the United States and Great Britain has been completed by the formal assent of King Oscar, of Sweden, to the clause of the arbitration convention which makes him the final arbitrator in case the other members of the tribunal are unable to agree. The congress of Venezuela will meet in February, and, while there has been some objections raised in Venezuela to the arrangement for a settlement, it is understood that these objections are not potent enough to prevent ratification of the agreement in the face of its strong indorsement by President Crespo and the members of his cabinet.

Provisions of the Treaty.

The treaty as drawn and agreed to by Mr. Olney and Ambassador Pauncefote covers these points:

1. It establishes a high court of arbitration. This commission is composed of three members of the supreme court of the United States, to be chosen by the president, and of three members of the high court of appeals of Great Britain, to be elected by the prime minister.

2. The treaty is to be operative for a period of five years from the date of the exchange of ratifications.

3. The court of arbitration shall have exclusive jurisdiction over all questions between the two countries on which differences are now pending or which may arise during the life of the treaty, with the exception of the Behring sea question and the Venezuelan dispute.

4. No dispute involving national honor or sovereignty is to be submitted to the arbitration commission.

The Alaska boundary and other boundary questions not otherwise disposed of are to be included in the list of questions to be submitted for final arbitration. It is proposed that the tribunal shall also act as a claims commission.

The National Democracy.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Following the Jackson banquet of Friday night, the national democracy held an important conference on Saturday, at which Gen. Simon B. Buckner presided. Nine states were represented, Missouri, Nebraska, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and California. A resolution was adopted declaring that the conference recommends and requests that the national democrats in every state perfect at once their local organizations in every county and prepare to put tickets in the field in the coming state elections.

A Fatal Fall.

Baltimore, Jan. 8.—Miss Ida V. Hoagland, private secretary to Miss Mary Garrett, was killed by falling down an elevator shaft in Miss Garrett's mansion on West Monument street Thursday. Her skull was fractured and she was otherwise badly injured. Miss Hoagland was about 30 years of age and a resident of Philadelphia.

Bombay's Awful Experience.

Bombay, Jan. 9.—The Times, of India, in an article on the bubonic plague, which is ravaging the city, says that since the outbreak of the plague the population of Bombay has been reduced one-half and the weekly mortality has averaged 200 per 1,000.

CLEARS THE WAY.

Collapse of Unsound Concerns Is Good for Business.

New York, Jan. 9.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"The year 1897 begins with one clear advantage—the past year has swept out of the way a great many unsound concerns which in any time of activity would have been dangerous to business. Of the 15,286 commercial and banking failures in 1896, with liabilities of $276,815,749, a large share represented crippling losses in previous years, or the violence of speculative storms in 1895 or the first half of 1896, while thousands more resulted from the fury of the political tornado last fall. Banking failures amounting to $50,718,915 during the year averaged $256,156 each, and were 145 per cent. larger than in 1895.

"Commercial failures amounted to $226,096,834, a little over $1,000,000 having been added by the last day of the year, but the average of liabilities, $14,592, was smaller than in some years of great prosperity. The failures of brokerage and other commercial concerns averaged $58,418 each, increasing 183 per cent. over 1895, while manufacturing failures averaged $28,808 each, and increased 34 per cent., and trading failures increased not 18 per cent. and averaged only $9,606 each.

"While banking failures have not ceased at the west, apprehension about them has almost wholly subsided and no serious influence upon general trade is now expected. Many sound concerns were doubtless caught by the epidemic, but practically all the important failures are traced to disregard of law and of banking sense at periods somewhat distant.

"It is felt at the west that all business will be sounder after the purging, and the return of money to New York has exceeded shipments to the interior by $2,050,000 for the week. Heavy disbursements by the treasury and by great corporations make money abundant, and banks and savings banks are seeking good paper, taking some formerly sold at Chicago. Foreign exchange has risen a trifle, as large bills are about to mature. Merchandise exports were 11 per cent. over last year, while imports were 27 per cent. less than for the same week.

"The speculative market has been dull. After rising about 50 cents per share and $2 for trusts, stocks were checked by revival of talk about Cuba at Washington and by reduction of the dividend on the Delaware & Hudson. Earnings reported for December amount to $31,121,905 in the United States alone, 24 per cent. less than in 1895. The railway receiverships noted by the Railway Age cover $2,821,509,900 stocks and bonds in the years 1893-96, and $2,094,535,000 in the previous nine years; foreclosure sales of the past three years cover $2,231,157,000, against $1,673,044,000 in the previous ten years.

"Wheat rose to 92c on Monday, but has declined again to 89.25c, with western receipts 1,000,000 bushels smaller than last year, while Atlantic exports, flour included, were 2,027,900 bushels, against 2,337,936 last year. The trade accounts indicate a great quantity in farmer's hands, enough to permit more than 100,000,000 bushels to be exported in the remaining six months

"Cotton started up a shade, but receipts from plantations are still too large for low estimates, and the condition of the cotton mills foreshadows curtailment rather than large consumption. The market for goods is extremely slow, as many infer that the unprecedented stocks of print cloths indicate a similar surplus of other goods. The logic is bad, but in many branches the mills have doubtless manufactured goods anticipating a demand which has not come. It is now proposed to relieve the market by selling quantities of print cloths abroad, or by locking up 2,000,000 pieces until the market improves. The only change in quotations is ⅛c. reduction in some bleached goods.

"Prices of wool are a shade lower, and quotations by Coates Bros. are compared, showing a decline in six years of 16 cents in prices of northern states' wool, with relatively as great decline in western and territory wool, which goes far to explain the large reported stocks, and quantities held by manufacturers are probably larger than is commonly supposed. In woolen goods the only change is a reduction of 7½c. in clay worsteds and mixtures, and orders are not more frequent.

"Orders for boots and shoes have almost ceased, except for a few qualities, which have been advanced only 2½ to 5c. in price, but jobbers are buying a little more as stocks run low. Leather is stiff and hides a shade stronger.

"Enormous purchases of billets come with a rush, most of the large concerns contracting for all they required for months, and even a year to come, and some of the largest contracts are said to have been at $15 or even less, but there is as yet no better demand for structural work; bars are weak, nails have declined to $1.40 for wire and $1.30 for cut, and little is doing in rails, as possible buyers think $25 is too high with billets at $15 per ton. Nevertheless a great trade is expected when relative prices become settled."

Six Drowned in Missouri.

St. Louis, Jan. 9. — A special from Plato, Mo., says that one man and five children were drowned in Texas county last Saturday, as a result of the floods in that section of Missouri. Thomas Wilson, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Kinnery, and her five children, attempted to ford Prairie creek, which was very high as a result of recent rains. The team became unmanageable and soon lost their footHold. The wagon, weighted with its load of human freight, sank, and the sideboards floating away the whole party were thrown into the water. Mr. Wilson and Mrs. Kinnery succeeded in getting to the shore, but the children were drowned. Three of the bodies were recovered Thursday.

Daniel McGlotheran was drowned the same day while trying to cross Mill creek.

Mob Law in South Carolina.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 9.—Simon Cooper, who killed four persons in the vicinity of Sumter Thursday, betrayed by his half-brother and uncle, was located in his uncle's house, five miles from Sumter early Friday morning and the building surrounded by a posse of 20 men under Sheriff Pierson, of Sumter. Cooper kept the men at a safe distance with a Winchester rifle; none dared to rush on what seemed certain death. The sheriff telegraphed the conditions to the governor and asked that a cannon with solid shot and supply of long-range rifles be sent to him on a special train. Gov. Evans replied that no cannon was available, and ordered Cooper's capture dead or alive. Balked in this, the sheriff got a cannon in Sumter, but while it was being conveyed to the seat of war Cooper was killed.

River Breaks Into the Lake.

Decatur, Neb., Jan. 11.—At last the Missouri river has broken into Lake Quinnebaugh, and what was once a big body of inland water by next summer will be nothing but barren land. Lake Quinnebaugh was noted for its abundance of fish and its excellent fall game shooting, and for the past ten years Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis sportsmen have camped there. Saturday Mrs. Wilts Williams had just crossed the neck of land which separates the river from the land when it broke away. Her horse was drowned and the old woman barely escaped with her life.

Operations Resumed.

Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 11.—The Cambria rail mill No. 1, the 12 and 16-inch mills and the scrap mill will resume operations to-day, giving employment to many idle men. The Cambria steel mill was put in blast Sunday night. Two hundred men will also go to work this morning at the Johnson company's steel motor works.

Two Banks Suspend.

Preston, Minn., Jan. 8.—The Bank of Canton, at Canton, with a capital of $10,000, and the Citizens' bank, of Lanesboro, both owned and operated by Field, Kelsey & Co., have suspended business.

JACKSON DAY.

Anniversary of the Capture of New Orleans Celebrated by Democrats.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—William J. Bryan was the guest of the Bryan league at a banquet given Thursday night at the Tremont house celebrating the anniversary of Jackson's victory at New Orleans. Four hundred democrats who believe in the Chicago platform assembled in the large dining-hall. Their enthusiasm when the name of Mr. Bryan was mentioned was unbounded and a flattering display of admiration followed his rising to speak to the toast "Andrew Jackson." It was originally intended to have the banquet on Friday, which is the actual Jackson day anniversary, but Mr. Bryan had received a previous invitation to attend a banquet in Omaha that night and he accepted, giving Thursday night to the Chicago democrats. The speech making began after midnight purposely. Carter H. Harrison, president of the Bryan league, acted as toastmaster. He introduced Mr. Bryan who spoke at considerable length. Among other things he said:

"The fact that Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, has been sent abroad by the president-elect as an ambassador most extraordinary to bring Europe to bimetallism is an evidence that the gold standard is still concealing its blessing from the American people. If the gold standard is the standard of civilization, why should we risk a return to barbarism by chasing after international bimetallism? If Senator Wolcott succeeds in stirring up a silver agitation in England he will be accused of disturbing business and destroying confidence in that great center of financial confidence, London. If his errand proves a fruitless one, it will only give additional evidence that the United States must act alone. If our opponents succeed in bringing about bimetallism they will relieve us of a great deal of labor and enable us to turn our attention to other reforms. If, on the other hand, they fail to restore bimetallism, after confessing that bimetallism is desirable, we may expect the American people to join with us in the opening of our mints to free and unlimited coinage at sixteen to one, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation."

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Choosing the anniversary of "Old Hickory's" victory at New Orleans instead of his birthday, representative members of the national democratic party from the ten middle and western states, who fought for principle and the gold standard under the banner of Palmer and Buckner, assembled 350 strong Friday night in the banquet hall of the Auditorium hotel to celebrate alike the birthday of Andrew Jackson, the victory over Bryan and free silver and renew pledges of adherence to the Indianapolis platform. The occasion was made notable by the presence of the party's nominee for vice president, Gen. Simon B. Buckner, of Kentucky; Hon. Charles S. Hamlin, of Massachusetts, assistant secretary of the treasury, and Hon. Henry Watterson, Louisville. The banqueters were also honored by having read to them letters from the president of the United States, from his secretary of agriculture, Hon. J. Sterling Morton, and the standard bearer of the party in the recent campaign, Senator John M. Palmer, and telegrams from Secretaries Wilson and Francis and others prominent in the party.

The letter which President Cleveland wrote to Franklin MacVeagh, of Chicago, toastmaster at the Jacksonian feast in lieu of his presence was as follows:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, Jan. 4, 1897.—Franklin MacVeagh, Esq., Chairman, etc., Chicago.—My Dear Sir: I regret that official duties prevent my acceptance of the invitation I have received on behalf of the national democrats of the middle states to attend their Jackson day banquet on the 8th inst. When passion and prejudice threatened to obscure the meaning of true democracy and pervert its patriotic purposes, a reunion of those who are democrats for the sake of principle and the good of their country cannot fail to be inspiring and useful. On an occasion when the character and achievements of Andrew Jackson are commemorated, the old landmarks of democratic faith should be distinctly pointed out. At such a time it should be impressively taught that democracy is not disorder; that its regard for popular rights does not mean the care of only a portion of our people; that its loyalty to the constitution and laws does not mean a petulant challenge of the duty of civic obedience; that its aggressiveness does not mean class hatred and sectional vituperation, and that its success should never mean mere partisan triumph, at the sacrifice of principle and patriotism. Yours very truly, "GROVER CLEVELAND."

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 9.—The Jacksonian club of this city gave a banquet Friday evening in honor of its patron saint, Hon. W. J. Bryan was the leading speaker. Among other things he said:

"While we are not in a position to secure such national legislation as we believe to be best, we are in a position in many states to secure the enactment of laws which will be both helpful to the public now and an aid in subsequent efforts to bring about national reforms. Let me suggest a law, which it seems to me the last campaign has shown the need of. It is a well-known fact that many corporations contributed large sums to the republican campaign fund. In some instances banks gave liberally, and justified the contribution on the ground they were protecting the interests of the depositors. I believe that we should adopt a law, where we have the power to do so, preventing corporations from contributing to campaign funds or taking any part in politics. A corporation is a creature of law. It is called into existence for business, not for political purposes. While an individual is justified in contributing money to aid in legitimate campaign work, a corporation is not. Until a bank pays its depositors in full, it is impossible to tell whether it is contributing its own or its depositors' money. In large corporations the stockholder finds that his own money is being used often for the defeat of his own political principle. Corporations should be made to keep out of politics."

Slain on the Guinea Coast.

London, Jan. 12.—The foreign office has received private confirmation of the news from Bonney, on the Guinea coast, telling of the massacre of Consul Philips and his companions while on a peaceful mission to Benin City. The news has created a sensation, as the victims are well known here. Lord Salisbury came to the foreign office especially from Hatfield house to receive the earliest official details and to consider them. It is stated in the foreign office advices that the party was unarmed when it left the consulate at Benin on the west side of the Niger, traveling toward the Adamagu country. They were surprised on the frontier territory at Benin City, where they were fired upon suddenly and massacred. The object of the murder is not known.

Victoria's Preference.

London, Jan. 12.—The prince of Wales in response to requests made to him for advice as to the most fitting plans for celebrating the occasion of the completion of the sixtieth anniversary of the queen's reign, has caused to be announced that he is confident that her majesty would prefer that the occasion should be marked by works of mercy among the sick and suffering, embracing any movement tending to brighten the lives and ameliorate the condition of the queen's poor subjects.

Glass Works Start Up.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 12.—The works of the Baltimore Glass company were started on full time after being idle since last June. Employment was given to 200 hands.

ONLY LIVE ROBBERS.

Postoffice Department Does Not Pay Rewards for Dead Ones.

Some very curious cases have been decided by the law department relating to awards for the capture of robbers of postoffices. Mr. Milliken has just rendered a decision against a claimant at California, Mo., where a postoffice safe was robbed. In such cases the department pays $200 each for the conviction of the persons engaged in the robbery. There were five persons concerned in the affair, but the authorities had no clew to the men. It happened, however, that the guilty persons were in a saloon some time afterward, and one of them got into a dispute with a farmer and a lively row ensued, in which the farmer shot and killed the man. The other men ran out, but were captured by other persons, not because they were possoffice robbers, but because they were engaged in the row.

It turned out on examination that the man who was killed was the ringleader of the robbers and had the bulk of the booty on his person. His death resulted in proving complicity in the robbery upon the other four men. The men who captured the four have been allowed $800. The farmer made application for $200, but it is held that the reward being offered for the "arrest and conviction" of the robbers, he cannot be paid the amount. The dead robber was neither arrested nor convicted of the offense. Mr. Milliken said that it was rather hard, but, under the law, he could do nothing else.

SHALL WE SPANK?

This Question Is Agitating the Minds of Chicago People.

Our flagging interest in the great sociological problem, "Shall Our Children Be Spanked?" has been revivified by the battle now raging between Mrs. Washburne and a gentleman in Connecticut. We are sorry that this conflict of opinion did not exist at that period of life of which we are accustomed to speak, poetically and with dreamy reminiscence, as "our halycon days," as we are convinced that in this event we should have saved ourselves a measure of mental trepidation and bodily discomfort. Concerning the merits of the debate we do not feel at liberty to pass judgment, but we are reasonably sure that could we be a child again we should "tie to" Mrs. Washburne. Yet the Conneticut gentleman seems to be a man of experience and practical knowledge and we must make all allowence for conditions as we find then. Some children are born to be spanked, seme achieve spankings and some have spankings thrust upon them. It is a very difficult and delicate matter to draw the line, particularly when it is a clothesline. Let us dismiss the matter as one of the neversettled troubles of humanity, the spankers as well as the spankee, for are we not all born to trouble as the spanks fly downward? —Chicago Post.

They Were Ready.

One of the district schools trustees was a crank on the subject of fire, and when he called around with the examining board he always confined his remarks to a question addressed to the pupils as to what they would do in case the building should catch fire.

The teacher was acquainted with his hobby, so she prompted her scholars as to the answer they should give when he arose to propound his accustomed inquiry.

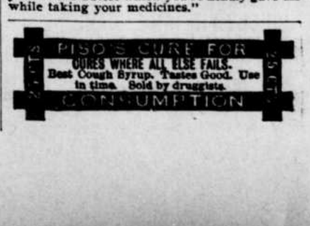
When the board called, however, this particular trustee, perhaps from a desire to emulate his associates in thier addresses rose and said:

"You boys and girls have paid such nice attention to Mr. Jones remarks, I wonder what you would do if I were to make you a little speech?"

Quick as thought a hundred voices piped in unison:

"Form in line and march down stairs."

It sounds real funny to hear an old physician called Mister.—Washington Democrat.



Beauty is the power which captivates the strongest natures.

A woman's personal attractiveness is the weapon with which she conquers her world. Almost every woman believes that she possesses at least some one attractive feature and strives to make the most of that. But mere regularity of feature is not the most attractive form of beauty.

Mankind is more influenced by the bright glowing vitality of perfect health. A classic cast of countenance will not make a woman attractive and captivating, if she is pale, thin, weak and nervous, or has a pimply complexion or unwholesome breath.

These complaints are due to imperfect nutrition. The digestive and blood-making organs fail to extract the needed nourishment from the food, and the liver is too sluggish to cleanse the blood of bilious impurities. The entire constitution becomes weak and poisoned.

The only perfect antidote for this state of things is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It gives power to the digestive and nutritive organs to make an abundance of pure, rich, highly vitalized blood, which permeates the whole system with the sweetness of purity; the beauty of womanly vigor and animation.

It creates solid, healthy flesh and natural color; clears the complexion; dispels wrinkles; rounds out the form and imbues the whole physique with the irresistible natural magnetism of perfect health.

Miss Julia Ellis, of Faith, McLean Co., Ky., writes: "After suffering for a long while with a lingering disease, I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's medicines. I took seven bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription' and found relief. Life is now no longer a burden to me. I weigh 120 pounds. A year ago I weighed 92 pounds. I shall praise Dr. Pierce's medicines wherever I go. I feel better than ever before. My health was very much impaired, and I feel that I owe a great deal to your wonderful medicines. I truly believe they saved my life. I thank you for the advice which you so kindly gave me while taking your medicines."

IN MEMORY'S MIRROR.

A little curl'd head in the rectory pew,
A young face glowing with boyish pride,
A lancet of glass where the sun peers through
From the great green world outside.
There's a glimmer of sky 'twixt the wind-stirred trees,
A swallow darts past upon widespread wings,
And the child's thoughts float with the bird and the breeze
'Mid dreams of wonderful things.

The grave voice pleads from the pulpit high,
The windows burn like a sheet of fire,
And a great red admiral butterfly
Flits over the drowsy squire.
There's a subtle fragrance of mignonette
From the graveyard, tended with loving care,
Like a mingling of hope with the sharp regret
For those that are sleeping there.

The clock in the belfry is chiming four,
The rustic worshipers go their way,
And the organ uplifts once more
A hymn for the dying day.
And the boy treads lightly the echoing flags,
And frets, as only a young heart can,
That Life moves slowly and Time's foot lags
Ere the child can put on the man.

A soul that looks through a mist of tears,
As one that straineth his eyes to see,
And seeks far off in the shadowy years
Himself as he used to be—
An innocent self that he used to know
Ere the seasons had rounded a double seven,
And the marvelous earth was still a-glow
With the mystical light of Heaven.

The day is waning, the night draws near;
The traveler, sighting the goal at last,
Looks backward where memory mirrors clear
The face of the vanished past.
Oh, well for the soul that, 'mid life's loud din,
It walked with raiment yet undefiled,
That the heart of the man is still akin
To the stainless heart of the child!

BIDDY'S WAGER.

BY G. D. DUNHAM.

THE owners of the O. K. ranch worked their men early and late throughout the summer, but in the winter months the whole duty of man was comprised in riding the pastures and waiting for spring. A man good enough or lucky enough to be retained throughout the winter was on velvet. Of ten men usually kept through, two were sufficient to ride the pastures and keep the fences in repair; eight could wait for spring.

There were other vocations, such as learning to fiddle. Rime Jenks worked at that for years. The third season I asked him if he could yet play any tunes. "Not yet," said he, hopefully; "but I can start a few."

There was always some card playing, there was some reading, and an occasional trip to town. The youngsters did considerable letter writing to correspondents secured through a matrimonial paper known on the range as the Gizzard and Fist. These various industries were ad libitum; the one occupation which never palls on the cowboy who has worked hard all summer, and whose pay is going right on through stormy weather, is waiting for spring.

The O. K. ranch lay in a narrow and fertile valley, and at about this time the encroachment of actual settlers began to perplex the owners and annoy the men. In one season a great part of the valley had been preempted, and where last year was an unlimited open water front, with not a house in sight, it had became dotted with settler's cabins and notices to keep off the grass. Only eight miles below the ranch, in a bend of the river where we had many a time held a bunch of cattle while cutting out, a schoolhouse had been built. When settlers come to stay, the big cattle herds have to move on. Schoolhouses are pretty good evidences of permanent settlement.

This opened for the first time in charge of a teacher imported for the position from "the states," and every man on the ranch rode around that way to inspect the fences. A bright-eyed, fresh-faced girl is a pleasant sight to a man, whether he be afoot or on horseback, and as she stood in the door, with a look of curiosity as to what manner of men were these trooping by, any man of the company would have given his boots for the right to doff his hat and say: "Good-morning!"

After we had passed by Robert raised the question whether he, as the old man of the party, should not have done so. "I don't think," he said, "that we showed proper respect to the young lady to all go by a-looking out of the corner of our eye and nary a man saying a word."

The boys laughed, but Robert was serious.

Then Biddy offered him a wager. "I'll bet you that I get a letter from that girl before you do."

"Biddy, you're a fool," said Robert; "that's a sensible girl, and you been so locoed with them correspondents in the Gizzard and Fist you don't know enough to know you'll never get a letter from a sensible girl. I'll take your bet, and if you don't get your letter in one month you got to do my work all winter."

"Done," said Biddy.

On reflection Biddy would not have offered such a wager. The beauty of Biddy's character was that his second thoughts came so long after his first thoughts that there was time for much action between. In the matter of this bet he took action at once by writing under an assumed name to the teacher about three of his children residing in another county and asking on what terms they would be received into her school. In due time his letter was answered by the trustee to whom it had been referred. He next wrote Miss Bell, saying he understood she wished to buy a saddle horse, and might he bring one for inspection. No answer to this.

Finally he tried what he could do at shorter range. He secured an introduction to the lady, met her several times, and presently his second thoughts began to stir. What seemed to him easy enough on the day he rode by the schoolhouse was now impossible. He did not see how he could have become involved in such an attempt. He heartily scorned himself. Riding home in this mood, which he fancied showed rather fine feeling, but which really arose from conscious failure, Biddy looked up Robert to acknowledge himself beaten, but Robert was off to town and did not show up again until after Christmas.

Robert, who had ridden by the schoolhouse many times since the term began, had happened to read a newspaper item about a Christmas custom in some foreign land, of sending gifts to the most beautiful lady. I suppose it was a fairy tale, for there never has been in any place any one most beautiful lady, but it struck Robert as an eminently proper custom. He cut the item out: he rode by the school house once again to confirm his judgment; he made his dispositions accordingly.

On Christmas morning, the young teacher was surprised to find at her door Robert's best horse, with saddle and bridle, and a note saying that Robert sent them on the authority of the inclosed newspaper slip; that he really could use the horse no longer—too old—and would she do him the favor to take the old swayback off his hands?

Miss Bell, who was learning to use a typewriter, sat down to the machine and wrote a note of thanks declining the horse as a gift, but accepting the use of him for the winter, and assuring Mr. Robert that she was not the lady referred to in the story.

Two days later Robert brought this letter into the mess house while the boys were at supper.

"I've beat you," said he to Biddy. "I didn't want no letter, and I didn't expect none; but here it is, and she thinks I can't read writing—it's printed."

"Why, that thing," said Scotty, "is no letter. That's a circular. She sends them out to every fellow who gives her a horse."

"That's straight," said another; "I hear she has a whole band of saddle

"I'VE BEAT YOU," SAID HE.

horses down in Johnson's pasture."

"Boys, shut up," said Robert, gently. "I'll leave it to the foreman whether I win."

The foreman decided that a printed communication is not a letter, and, as Biddy had received no letter, that both had lost the wager.

That night the boys considered the matter over their pipes, and rendered the unanimous opinion that betting is immoral when you lose, and that Robert and Biddy, having both lost, should ride the pastures all winter while the rest of us waited for spring.—G. B. Dunham, in San Francisco Argonaut.

THE KING WAS ENRAGED.

But When the Chef Told Him What There Was for Dinner He Subsided.

There was no question but that the cannibal king was highly enraged, for his face, distorted with passion, resembled one of Aubrey Beardsley's posters and his nose ring quivered violently.

He strode up and down the imperial dugout, his Trilby heart flopping back and forth as he walked, and cut savagely at the surrounding atmosphere with a small riding crop which had been presented to him by an English gentleman who had since gone into the interior.

The king viciously punched an electric bell.

The royal purveyor appeared and advanced on his hands and knees.

"Caitiff!" roared the savage chieftain, "how is it that you dare to break my rule, to oppose my royal will, to disobey my specific commands? How is it, I ask, that boiled missionary appears as the only important dish on my bill of fare to-day?"

The purveyor executed a grovel which eclipsed all his former efforts in that direction.

The king appeared mollified. "I mean about seasoning," he explained, nibbling on a conversation candy. "I fear that he will not be exactly up to my standard—so mild a man!"

The purveyor looked relieved.

"I thought," he said, humbly, "that with ragout a la French novelist—"

He paused.

"Capital!" cried the king, with undisguised joy, and pinning the latest button to the lapel of his faithful servant's toga, "French novelist!"

He smacked his lips in anticipation.

"Spicy? Well!"

It was evident that the South sea Delmonico had scored another triumph.—N. Y. Journal.

MINNESOTA SOLONS.

The Legislature Organizes and Gets Down to Work.

Everything Running in a Smooth Manner After the Adjournment—Temperance Bills Presented—Looking After the Banks.

St. Paul, Jan. 11.—It is usual when there is an evening session after a three days' adjournment of the legislature, to find no quorum present, or if a quorum, no business presented. Tonight was an exception to the rule. The senators were loaded with considerable business, but the extinguishing of the electric lights suppressed what was intended. There has been something of concealed sensation over the probability that Lieut.-Gov. Gibbs would place Senator Sheehan, of St. Paul, at the head of the judiciary committee, instead of Hiram F. Stevens, also of St. Paul, who was chairman two years ago. This broke out tonight by Senator Greer offering a resolution authorizing the judiciary committee to elect its own chairman. The resolution went over on a notice of debate, but it was evidently the muttering of a coming storm.

In the house a good deal of industry was displayed, seven bills being presented. The temperance people have entered the field early, as one of the bills offered provides for a vote on local option by counties instead of by towns. The indications are there will be a big contest over this bill, as the towns which now have license do not want to take the chances of being overthrown by the county vote. Another bill, born of adversity, regulates banks, limiting the loans, and also kindly providing for sending bank officers to the penitentiary. It places limitations also on the liabilities of stockholders, and prudently provides against the loaning of the bank to officers and directors. In view of the recent bank failures, this measure will attract much attention during the session, and some bill placing greater restrictions and safeguards about the banks will undoubtedly be passed.

Routine Report.

St. Paul, Jan. 5.—The legislature of Minnesota convened today with little ceremony of special consequence. The organization was perfected by the election of the following:

Secretary—S. A. Langum.

First Assistant Secretary—A. D. Countryman.

Second Assistant Secretary — H. S. Barrows.

Enrolling Clerk—B. M. Brown.

Engrossing Clerk—J. E. Peterson.

Chaplain—Rev. Dr. Robert Forbes.

Sergeant-at-arms—H. E. Gibbon.

Assistant Sergeant-at-arms — F. B. Lampson.

H. H. Dunn, of Fairmont, presented his credentials, asking to be sworn in to fill vacancy claimed to exist by the election of Senator Day as lieutenant governor two years ago. The matter was referred to the committee on elections.

A resolution was adopted for a joint committee to prepare a plan for reapportionment of the state.

Senators Yale, Dunham and Smith were appointed a committee to notify the governor that the senate was organized and prepared to receive any message which he may have for that body. The committee reported that at 11 o'clock tomorrow the governor would be ready to deliver his message to the house and senate, jointly.

The house was convened at noon by Secretary Berg. Henry Feig was appointed secretary pro tem. The hall of representatives has been renovated and put in order for the winter, and seems as comfortable as it can be made. For some time before noon the house was filled with members and spectators and candidates for minor positions.

Organization was perfected as follows:

Speaker—J. D. Jones, Long Prairie.

Chief Clerk—M. J. Dowling, Renville.

First Assistant Clerk—W. B. Stine, Slayton.

Second Assistant Clerk—O. K. Dahl, Houston.

Engrossing Clerk—M. H. Ingersoll, Brainerd.

Enrolling Clerk—F. S. Krayenbuhl, St. Paul.

Postmaster—F. W. Nash, Mankato.

Sergeant-at-arms—J. M. Bayer, Moorhead.

Assistant Sergeant-at-arms—E. Fanning, Stewartville.

Chaplain—C. M. Heard, Minneapolis.

Representative Dare presented a resolution providing for a joint committee of house and senate on reapportionment.

Notice was filed of a contest between George L. Dingman and Mathias Lellman, Minneapolis, which was left with the clerk until the proper committee should be appointed.

Mostly all the afternoon session was occupied by selection of seats, and adjournment was taken until Wednesday at 10,30 a. m.

St. Paul, Jan. 6.—The senate almost as soon as the opening exercises were finished took a recess, and when the reading of the governor's message was finished adjourned until the morning of the 12th. A nominal session will be held tomorrow morning to legalize the recess. President Gibbs will not announce his committees until next week.

The house met promptly at 10:30 and after roll call and reading of the minutes prepared to receive the governor and senate. As soon as the joint session was organized Gov. Clough entered. Advancing to the clerk's desk the governor took the oath of office administered by Chief Justice Start. The message was then delivered and the house adjourned.

St. Paul, Jan. 7.—The senate reached the introduction of bills today. The first placed on the calendar was by Senator Wyman of Minneapolis, appropriating $14,000 for legislative expenses, which was put to its passage under suspension of the rules.

The most important measure introduced was a resolution by Senator Theden of Hennepin, leveled against department stores, providing for an investigation into their methods of doing business, and what ought to be done, if anything, to restrain them.

The house has proceeded as far as it can well go until its committees are appointed, and in its session yesterday an adjournment was taken over until Monday.

Of the four bills introduced in the house two were for the repeal of the struck jury law. Representative Stockwell, of Minneapolis, has for some time been in the public eye as the probable author of the bill which would be presented for the repeal of the struck jury statute, but a Duluth man beat him out in very pretty shape. There is strong feeling in the house in support of the bill to repeal the present law and it will at least be modified in some form unless the present surface indications prove very deceiving.

The credit of the first bill went to Mr. Ferris. It provides for a repeal of the John Day Smith break-o'-day hanging statute.

A bill was introduced by Mr. Foss, to provide for taxation on inheritances.

St. Paul, Jan. 11.—The senate had a fair attendance this evening, only 10 absentees being reported. Owing to the fact that the lights were turned off business was transacted under difficulties. A fuse had burned out and the electric lights were unavailable.

President Gibbs called the body to order at 8 o'clock. Chief Clerk Langum had found a bit of candle and fixed it up before his desk, and by this feeble light prayer and roll call proceeded. No business was transacted.

Contrary to expectations there were but few absentees in the house when Representative Jacobson called the body to order, in the absence of Speaker Jones, who was ill. A bill by Littleton to revise the laws, and one by McDonald to revise the laws relating to banks of deposit, and several minor measures were introduced.

PARTIAL PARALYSIS.

A Case Cited in Little Falls, Minn. Which Yielded Promptly to Treatment.

From the Tribune, Minneapolis, Minn.

Joseph Zerwas is a young man and resides at Little Falls, Minn. He has lived there from childhood and is known by every one in that city, and especially by the traveling men, he being in the employ of Senator Buckman as a bus driver for Hotel Buckman, one of the finest hotels in the Northwest. While talking with a reporter a few days ago, in regard to his health Joe made the remark that he felt better to-day than for the last five years. He said: "I have a friend to whom I owe a great favor, for it was he who told me of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and what they had done for him, and advised me to try them. I took his advice and used a box and to-day I am entirely cured." The reporter, who is a great friend of Mr. Zerwas, had become quite interested in his story and with a few other friends requested him to tell it from beginning to end. He cheerfully consented and his remarkable story is given here from his own lips:

"I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People about a year ago. They had been recommended to me by a friend named James Little, who is now living at Bellvue. At the time I began taking the pills I was troubled with partial paralysis. Before this stroke I had always been in the very best of health except for a little nervousness at times. I was first taken sick while working in the barn, one hot and sultry afternoon. As I bent over a sharp pain shot through my body and a queer feeling came over me. I kept at work for a few days, but at last I became so sick that I was compelled to take a short rest, hoping by so doing I might regain my health, but it was not so. As the days passed I became worse, and at the earnest solicitation of my friends I went to one of our local physicians and had him work on my case, but to no avail. I then tried numerous other medicines but they also failed to relieve my suffering. My body had become partially numb and I had given up all hope when James Little, an old friend of mine, came to see me, and after hearing my story he advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"With a new hope I sent for a box of the pills, knowing 'nothing ventured nothing gained.' After taking the first box I felt a slight change, and by the time I had finished my second box I began to grow better and stronger. I used several boxes of the pills and found myself entirely cured and feeling like a new man. I have now quit taking them, but always have a box near at hand.

"Since my recovery I have recommended the pills to others and they have taken them and been cured. I shall always continue to tell what Pink Pills have done for me."

The vice-President of the St. Aloysius Society of this city and others connected with the hotel say they well remember the condition of their friend several months ago, and are aware of the fact that he was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

PROVED HER INNOCENCE.

A Little Drama Recently Enacted in a French Court.

A pathetic little drama was recently enacted in a French court of justice. A poor needle woman was charged with stealing two gold coins from her employer. Her defense was that, while waiting in her employer's house the child in her arms, unknown to her was attracted by the sight of the glittering gold on the mantel shelf behind her, and, leaning forward over her shoulder, clutched the coins in its chubby fist, and had so carried them away. This she persistently and solemnly stated on oath.

The court, however, was incredulous and reproved the mother for her attempt to deceive him. But she asserted her innocence with such pathetic power that the sagacious judge determind to test the truth of her statement. He bade her stand by his desk, with her child facing over her shoulder in the way she had described. Then he took several gold coins form his pocket and placed them on his desk within reach of the child.

A breathless silence ensued. Every one awaited the touching sequel. Then suddenly the child,s eyes caught sight of the gleaming gold, and, with an eager smile, the tiny hand was outstreched to the desk and the coins were clutched in its tenacious grasp. The mother was promptly acquitted. —Weekly Telegraph.

A Cylindrical Street Car.

A car has just been completed at Concord, N. H., which puts into practice what has heretofore been considered a chimerial idea of the novelist. It is cylindrical in form, like the imaginary cars Julies Verne and other have have told of, have been. It is no theory, but entire practice, and it will save the railroad companies many thousands of dollars.

The car is curious embodiment of genius and convenience. It is practically cylindrical in form, although this by no merns interferes with the seating arangements. Its chief claim to to fame, however, lies in the fact that each section of the sides, with windows of curved glass, slides up under the roof just as the curtain of the roll-top desk disappears as it is pushed upward. Just at the sides disappear a running board drops down below the floor of the car, and in the usual position on the outside. In this way the comfortable closed car is transformed into an open car of neat appearance.

A Wonderful Needle.

Among the many treasures owned by Queen Victoria is a wonderful needle made for her in Buckinghamshire. The needle is a miniature of the Roman column of Trojan, but instead of the exploits of the Roman emperors, scenes out of the life of England's queen are depicted. One shows Victoria when a young girl at Tunbridge Wells, another scene is the coronation of Westminister, while a third shows the marriage of the queen and prince consort. The figures in all of these scenes can only be made out plainly by the aid of a magnifying glass. The needle can also be opened, and it contains several others of the same form, an all are adorned with miniature figures in relief.

Value of Experience.

Fond Mother—Why, my dear, what is the matter?

Daughter (recently married)—Boo, hoo! My husband doesn't—lo—love me any more. He didn't kiss me when he came home, and he—he kept edging away whenever I came near him; and —and now he's in the library, and don't want to be disturbed —boo, hoo, hoo!

Fond Mother—Calm yourself, my dear. He loves you as much as ever, but I suppose he has taken a drink and doesn't want you to know it.—New York Weekly.

BURNS DIED PENNILESS.

First Obituary Notice Calls for Help for His Family.

When Robert Burns died the following obituary appeared in the Edinburgh Advertiser of July 26, 1896: "On the 21st inst., died at Dumfries, after a lingering illness, the celebrated Robert Burns. His poetical compositions, distinguished equally by the force of native humor, by the warmth and the tenderness of passion, and by the glowing touches of a descriptive pencil, will remain a lasting monument of the vigor and versatility of a mind guided only by the lights of nature and by the inspiration of genius. The public to whose amusement he has so largely contributed, will learn with regret that his extraordinary endowments were accompanied with fatalities which rendered them useless to himself and his family. The last months of his short life were spent in sickness and indigence, and his widow, with five infant children, and in the hourly expectation of a sixth, is now left without any resource but what she may hope from the regard due to the memory of her husband.

"The public are respectfully informed that contributions for the wife and family of the late Robert Burns (who are left in circumstances of extreme distress) will be received at the houses of Sir William Forbes and Co., of Messrs. Mansfield, Ramsey & Co., and at the shops of the Edinburgh booksellers. It is proposed to publish some time hence a posthumous volume of the poetical remains of Robert Burns for the benefit of the author's family; his friends and acquaintances are requested to transmit such poems and letters as may happen to be in their possession to Alexander Cunningham. Writer, George street, Edinburgh; or to John Syme, Esq., Ryeland, Dumfries. It is hoped that, in the meantime, none of his original productions will be communicated to the public through the channel of newspapers or magazines, so as to injure the sale of the intended publication."—N. Y. Press.

Scoff and Cough.

The man who scoffs at the friendly advice, to "take something for that cough," will keep on coughing until he changes his mind or changes his earthly residence. A great many scoffers have been converted by the use of the standard cough remedy of the past half century,—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. But some are scoffing and coughing yet. They wheeze with asthma, bark with bronchitis or groan with the grippe. Singular, is n't it, the number of stubborn people, who persist in gambling, with health and perhaps life as the stake, when they might be effectually cured of cough, cold or lung trouble, by a few doses of —Cows were sold at from 30 to 40 dollars apiece Fair Day.

—A meeting of the Wright County Bank Directors was held this week at the bank.

—Several firms are busy putting up ice for next summer's use. The ice at present is in fine condition.

—The Delano Cornet Band will give a free concert at the City Hall tonight. A fine program has been prepared. Everybody is invited.

—Rev. Farber preached from Rev. II, 10, "be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life". The singing was a pleasing part of the services.

--David Reibel, the taxirdirmist, has mounted a fine deer head with twenty-two prongs on the horns. He expects to prepare for sale a golden eagle in the near future.

--The Epworth League will hold a public installation of officers at the M. E. church Sunday evening, at 6:45. everybody invited. Preaching immediately after League meeting.

—The thermometer buzzed around zero considerably during the past week. Even J. J. Hill's loads of hot air from the Pacific coast failed to keep up the summer temperature we have been having.

—Some needed repairs have been made in the arrangement of the fire house. Now if some better method of heating the City Hall will be provided the City Council will have discharged their duty.

--Schaffer's fire sale has been the attraction of the week, a number of extra clerks have been necessary to wait on the throng of customers. George's popularity don't seem even to have been scorched by the fire.

—Rev. Tabor Davies has started a subscription paper for the aid of the suffering Armenians who have been made destitute by the barbarian acts of their neighbors. The cause is a worthy one. and the money goes free of expense to its destination.

--Read the notice of the coming of the taxgatherer in another column of this paper, and see when you can most conveniently pay your taxes. It may save you a trip to the County Seat, or other trouble. Ten per cent is added if your personal property tax is not paid before March 1.

—If you want a dollars worth of garden seeds and a weekly farm paper the Farm Field and Fireside of Chicago, and the BUFFALO GAZETTE for one year send us $1.85 in advance. Old subscribers who pay their subscription and this amount in advance can have the same chance.

—Rev. Thomas McCleary one of Minnesota's best lecturers is having success with his lecturers this winter. arangements have been partially made to have him come here soon. His "Mission of Mirth" is said to be highly entertaining. Don't miss him if you have a chance to hear him.

—The subject for discussion by the Delano Literary Society on Tuesday evening next, cremation, is a live question. It is being agitated in many places. Several crematories have been built in the United States, nd som e ot our people have at their own request had their bodies, after death cremated. The next Literary promises to be an interesting one.

—Too much laxness of law in regard to the use of vile and abusive language on the street by people who ought to know better and which tends to provoke assult has been allowed lately. An arrest, and in case the language was transferred to the court, a good round fine for contempt of court would surley have a wholesome effect and might prevent far more serious trouble. It should stop or be stoped.

—The Literary Society last Tuesday evening held a successful session. The recitation by Walter Buckley was well received. The speech on cooking, by Rev. J. L. Farber, followed by the reading on the same subject, by Miss Kizzie Gates was highly interesting especially the rice. The song by Miss Mollie Maxfield was rendered in her usually happy maner. The debate on the question Resolved tuat the elective franchise be extended to women, was participated in by M. A. O'Hair and P. H. Greer for the affirmative, Jas. A. Wharton and F. F. Chancellor for the negative. The judges Mesdames Wilder, Cooper and Green, rendered the verdict in favor of the negative. The next meeting promises to be still more interesting. Dr. Soper has consented to read a paper on Cremation. A general discussion of the subject is to follow.

LATER—Owing to a complication of circumstances unfavorable to the Delano Literary Society, for the present, meetings will not be held until further notice.

A change of venue has been granted in the J. R. Howard case. It goes to Hennepin county. If Wright County must pay the expenses of the trial it should have the priyilege of trying the case at home, where the offence is claimed to have been committed.

The Eagle hasn't got through yet abusing the citizens of Wright County for not putting a steam heating plant in the Court House. The Old Bird even gets so beside herself in her rage as to get off the following fine specimen of her ability as an abuser on general principles: "Why, years ago the people wanted a Court House down here and it was submitted to the people and overwhelmingly defeated." If the people wanted a court house and the question was submitted to them and defeated, who defeated it? And if it was overwhelmingly defeated by the people, what right had the PEOPLE to go on and build it and have the people paying interest and bonds ever since? There must have been PEOPLE and people.

MINNESOTA'S Governor has shown himself the possessor of horse sense and a vertebral column of his own.

THANKS to State Auditor Dunn for a copy of his biennial report. It contains lots of things folks want to know.

DRS. Henry H. Chase of Duluth and D. N. Jones of Gaylord are the new members on the State Medical board of Examiners, E. Y. Chilton of Howard Lake was reappointed.

THE Republican party of Minnesota nominated David Clough for Governor and with the assistance of a few gold Democrats elected him. Now when he insists on acting in that capacity; making his own appointments to office; and plainly informs delegates who come to compromise that: "I am Governor of this State" they ought not to make such wry faces when taking their medicine, even though administered by a "hoss doctor".

GOV. CLOUGH now has the balance of power of the G. O. P. in Minnesota in his hands. If McKinley appoints C. K. Davis to a cabinet position, or sends him on a foreign mission, a vacancy will occur in the United States Senate. David will of course go to aid his friend Knute to make laws and appoint officials. If the Gov. can't screw up courage to appoint himself he can resign in favor of Lieut. Gov. Gibbs and let him appoint.

DR. C. A. MCCOLLUM, Head Physician M. W. A. evidently knows something about insurance risks and the difficulties encountered by a good many who would like to become members of the order and have insurance. In an address delivered at Louisville before the Fraternal Congress he said: "A closer inquiry into the cause of death of a large percentage of short term policies, will disclose the fact that Bright's disease, disease of the liver and of the stomach are the direct sequence from an over-indulgence in alcoholic stimulants, and if the truth was known the accidental causes of death, in many instances, could be traced to the fatal bowl." The order is very careful not to take risks of that kind,

THERE didn't seem to be much said about Ex-Gov. Day being Lieutenant Governor and State Senator at the same time so long as he was a good Republican; but now when his office of President of the Senate has been given to another, and Mr. Day refuses to bow down to the golden calf but persists in believing in the money of the Constitution and the bimetallic platform on which he was elected State Senator in 1894, his colleagues who have embraced the English financial idea, now insist that Mr. Day could not have held two offices and although while in good standing permitted to act in a dual capacity must now be entirely unrecognized. Although voting as a senator two years ago he must now give up his seat to Mr. Dunn. If it is a fact that Mr. Eay couldn't hold two offices then how stupid of the G. O. P. not to have found it out at the time. Strange how Bimetallist Republicans of two years ago willing for Mr. Day to have two offices have become Monometallists and now don't want him to have any.

ARBITRATION TREATY.

The proposition before Congress to make a treaty good for the next five years, between this Country and Great Britain where by any differences arising between the two countries may be settled by arbitration is not having smooth sailieg. Representative Donnely, ever aleart to the interest of the country, has offered a resolution asking Minnesota's Represenatives to yote against it. He shows that the arbitration would be left to the decision of Oscar, of Sweeden, a king. The plan is to have Englan select three and the United States three men on the committee and King Oscar to act as the balance. Experience has taught us that under usual circumstances each man on such a committee would stick up for his own country. This would leave the whole thing in the hands of a foreign king, and Americans are not ready to be governed by a monarch; even this little bit. Why is this thing brought up in the shape it is at this time; at the closeing of the present admInistration, to run until the friends of monarchy may have an opportunity to take just one more step in the same direction by electing Grover Cleveland for a third term? Is it a feeler thrown out to try the metal of our citizens? Why are not our regulary elected officials compitent to transact the affairs of our country? Why are not the English officers to be trusted to longer aid in keeping peace with us? What is the matter with McKinley that he can't be trusted to run the goverument for his term of office, but must have a board of arbitration to keep us out of war with England? Are we safer in the hands of a king?

Or is the whole thing a scheme of the money powers to aid England in peserving the gold standard? To tie up the hands of the U. S. so that there will be no fear of an uprising in this country however hard the times may be?

If the people look at things right they will perserve all the rights they have, to themselves. They will not tie down their own hands and sit idly by and see England locate her friends on American soil, and dictate to us what, and how much money we shall use, and whatever else in her sweet will she pleases while we must not shove her away from our shores until we first obtained the consent of a king. The king himself may be the best one that ever lived, but he also is not the person the American citizen wants to ask if he shall submit to kingly ways or live on as his fore fathers have for a century past. The U. S, is supposed to have a Legislative, a Judical and Executive branch of Government of her own. These three branches have been and ought now to be capable of keeping Old England out of war with our country, without any board of arbitration.

Delegated power is not in accord with American institutions when it comes to surrendering it to some other country; whether it is to have the other country tell us whether or not we shall have gold and silver for money, or whether or not we shall have the privilege of protecting our shores from foreign invasion.

Among our Exchanges.

Penny Press: A gold standard paper says that prosperity is looking up. How could it help it, being flat on its back?

If the population of Wright County should be reconed at the rate of five people for every voter at the spring election it will make it drop away down from where it has so long stood.

Duluth Herald: Ignatius Donnelly tanned the hide of a Minneapolis legislator in fine style on Saturday. He had made an uproyoked, mean and malicious attack upon Mr. Donnelly, and he received his deserts. He will probably let Ignatius alone during the rest of the session.

St. Bonifacious items in Valley Herald: N. Frank returned last week from Lake Elmo, where he had spent several days with his mother in her last few days of life. Mrs. Frank had been a resident of Lake Elmo since 1849. She leaves several grown up daughters to morn her loss.

Minnesota Mascot: That new anti-trust law recently adopted by Georgia has had the desired effect of forcing all trusts operating in that state to cancel their contracts with jobbers. A law of that kind enacted by our state legislators would be a very good thing. Will they pass one?

Pioneer Press: Another petition for the pardon of Younger brothers is in circulation. If it were good form to be astonished at anything some mild amazement might be permitted at the information that there could be found one hundred sane people to sign such a document.

Dollars And Debts.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15, 1897.

A new scheme is being hatched by republican Senators to enable their party to control the Senate after the 4th of March, that is as daring and audacious as anything ever attempted in this country in the political line. The first step in this scheme was taken this week when Senator Chandler, who is an adept in trickey politics, offered a petition in the Senate from Henry A. Du Pont and eleven members of the Delaware legislature, asking that the State reconsider the vote whereby it declared Mr. Du Pont not entitled to a seat in the Senate. This scheme never would have been sprung had it not become certain that the democrats would elect a Senator to fill the Delaware vacancy. Those who are behind it do not expect to seat Du Pont, but they hope by getting his claim before the Senate again to prevent the seating of the democrat who will be elected by the present Delaware legislature. With one vacancy in the Senate 45 will be a majority, but if that vacancy is filled by a democrat, the republicans must have 46 votes to control the senate. See? The petition was referred to the committee on Privileges and Elections, which consists of five republicans and four democrats, but as Senator Palmer, of Illinois, is one of the latter, the republicans may be said to have two-thirds of the committee.

Senator Vest, who has just returned from a triumphant reelection, revived the drooping spirits of those who believe that something ought to be done for Cuba before this session of Congress closes by declaring his intention to devote his time exclusively to getting something done for Cuba, because he believes that to be the most important question before this Congress. When Senator Vest devotes his exclusive time to anything, the country is pretty certain to hear about it. So look out! Speeches were made this week by Senators Mills and Bacon in advocacy of the Mills Cuban resolution, which provides for the recognition of Cuban independence and the appointment of a U. S. Minister to Cuba.

At last Speaker Reed has filled the democratic vacancies on the House committies. Representative Bailey, of Texas, got the place on the Committee on Rules, Representative Boatner, of Louisina, goes on the committee on Ways and Means, Representative Stokes of S. C. on the committee on Agriculture, and Representative Crisp, of Ga., son of the late ex-Speaker, who is known as the "boy member", was given the vacancy on the Post Office committee.

One episode occurred in connection with the Pacific Railroad Funding bill, that was this week defeated by the House, that in the old days would have resulted in a duel, or perhaps two. Representative Johnson, of Cal., the only member from that state who supported the funding bill, made an unprintable speech in which he made unprintible charges against W. R. Hearst, whose New York and San Francisco papers had made a hot fight against the bill. For this he was called a coward by Representative Cooper, of Wis., and in addition to being called a coward by Representative Maguire, of Cal., Johnson was reminded of his having been indicted in Syracuse, N. Y. some years ago, for forgery. This last speech was too much for the House and it was ordered to be struck out of the Record. Instead of challenging one or both of the men who called him a coward, as an old-timer would have done, Johnson merely dared them to do it again, outside, in these words:—"If either the gentlemen from Wisconsin or the gentleman from California thinks I am cowardly, let either repeat to me outside this chamber what he said inside, and his curiosity will be appeased."

Representative Dockery, of Mo., who spent the Congressional recess at home, says: "The samples of prosperity we have out there are not satisfactory. The advance agent is too far ahead of his show."

There may be honest differences of opinion as to whether Olneyis a great statesman, not withstanding the qualified endorsement of him as a statesman and a diplomat by ex-President Harrison, but no Senator will deny that he has a great gall. He has set the whole country laughing at the Senate, and the Senate has no way to get even with him, except to prevent ratification of the arbitration treaty between the U. S. and Great Britain, which he was instrumental in negotiating and which this week went to the Senate. The Senate has for many years been sore on the matter of treaties because of the mysterious manner in which the newspaper men have managed to get hold of copies of them almost as soon as the Senate did. Secretary Olney defied the traditions of the Senate by furnishing a newspaper correspondent with a copy of the new treaty as soon as it was signed, and after the treaty had been widely published in the newspapers the members of the Senate Committee on Foreign relations made laughing stocks of themselves by wasting time in discussing whether its publication should be authorized.

INDEPENDENCE.

We were in receipt of a first class blizzard last Saturday and Sunday. The snow fell to quite a depth, and in many places it drifted very bad, but when the roads get broke we shall have fine sleighing this undoubtedly will add some to business.

Wm. Mills and family left for Huntington, Tenn., on the early train Monday morning. The car that contained his household goods and farm implements, went last Saturday evening. In care of William Mills, Jr. So they will soon be among the flowers and lilies of the Sunny South.

The Lyceum over at Lyndale seems to be gaining prominence. Last Friday night all could not be accommodated who went and many had to go home. The question for debate was Resolved that the saloon or whiskey has caused more distress to the country than war. Was decided that whiskey had caused the most distress.

Hard times still stand at the threshold, and they will continue to stand there in defiance of Major McKinley, Mark Hanna or any other man.

But where are those chief apostles in politics, who told us last fall that if McKinley was elected by this time all the mills would be runing and labor would have employment. Their excuse is now, we are not in yet only wait till the McKinley tin horn is heard from the outer porch of the Capitol at Washington which will assemble the people to his Inaugural, then, from that time henseforth, the good times will begin. The republican party as a body may mean all right but they cannot bring to pass half that was promised last fall. If we get one tenth of what they promised, same as the people of old were required to give to the Lord, it will be as much as we expect.

But we will have confidence and keep moving along. J. H. MCGARY.

How a Farner Sees Things.

BUFFALO GAZETTE:—It is consoling to have the privilage of refering to such sturling papers as the GAZETTE, Penny Press and other reform papers, that have maintained their honor throughout the late political contention and education. These are papers with honor enough to hold them from repundiating to day, what they truly believed and advocated yesterday, and away back. But many papers as well as persons have for the glorious man-made privilege of standing in with the power, forsaken the grand principles for which we are contending for selfish gain, and the fame of helping save the country, and starting the deluge of prosperity promised in such a case, (we are realizing it—Hear the banks bust!) a promise of bettering the deplorable condition of the people will be consumated by return of republican rule—So, they say—"Tis hard to find an honest paper, or politician, amongst our opponents, they offer only the measures that have proved so disatrous after thirty years practice. Bonds! Bonds!! Bonds!!! Robbing Peter to pay Paul, is the basis of the greatest financial policy on the earth, selling the present credit of our country to J. B. to buy their gold and to give us time to make ready for the general bust up, that will come when all these bonds mature.

"Mena, Mena, Tekel & etc., is written all over our institutions."—Think of a party that did, and still continues to perpetuate its existance by repudiating its platform and most sacred promises, going back on pledges made to millions of constituents; many of whom are anxiously looking for "prosperity" entirely going back on its promises to millions of constituents many of whom are standing on the ragged edge of dispare, vainly looking for that promised succor, that should have come years ago, but can never come as long as we show our incompetency to manage our own financial policy, without the interference of foreign Jews, who shape the policies of the old world, and have spanned the Atlantic, and laid a paralyzing hand on the poor timid dupes that run our political machine.

Many of our laws and our actions as a God fearing and christian people are based on the Old and New Testament, considered to be the werd of God, and Christ's appeal to humanity, His document of wordly riches, of the super abundence gained by special opportunities are pointed enough. "Wo unto ye that are rich for ye have received your consolation." He declares that "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God."—Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you". Remember these teachings are warnings to those who used unjust, unholy means to advance themselves or furture corporate greed in absorbing the substance of the earth. The man of Nazareth spake in the strongest terms against wealth, —against the centralization of wealth as it stands to day his words would have a double meaning. Listen to Joseph and Mary's son—considered to be the saviour in of the world, as from his lips falls the awful consequences of miss applied wealth, wealth kept out of its lawful channels of relieving human misery &c &c. "There was a certain rich man which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day". Now remember, there was no intimation, that he was a drunkard, or was licentious or dishonest, or even mean; but he was simply rich. And there was a beggar laid at his gate, so poor that he desired to be fed with the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table. Now remember, there was no intimation that the beggar was conscientious, truthful, or even a member of any church. He was simply poor, one of those "Whose is the kingdom of God". Well the beggar died and was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom: The rich man died and was buried. But in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torment: nor could all his entreaties procure him a drop of water, to cool his parched tongue, while tormented by scorching flame.—Here is the fate of the unduly rich, selfish corporation trusts, and all that sucks the means and just dues of all honest labor.—"Go to now ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you," when the rich man asks that Lazarus may dip the tips of his finger in water and cool his tongue the answer resounds throughout the regions of the lost. "Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedest thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou are tormented". The hungry starving ones should rejoice for they will be fed. Those that mourn for their lost homes shall be comforted: and the miserable poor shall have the joys of Heaven.

But this other party who had reveled in earth life in all his ill gotten wealth could furnish, gets not the slightest mitigation of his penalty, his was a fearful crime. He had had his good things and now 'tis turn about.

All rich men, combinations, trusts; any and all who by special privilege takes from God's worthy poor may see the doom that awaits them, donations to foreign missions; increasing your preacher's salary or furnishing soup to the poor cuts no figure. The money that has been filched from suffering humanity is the rich man's damnation.

What has last 30 years of our government activities culminated in? Why simply in making million heirs, 30 yrs ago one could count them on one hand, to day they could make an immense display on parade, but what an awful fate. Do the ones that it applies to believe it? Does anyone believe it? And yet the Master of life proclaimed it. A good government, just laws, a happy well fed and well clothed people is the condition all are hoping for to-day.

There is not much choice in old political parties. But surely the democratic party at Chicago made no false move when their choice fell on the man whose magical words, "No cross of gold, no crown of thorns", electrified millions all over this land, who feel proud to be identified with a whole-souled leader that could speak in such unmistakable terms. Think of a man who took command of a party almost demoralized and by his indefatigable exertions, firing the red hot shot of a true political and financial doctrine in to ranks of the enemy, received 6,250,000 votes. Let no man fool himself with the idea that a brilliant personality like William J. Bryan has been obliterated. Realize for one minute dear reader if you can the magnitude of the opposition our leader contended against, our party without funds with new and untried leaders, faint hearted and dangerous to our cause. Our enemies were the experienced leaders of both the old parties, almost unlimited, wealth at their command, nearly the entire press of this country subsidized a large part of the intellect of the country, from Ingersoll the champion of agnosticism, to bishops, priests and ministers of the most orthodox stripes. The business men, bankers and even the corner grocer used every trick known to a cunning politician. There was no shaft of ridicule from Mr. Bryan in the place of government fiat money, greenbacks. Extra good times with every man mortgaged soul and body to European Jew money lenders, double extra good times with banks closing every day, failures on the increase and according to Dunn's report a most gloomy and bilious outlook such will be the state of affairs until every honest man puts his shoulder to the burden, and with old glory as our standard, and such grand representative men as Bryan, Towne and Teller in '98 and 1900 sweep every vestage of the present crafty, cruel blighting night mare of Political economy and bad government off the face of God's earth. Political reformers are called anarchists. Think of the future of our country with over 6,000,000 of that stripe working for success in 1900. FARMER.

BE A MAN.

(A Resolution for the New Year—Or Any Other Time.)

How many men go through the world
E'en as the beasts go through,
Unwilling to do aught save that
Which they're compelled to do—
Mere ploddors in the beaten way,
Who only live from day to day—
Go though and be a man!

How many cross the earthly span,
And, when they die, at last
Leave naught behind to mark the ways
Along which they have passed—
Who, sleeping, dream and, walking, think
But of the things they eat and drink—
Go thou and be a man!

He is a man who sees ahead
A glorious height he would ascend—
Who makes the labors of the day
But serve as means unto an end—
Who with high purposes in mind,
Marks well the path he leaves behind—
'Tis grand to be a man!

Go then and be a beast no more!
Toil not, because you must, alone,
For there is a goal somewhere ahead
That you can strive to make your own!
Have some excuse for loving life—
Have hope to lend you through the strife—
Go though and be a man!

What though the goal is not attained
When he that seeks it sinks to rest?
Ah, yet he triumphs in defeat,
For hope has bided in his breakfast!
Though death o'er take him on the way
He has been more than common clay—
'Tis hope that makes the man!
—Cleveland Leader.

TWICE-A-WEEK COURRIER-JOURNAL.

Beginning the first of the new year, the Weekly Courrier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., will be changed to the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal. It will be published Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The paper will be six pages, or twelve pages a week, instead of ten pages weekly, as at present, an increase of 832 columns of matter during the year. The Wednesday issue will be devoted exclusively to news and politics, while the Saturday issue will be strictly a family paper—filled with stories, miscellany, pictures, poetry, sketches, etc. The politics of the paper will not be changed, and the battle for pure Democracy and true Democratic principles will be continued successfully, in the future as in the past. In spite of the expence involved in the improvements noted, the price of the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal will remain the same, one dollar a year, with liberal inducements to agents or to old subscribers who send in new ones. A feature during the coming year will be the editorials of Mr. Henry Watterson on political and other topics of the day.

A great many inquiries are constantly made in regard to the size of Cuba. Cuba is 750 miles long and from 30 to 150 miles wide.

Three expeditions are going to try to discover the south pole next summer. If they find it they may use it to punch out the north pole with.

Boston's police records show that there were 31,200 cases of alcoholic inebriation in that city last year. It doesn't sound so bad when you put it that way.

The list of patents from the general commissioner's office in Washington published the other day shows that a total of 19,949 patents were issued the past year.

It is now claimed that cholera can be surely cured by a wonderful new remedy. Nobody has been found, however, who is willing to have the cholera just to test the medicine.

Crater lake, in Oregon, has the distinction of being the deepest lake in the world. It is only five miles in circumference and 2,000 feet deep. It is a bowl of water in the heart of an extinct volcano.

A new instrument, called the phonendoscope, enables the skillful medical man to hear the sounds emitted by all the organs of the human body—the heart, the lungs, the liver, etc.—and discover if they are in a healthy condition or otherwise.

Pianos catch cold the same as men and women. A musical journal says that these instruments should always be placed toward an inside wall, but a little ways from the wall, and in cold weather they should be kept closed and covered with felt.

Defalcation, exposure, suicide. This familiar sequence is repeating itself in the financial disclosures of recent days. Will mankind ever learn that "the wages of sin is death?" The slightest lapse from perfect honesty has in it the seed of total destruction. It is easier to keep the path of justice than to regain it.

Judge Parker, of Fort Smith, Ark., who died a few weeks since, was known for a long time as the "Hanging Judge of Arkansas." During his 20 years' service on the bench as judge of the western district of that state 154 persons were convicted in his court for capital offenses, 84 of whom were hanged.

A new gunboat, the Annapolis, was launched in New Jersey the other day and was christened by Miss Porter, granddaughter of the late Admiral Porter. A boat christened with champagne by a lady of the name of Porter and launched in water should be acceptable to the adherents of every class of beverages.

Medical men are calling attention to the dangers from the abuse of cocaine. It was found to be an excellent remedy for catarrh when used as a snuff, but it is an intoxicant, and when used to excess breeds serious disease in the throat. That it is used to excess and a dangerous habit is fixed upon the users are facts now well understood.

It would be untrue to assert that the Connecticut Yankee's inventive genius began and ended with the original wooden nutmeg man. The descendants of that shrewd gentleman and the descendants of his neighbors clearly possess the same creative gift. During the past year it appears from the patent office report that 940 patents were granted to residents of Connecticut, or one patent to every 794 inhabitants of the state. No other state can show such a record.

The New York Advertiser notes that the idiot who "did not know it was loaded," the woman who locks her children in the house while she goes to visit a neighbor and the man who thaws out sticks of dynamite in the kitchen oven are doing their parts almost daily towards removing the surplus population. It will not do to say that these persons should have read the newspapers. Most of them do. Solomon had something to say of the impossibility of removing his folly from a fool, even if he be brayed in a mortar.

Don't think for a moment that any medicine will take the place of right living! Don't fret; whatever else you do, don't fret; don't scold, don't worry, keep calm and even tempered. This will preserve your face from wrinkles, your body from infirmities, your mind from unrest and friction and prolong your life in peace. Don't use any device to preserve beauty, such as paints, powders, washes, dyes or bleaches; the only thing that will really preserve or procure beauty is good health. A clean and healthy body and a sound and active mind are the only beautifiers known to man.

Notwithstanding the efforts of missionaries and other workers in savage lands to put a stop to cannibalism, the practice still continues. But the menu of these anthropophagous peoples is not entirely confined to roast missionary and cold boiled curate, notwithstanding popular opinion. A diet of laymen is not despised, as witness the recent killing of 11 miners in the Solomon islands for gustatory purposes. These unfortunate individuals were penned up like shotes and carefully fattened until killing time and then eaten at a great feast, to which all the neighbors were invited.

In the making of books, which seems to have no end, a good many authors affect strange and out-of-the-way titles to their productions which often fail to give any insight as to the nature of the story. But for curious titles the early English reformers deserve the palm. Some of them were very remarkable, especially those relating to devotional and controversial subjects. One was entitled the "Sweet Swallows of Salvation" and another, which might have been written by some pious baker: "Some Fine Biscuits Baked in the Oven of Charity, Carefully Conserved for the Chickens of the Church."

MINNESOTA SOLONS.

The Legislative Proceedings from Day to Day.

Everything Running in a Smooth Manner and There Is an Evident Desire on the Part of Members to Make a Purely Business Session.

St. Paul, Jan. 14.—Senator Sheehan is still mad, and when Lieut. Gov. Gibbs announced the committee on municipal corporations today his name did not appear as chairman or anywhere else. Just how much Sheehan's refusal to serve will be a grief and damage to Gibbs is "something no fellah can find out" at this writing. There is a row on between the senate and the house relative to the size of the reapportionment committee. Senator Stevens offered a resolution providing for a committee composed of nine from the senate and eighteen from the house. The house passed a resolution giving the senate seven members and taking fourteen for itself. Now the senate is mad about the excessive number of the house members, and amended the joint resolution of the house giving the senate fourteen also. In this shape it goes back to the house for a continuation of the contest. The most important bills offered in the senate today were duplicates of those offered in the house yesterday, namely: A bill to repeal the struck jury law and also to allow state banks other than savings banks to demand sixty-day notices from time depositors before paying back their funds.

The speaker made a good many hearts glad in the house this morning by announcing thirteen appointments of clerkships, doorkeepers, etc., as well as those of seven pages. While this brought happiness to twenty, in the aggregate, it would be safe to add two ciphers to those figures to indicate the number to whom it brought unhappiness. But the world is too large for everybody to be happy. Eighteen appears to be a favorite number in the house, as that was the number of bills presented today, as well as yesterday. None of the bills were of great importance, though many of considerable interest. One compels cities and all corporations to pay wages weekly, instead of monthly; another gives three years instead of one to enforce the mechanics lien; another repeals the law giving a bounty for the arrest of horse thieves. As there is a law suit after nearly every arrest of a horse thief to determine who saw him first, a great bone of contention will be removed if this repeal bill passes. Mr. Donnelly's resolution to investigate the action of Auditor Braden in relinquishing the right of the state to the Mountain Iron lands on the Mesaba range was passed, of course. The house could scarcely do less after the issue was made. This puts Donnelly in his element. The only change made in the resolution was to make the investigating committee smaller, it now being limited to four senators and seven representatives.

St. Paul, Jan. 15.—The recent appointment of Dr. Reynolds to succeed Dr. Hewitt on the state board of health was the occasion for an animated executive session today. The friends of Dr. Hewitt classify Dr. Reynolds as a horse doctor, while Dr. Reynolds' friends style him a veterinary surgeon with superior bacterological qualifications. It may be necessary for the members of the senate to call in Dr. Reynolds as their personal physician before being able to determine whether he should be confirmed or not.

Senator Theden, of Minneapolis, evidently regards our election law defective, for he introduced ten different bills today, each one amending the election law. If he should succeed in passing them it would be necessary to drop the term "Australian System" in referring to our ballot and style it the "Theden System." All of the other senators combined only introduced nine bills, and none of them were of great moment. Lieut. Gov. Gibbs has found a chairmanship for Senator Sheehan after all. He has placed him at the head of the committee appointed to investigate the labor bureau. If Sheehan accepts, this will break the ice which was heavily congealed by the judiciary committee incident.

The house stands pat. In other words, it refuses to concur in the demands of the senate for as large a representation as the house on the reapportionment committee. It is quite evident that the two bodies will have to get up separate reapportionment bills and trust to a conference committee report bringing about an agreement during the closing hours of the session. The real secret of this reapportionment trouble is that the majority of the legislature does not want any reapportionment at all. As the apportionment stands at present, the older portions of the state have the majority of the members of the legislature. With reapportionment, their representation would be reduced and the newer sections of the state, which have had the greatest growth since the last reapportionment, would gain. Of course, the older portions of the state do not want to plumply concede their unfairness, and so any kind of a pretext which causes delay, and may possibly bring about a defeat of the whole movement, is hailed with delight.

The speaker announced the committee today which is to investigate ex-Auditor Braden in the iron mine deal, and placed Donnelly at its head. This was strictly parliamentary, because Donnelly inaugurated the investigation, but it is not in accord with the usual run of politics, as Mr. D. does not flock with the dominant party. He will make it all the more interesting in the house this winter, because he is a political party by himself.

The most important of the bills introduced was one abolishing the death penalty for murder in the first degree and substituting imprisonment for life. That is, the bill will be important if it proves to have any following, but, owing to the recent tramp murders in this state, it is not likely to become a popular measure.

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—When will people find out that Ignatius Donnelly is loaded. He has served a good many terms in the legislature as well as in congress and it has always so happened that some senator or representative antagonizes him early in the session, with the result that Donnelly turns the table on his antagonist at every opportunity during the remainder of the proceedings. When last in the senate John Day Smith, of Minneapolis, filled the bill, and now in the house, at this session, Judge Hicks, of Minneapolis, aspires to a similar fame. There is an election contest in the house from Benton county and a second one from Hennepin. Judge Hicks offered a resolution today to have the situation investigated and a report made as to the probable grounds for a contest before allowing any expense to be incurred in the premises. Donnelly thought poor men should not be shut out from their rights to make a contest by any such ex parte proceedings. Hicks alluded to the historical contest in congress between Donnelly and then the fur began to fly. It was the most interesting episode of the session, up to date, but it can safely be predicted that there will be plenty more of them during the winter, with the same actors enacting the star role. As the senate was not in session today the house was not in a very industrious mood. When two boys are working together and one has a day's vacation the other will not do half the work which he would have done if his companion had been with him, though the opportunity for a full day's work might be just the same as ever. The two branches of the legislature are simply boys of a larger growth. Hence, but for the Donnelly-Hicks episode the house session today would have been dull. Now that Hi Foote has been bounced from the oil inspectorship a bill was introduced today to put the inspector on a salary basis, paying him $2,500 a year instead of fees amounting to nearly as many thousand. This is history repeating itself. When Capt. H. A. Castle was retired at the end of Gov. Hubbard's term a bill was both introduced and passed cutting down the fees until the office was made so nearly worthless that one man actually resigned and another nearly starved to death trying to hold on. But in time this spasm blew over and on the theory that the Standard Oil company had to pay it anyhow, the fees were restored. Foote was a valiant supporter of Clough but blood is thicker than water and hence the governor's brother-in-law gets the plum. The house would have been in session yet, probably, listening to Donnelly and Hicks, but for a summary adjournment without a vote on the resolution which was stirring up the trouble.

St. Paul, Jan. 18.—This was another day when it was hard for the house to do any work, because the senate was not in session. Visions of the senators enjoying a visit at home made the representatives sorry that Jacobson and Staples had evidently come to town to remain 90 days without a vacation. A good many representatives, however, had gone home over Sunday, nolens volens, and so the attendance today was light. The Hicks resolution, which was left suspended between heaven and earth Saturday, got through today with only 15 negative votes. This authorizes the committee on elections to investigate and ascertain whether there really is good ground for the contest of the seat of a member before taking it up. It is claimed that the two contests pending this session have no absolute contestants present, but only attorneys who are working for a fee from the state. Donnelly explained that he was afraid it would be establishing a dangerous precedent to allow the committee to summarily refuse to hear a contest, because some time the populists might get control of the house and refuse to allow any republicans to contest their seats. Judge Hicks insisted that his resolution only applied to the contests now pending and was designed as no precedent for the populistic millenium so graphically portrayed by Mr. Donnelly. Sixteen bills were introduced, among them being one entirely changing the method of foreclosing chattel mortgages and providing that such mortgage sales must be advertised in the newspapers, the same as real estate foreclosures. The numerous bank failures of late will have to be held responsible for much attempted legislation this winter. A bill was introduced today which provides that a surety on a bond given the state to protect the deposits in a bank can discharge his liability to the state and then proceed against the bank to recoup himself, the same as if he was the state itself. The nature of this bill would indicate that the bondsmen for the several hundred thousand dollars on deposit in banks which have failed are anxious to make good the money the state had on deposit, though there has not heretofore been any apparent run made to secure such an opportunity. The author of the bill evidently thought there was a mob of bondsmen on the floor below the legislative chamber, seeking to thrust their own money into the state treasury in return for that which is supposed to be in defunct banks, but isn't, because he wanted to pass the bill under suspension of the rules. An objection prevented, and so the state treasurer is not in danger of being overwhelmed with gold and greenbacks from the bondsmen, for a few days. Labor got its work in again today in the shape of a bill requiring all cities having over 10,000 inhabitants to appoint a labor commissioner at a salary of $1,200 per year. It does not provide what salary the walking delegate shall receive, but fortunately, the bill is not beyond amendment. Visions of Enute Nelson's coup d'tat were revived by a proposed constitutional amendment forbidding a governor or governor-elect being eligible for United States senator during the term for which he was chosen governor. Such an amendment might prove more effective than the dialogue between Nelson and Washburn at Albert Lea during the campaign of '94.

By the Government.

The industrial school at Morris, which has been conducted by the Sisters of Mercy, for many years past, has been leased by the United States Indian bureau, to be hereafter managed in accordance to the recent plans of congress, which provide for the abolishing of all sectarian Indian schools. W. V. Johnson, an experienced Indian educator, formerly of Quapaw agency, in the Indian Territory, has been appointed to superintend the school. The institution will accommodate 125 pupils and is expected to open under government charge in a very short time.

The Big Ditch.

Representative Eddy has left Washington for Minnesota, and it is understood that his visit is in connection with the proposed dyke and canal between Big Stone and Traverse lakes, by which they are to be brought into the Minnesota reservoir system. Survey of routes for this canal are now going on. The scheme contemplates supplying both the Mississippi and Red River of the North with water during the dry season.

Michael Moran, while helping in moving a piano in Minneapolis, slipped, the instrument falling on his neck, causing death.

INDIA'S SCOURGE.

Her Cities in the Grip of Pest and Famine.

Millions of Human Beings Starving—Deaths from the Bubonic Plague Increase Daily—Thousands Flee from Bombay.

Bombay, Jan. 18.—Plague and famine are stalking arm in arm through the densely populated portions of the British empire. Thousands are dead or dying, and the outlook becomes blacker and more terrible every day.

Millions Starving.

Millions of helpless men, women and children are starving, and the famine-stricken districts, having a population of nearly 40,000,000 people, will have to depend upon the hand of charity for food enough to keep body and soul together until April or later.

Relief Far Off.

Other districts with a population numbering 50,000,000 are already feeling the pangs of bitter privation from food, and this must be endured well on into spring before permanent relief will be afforded by nature. Funds for the relief of the sufferers are being raised on all sides; but a very large amount of money will be needed to provide food even for those unfortunate people who live on almost nothing (in comparison with Europeans and others) from one end of the year to the other.

Spread of the Plague.

This calamity, awful as it is in its intensity, is possibly not much greater than the ravages of the dreadful bubonic plague here, threatening to spread through the fright of the natives of this city into other parts of India, and if it reaches the greatly weakened famine sufferers the mortality may be enormous.

The natives have been reduced by lack of food to little less than living skeletons in the most heavily stricken districts, and as such they cannot but fall victims by the thousand to the black plague, which threatens to invade Europe through the Mecca pilgrims and other sources for the spread of contagion, which are too numerous to mention, principal of which, however, are the export of rags, linen and other merchandise likely to contain the poisonous germs.

More than half the population has disappeared, and those who remain are either helpless and cannot get away or are crowding out of the city by rail, water, and road, or else contemplate so doing unless there is a change for the better shortly.

The mortality here has quadrupled, without counting the deaths which have occurred among the hundreds of thousands of people who have fled in terror from Bombay, in many cases abandoning their all in the hurried flight from the pestilence. Up to recently Bombay, with its population of about 850,000, enjoyed the reputation of being one of the healthiest cities in India, its sanitary works being equal to those of the European capitals.

Bombay Depopulated.

Bombay, Jan. 19.—The bubonic plague which is ravaging this city is growing worse daily, and the flight of the inhabitants is increasing. It is estimated that nearly if not actually two-thirds of the population of the city have fled to the country towns or to other cities, and in many instances have carried the contagion with them.

The returns issued by the health authorities show that there have been 3,636 cases of the plague and 2,592 deaths from the disease.

DEATH OF MINISTER WILLIS.

He Breathed His Last in Honolulu on January 6.

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—Advices just received from Honolulu by steamer Monowai, which arrived Thursday night, are to the effect that Minister Willis died there at 8:30 o'clock on the morning of January 6. His death was the result of a severe cold contracted in San Francisco while returning to the islands.

San Francisco, Jan. 19.—Honolulu Correspondence per Steamer City of Rio de Janeiro.—The funeral of Minister Willis took place on the 8th. The body lay in state in the great throne hall and was visited by large numbers of citizens. The Central Union church was crowded at the services. The procession was headed by 500 military. President Dole and the chief officials of the government attended.

A Mysterious Lynching.

Columbus, Miss., Jan. 19.—Meager particulars of a lynching which occurred about 60 miles west of here on the Southern railway Saturday night reached here Monday. The body was identified as that of Peter Henderson, the negro sleeping car porter who assaulted John Griffin, a flagman, with an icepick one day last week. It seems that Henderson drank freely of "blind tiger" whisky and started through the train with the intention of doing up the crew. After striking Flagman Griffin several times with an icepick the negro jumped from the train and was not heard from until his body was found dangling from the bridge. Griffin, though seriously wounded, has recovered and is walking around the streets in Birmingham. There is no clew as to who the parties that did the lynching were.

A New Reform Party.

St. Louis, Jan. 14.—The convention called by "Gen." Coxey to organize a new reform party has adopted resolutions, in which it is declared that the people's party has been practically killed by its fusion with the democratic party during the recent campaign and that the only satisfactory way to purify it is through an early national convention. All true populists who do not believe in the fusion deal are called to meet at Nashville, Tenn., July 4, 1897, to organize for the campaigns of 1898 and 1900.

THE LIGHTS OF NEW YORK.

An Unequaled Show in the Twilight for Ferry Passengers.

While daylight still glimmers in the west these evenings the great office that some thousands of busy men and women may accomplish the work of some hundreds of days in the last hour of the afternoon. The purpose of this illumination is sufficiently prosaic and practical, but the illumination furnishes to many travelers by ferryboats from the Jersey shore a ten minutes' aesthestic feast unique among the thousand charms of New York harbor. Better still, the illumination as seen from an approaching ferryboats is scarcely the same on any two evenings. When faint mist wraps the river and blots from view the high, irregular facade of downtown New York—all save the glittering fires that rise in tiers—the effect is as of a vast scene upon some theatrical stage, wider and higher than any wrought by man.

There is a twinkling as of a million monster stars molten to a rich yellow glow. On evenings when no mist intervenes between the scene and the eyes of the beholder, but when no moon adds a third element to the twilight, the effects is as of a mountain city traversed by scores of highways that are thickly studded with glowing fires. The dullest imagination must revel in the thought of a vast citadel crowing that black hill, punctured with myriad fires, and of steep streets running upward from a tributary village. When the moon comes to reveal more truth, but adds her own peculiar touch of falsehood, the scene is again new. One knows it then for what it really is; but the charm of reality is hardly less than the fancy. The high, irregular sky line bounds, seemingly, innumerable rows of trembling flame. Here is a whole giant front aglow with the soft, yellow radiance of gas lamps; there are keen lines of diamond-white electricity. Low down are the street electricty lights, spasmodically flashing in alternate gloom and glare. On the water itself are a thousand moving fires, bare or softly englobed, while here and there upon the troubled surface are great bands, splotches and splashes of light that seem as liquid as the waves themselves. Over all is the the ethereal snow in moonlight, and and though the bell-like atmosphere comes from crafts that shine with yellow, green and crimson flames, flutings, hoarse or hushed—the daylight soft water melodies that serve as warnings to a hundred falcon-eyed pilots bedazzled with the dance of a million lights. —N. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HIS FLYING CAT.

BY W. L. ALDEN.

"Sparrows," said the colonel, "may be very upright, respectable, middle-class birds so long as they stay in England, but when they emigrate to America, they are no better than the average of our working classes. Some meddling idiot brought a lot of sparrows to the states some ten or fifteen years ago, expecting they would kill all the worms on the fruit trees. They hadn't been in the country six months when they took the ground that they were as good as the best of our swell birds, and that they considered that killing worms was a degrading kind of labor fit only for blackbirds and crows. So they took to living on wheat, and strawberries, and cherries, and they multiplied so fast that they are the worst curse that the farmer and the fruit grower ever had.

"Prof. Van Wagener and I were discussing the sparrow question one day, and I was complaining of the inefficiency of the American cat. Our cats are about as wide-awake and as monarchial cats as you can produce, but they can't catch a single sparrow. I've known ambitious cats who set out to catch sparrows, and who wasted away to mere skeletons, and died of weakness through watching for sparrows from dawn to darkness, and never once getting within ten feet of one. As a general rule I don't have much sympathy for cats, but the insulting language that sparrows use when they see a cat laying for them, and the aggravating way in which they will fly just over the cat's head, or maybe hit the cat over the tail with their wings, is more than any cat can be expected to bear.

"'The trouble is,' said Van Wagener, 'that the cat isn't a flying animal and the sparrow is. The sparrow's native element is the air, and you can't expect a cat to catch a sparrow so long as the cat can't fly.'

"'That's true,' said I, 'but it don't help us out of our difficulty. Cat's weren't made with wings, and neither you nor I can invent a new model of cat that will be able to fly, and to catch sparrows on the wing.'

"'Don't be too sure of that,' said the professor. 'Science has improved everything that it has put its hand to, and I see no reason why science shouldn't improve cats. A flying cat would supply a great public want, for she would kill off the sparrows as easily as she kills off the mice. I've half a mind to try the experiment of inventing a flying cat.'

"'All right,' said I. 'When you get your flying cat finished just notify me, and I'll come and see her fly. Then, if you are going in for improving animals, perhaps you will invent a cat that can sing like a nightingale. The present style of singing among cats is disgraceful. They haven't any more idea of music than a Chinaman.'

"Well, the professor buckled down to business, and from his daily interviews with his private cat, and the consequent scratches that diversified his good old scientific countenance, I judged that he was doing his best to make a cat that would fly. Before the six weeks were up he sent me a note inviting me to come round to his house at two o'clock the next afternoon to see the first successful flying cat that had ever been invented. I needn't say that I went. I had assisted at the birth of dozens of Van Wagener's inventions, and I had generally found that the presence of a man with experience in the treatment of accidents was a handy thing so far as the professor was concerned.

"I found Van Wagener sitting in his library with the most discouraged-looking cat that I had ever seen. As soon as he had shaken hands with me he launched out into a description of his new invention.

"'You know, colonel,' said he, 'my method as an inventor. I ask myself what is needed in some particular purpose, and then I proceed to supply that need. Most people think that an inventor has ideas come to him all of a sudden, in a supernatural sort of way; but that is all nonsense. Inventing is a business, like any other, and any intelligent man can learn it. Now, when I saw that the reason why cats don't catch sparrows is that they can't fly after the bird, I saw what was wanted was a flying cat, and I proceeded to invent one. Here I have a small balloon. This I fix to that cat of mine, and when it is inflated it will just support the weight of the cat in the air. Then you see this pair of paddle-wheels. They are to be fixed one on each side of the cat, and are to be driven by a small electrical engine. The balloon floats the cat and the paddle-wheels propel her. In order to steer the cat I fix a flat piece of tin to the extremity of her tail. When she sees a sparrow her instinct will make her swish her tail from one side to the other, and her attention being fastened on catching the bird, she will unconsciously work her tail in such a way as to steer her directly towards it. Take it all in all, I am justly proud of this invention. It is simple and effective, that is to say, when the air is still, for of course my paddle-wheels will not propel the cat against the wind. I tried at first to fit the cat out with wings, but it was impossible to teach her to use them. Next to a woman a cat cares less for science than any other animal, and it is impossible to teach her to take an interest in an invention that is designed solely to benefit her. However, the day will come when flying cats will be as common as the ordinary type, and when they once get used to flying they will take to the sport as kindly as they now take to catching mice. Now, colonel, if you are ready, we will rig up the cat for flying, and we will see what effect she produces on the sparrows in the backyard.'

"It wasn't an easy job to rig up Van Wagener's cat. She kicked and swore her level best, and got in several good scratches on the professor's hands. However, he stuck to his task, and after awhile the cat was ready, and we adjourned to the backyard. There was a whole gang of sparrows in the middle of the yard, forming a sort of ring round two that were fighting, and from the way in which every sparrow was talking at the top of his voice it was clear that some heavy betting on the fight was in progress. When they saw Van Wagener and his cat, they naturally flew up to the eaves of the house, where the fighting was resumed. Van Wagener took his flying cat to the extremity of the yard, and after showing her the sparrows at the top of the house, and exhorting her to gather them in, he launched her into the air.

"The cat rose slowly, kicking and yelling, until she was just about level with the eaves. The sparrows were so occupied with the fight that they paid no attention to her, and when she saw that there were at least 20 of them gathered close together, her desire to get at them made her temporarily forget her balloon and her paddle-wheels. She lashed her tail, as cats will do when bent on murder, and, just as the professor predicted, the effect was to steer her in the direction of the sparrows. Her paddle-wheels were working smoothly and regularly, and though they were not large enough to give her any speed, they steadily carried her across the yard towards the sparrows. Van Wagener was in ecstasies. He challenged me to point out any defect in his flying cat, and when I candidly admitted that it did seem to be a complete success, he was the happiest man in New Berlinopolisville. The cat came through the air so slowly and noiselessly that she was within two yards of the sparrows before they saw her. When they did catch sight of this new and startling animal, they were the worst frightened lot of birds that were ever seen outside of one of those so-called happy families, where half a dozen birds, clean paralyzed with fear, are shut in a cage with a cat that has been filled up with chloral, and the public is asked to regard the exhibition as a specimen of what will be the usual sort of thing when the millennium gets its work fairly in. Those sparrows left in a tremendous hurry. They had a sudden business call in some distant part of Illinois, and I don't believe a single one of them stopped flying until they had put at least 30 miles between themselves and Van Wagener's flying cat.

"'Now, you see,' said the professor, 'how completely successful my invention is. My flying cat will either catch the sparrows and kill them, or she will frighten them out of the country. In either case the great sparrow problem is solved. It makes no difference to me, as a patriotic American citizen, whether all the British sparrows in the country are killed, or whether they are driven over into Canada. Come to think of it, I should prefer the latter result, for the driving of monarchical European birds out of our beloved country will be an object lesson in the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine, which will be of immense benefit to the nation.'

"The professor, being a scientific crank, was naturally a political crank also, and he was more than two-thirds mad on the subject of the Monroe doctrine. When the professor once got fairly started on the subject of the Monroe doctrine he forgot everything else, and he had clean forgotten his flying cat when Mrs. Van Wagener leaned out of a second-story window, and advised him, in case he was going to make a political speech, to hire a hall. She was a mighty sarcastic woman, and her contempt for her husband's political views was even greater than her contempt for his scientific achievements. She was on the point of continuing her remarks about the professor's political oration, when she suddenly gave the awfullest screech that I ever heard from female lips, though I was once in a room full of strong-minded women when a mouse ran across the floor. Mrs. Van Wagener thought that her last hour had come, judging from her screams, but, as I had a full view of what was taking place, I knew it was only the cat who had come. Having missed the sparrows the cat turned partly round to see what had become of them, and just then Mrs. Van Wagener, having unconsciously put her head within the animal's reach, the cat judged that her opportunity for making a landing had arrived, and accordingly she lit on the top of Mrs. Van Wagener's head.

"Most any woman, not knowing that her husband had invented a flying cat, would have supposed when some monster with sharp claws, and a talent for using bad language, came flying through the air and lit on her head, that nothing less than the sea serpent, or the flying dragons mentioned in Scripture, had attacked her. What with the cat's desire to kick herself free from her flying apparatus, and her anxiety to get square with the human race, she did more with that poor woman's hair in five minutes than any other cat could have done in a good half hour. The professor tried to explain that it was only the cat, and begged his wife not to injure the flying apparatus. It didn't seem to occur to him that he ought to run to his wife's assistance till I had taken him by the shoulders and started him upstairs. I don't want you to think for a moment that he wasn't anxious to help his wife, but he was so in the habit of looking at things from a scientific point of view, that he forgot that while he was explaining things Mrs. Van Wagener might be clawed to such an extent that she would never be recognized by her nearest friend. When he had once grasped the idea that she needed his help he fairly flew upstairs, and succeeded in transferring the cat's attentions to himself. Then I had to come to the rescue, for the professor, not having hair enough to interest the cat, she had devoted her efforts to beautifying his countenance, and if I hadn't succeeded in pulling her off, and tossing her out of the window, she would have torn his eyes out, or at all events ruined his nose. Her balloon had burst during her interview with Mrs. Van Wagener, and consequently when I threw her out of the window she struck the ground pretty, heavily and smashed up the paddle wheels. We never saw her again.

"Mrs. Van Wagener made peace with her husband on condition of his making a solemn promise never to have anything more to do with flying cats. I consider that she was wrong in so doing, for Van Wagener's invention was bound to be a success. If he had been allowed to carry it out, flying cats would have become as common as bats, and every sparrow in the states would have emigrated. If it wasn't that I don't believe in using other people's inventions I would go in for the manufacture of flying cats myself; and as it is I believe that Edison will some day hear of Van Wagener's experiment, and will immediately invent a flying cat and spend the rest of his life in trying to make the invention work."—Idler.

Prison Labor Question.

The prison labor commission appointed under the law of 1895 to determine the number af persons that may be legally engaged in any one industry in the prisons of Minnesota made its report to the governor and legislature, saying that it was unable to reach an agreement.

In speaking about the report, Labor Commissioner Powers said: "There are two opinions among the members of the board. Mr. Schnrmeier has not taken an active part, nor expressed an opinion. I believe that the law, applied to the shoe industry, means those people engaged in free labor in factories only. Of these there are 2,000 or less. This would allow the prison authorities to employ 2,000 persons in the shoe industry. But Mr. Temple believes that all persons engaged in making shoes in the state of Minnesota, including the small shops, would be counted, which would place the number at more than 3,000. Under this opinion the prison authorities would be empowered to employ 3,000 persons in the shoe industry. The prison authorities side with Mr. Temple."

Brief Minnesota Items.

The hardware store of Louis Kohle at Belle Plaine was destroyed by fire.

The Milwaukee depot safe at Dundas was blown open and $60 in silver taken.

Fred C. Barrows has been appointed state inspector of oil.

The state Fair association has a balance of $6,125.75.

The state Y. M. C. A. convention is now assured for Red Wing. Several state officers have been there recently and they decided the matter. The convention will be held in February.

Three burglars confined in the Stearns county jail attempted to make their escape by filing through the bars of their cells. The attempted jail delivery was discovered. Four iron bolts had already been cut with a jack-knife when the job was discovered by the sheriff.

BANK SUSPENSIONS.

Weaker Financial Concerns in Various Places Go to the Wall.

Newport, Ky., Jan. 19.—The First national bank of Newport has closed its doors. The bank will be reorganized. The deposits are about $370,000 and depositors will be paid in full. Director Charles Spinks says the bank closed because of the recklessness of Cashier Yantsey and Director McCracken.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 19.—The German national bank at First and Market streets did not open its doors for business, and the announcement was made that the institution was in the hands of Bank Examiner James Escott. The capital stock is $251,500, with a surplus of $31,000. J. M. McKnight is president.

The bank has been in a shaky condition for three years owing to the failure of the Louisville deposit bank, by which it lost $75,000 and there are also between $250,000 and $300,000 worth of law suits pending, growing out of the bank's connection with the failure. Since the first of the year $75,000 in deposits have been withdrawn and several days ago Bank Examiner Escott began an investigation. Saturday he wired the result to the comptroller of the currency and the order came for the bank to be closed at once.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 19.—The Minnesota state savings bank closed its doors and filed a deed of assignment, naming William Bickell as assignee.

An affidavit was filed stating that the assets would amount to about $250,000, while the liabilities are in the neighborhood of $230,000. The officers of the bank deemed this step the best under the circumstances to protect the depositors. The recent flurry in banking affairs caused withdrawals of deposits to such an extent that, although the bank required the 60-days' notice, it was unable to raise enough ready money to meet demands.

Fullerton, Neb., Jan. 16.—The Citizens' state bank of this city, closed its doors Friday afternoon. S. H. Penny, president, and F. M. La Grange, cashier, say that depositors will be paid in full. No statement of assets or liabilities will be given out until the bank examiner has completed his work of checking up.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 14.—The Seattle savings bank has closed its doors owing to heavy withdrawals of county funds by newly-installed officers. Judge Monroe, on petition, appointed H. O. Shuey receiver. The statement is made by bank officials that the affairs of the institution are in good shape, but not prepared for a run. The liabilities are $70,000 and the assets $104,000. The institution will liquidate its obligations dollar for dollar.

Conway, Mo., Jan. 18.—The Bank of Conway made an assignment of all its assets to C. C. Draper, of Lebanon, and the officials say it is their intention to quit business. It was the only bank in town and carried a capital stock of $10,000, with C. Hanson as president and I. M. Porter cashier. Depositors will be paid in full.

WAR ON WOMEN.

Prominent Ladies Placed Under Arrest in Havana.

Lope Recio Loynaz; Maria Aguillar, sister of Antonio Aguilar Varona, ex-Cuban civil governor of Puerto Principe. It is also rumored that President Cisneros' sister and the following prominent citizens have been arrested: Jose Morell y Xliquas, Carlos Adan y Masvidal, Ramon Bosa y Boza, Alberto Agramonte y Boza, Jose More y Pera, Vicete Ramirez y Ledesma and many others. The city is terribly excited, not only on account of these arrests, but also because of the suppression of El Pueblo. Persons wishing to leave are unable to do so, the governor prohibiting their departure. The condition of the jail is frightful. There are no accommodations for ladies, and those arrested are confined with common criminals.

BIG DEAL IN COAL LANDS.

Syndicate of Capitalists Buy 4,100 Acres in Pennsylvania.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 19. — Andrew Carnegie, together with other Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Canadian capitalists, have acquired 4,100 acres of coal territory in the Monongahela valley. The price to be paid for the land will be $3,000,000. Mr. Carnegie and his Pittsburgh partners will have 51 per cent. of the property. The names of the minority stockholders have not been learned, but the Cleveland parties are large coal operators. The preliminaries have been fully arranged, and the transfer of title and cash will be made in a few days.

The great object in the purchase is that the new railroad of Andrew Carnegie and his associates shall not have to return empty cars in which ores are brought to the Carnegie blast furnaces from the lakes. With the completion of the Butler & Pittsburgh road the general development of these tracts will have been made ready, and coal shipments to the lakes will be coincidental with the bringing of ores to Pittsburgh.

Cold Wave in the Northwest.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 18.—A great storm has been raging in Minnesota and the Dakotas for the past 36 hours and the temperature is dropping over a degree an hour. The fall of snow has been very heavy. No trains north and west of St. Paul are running on schedule time. Southern and eastern trains left here on time Sunday night, but with slight prospect of getting through. No trains have been operated on the Great Northern between Huron, S. D., and Benson, Minn., for two weeks. All northern Minnesota points report the temperature from 10 to 20 below zero. The thermometer here registered ten below at 11:30 Sunday night, with prospects of growing much colder.

New Chinese Minister.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The Chinese minister, Yang Yu, called at the state department Thursday to announce that Wu Ting Fang had been appointed to succeed him and that he had been promoted to Russia. He expected his successor late in March, at which time he should himself depart for St. Petersburg. Loh Teng Lu, who accompanied the viceroy to this country as interpreter, has been appointed minister to England, Italy and Belgium.

To Get Out of the Way

When trouble is coming, is obviously the part of common sense. An obstruction of the bowels is a serious obstacle to health. To get this out of the way is an easy matter with the thorough laxative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, although it affords relief, never gripes and convulses like a drastic purgative. Dyspepsia, malarial, kidney and rheumatic ailments and nervousness yield to this genial family medicine.

There is an unwritten law among women that no woman should go further from home than two blocks with a shawl over her head.

Cupid, the Beggar.

How Love goes a-begging for a little kindly treatment! How many women turn their backs on the little fellow! They give freely of their time and attention to fashion or social pleasures, but seem to regard happy wifehood and motherhood as a mere secondary consideration. They take no end of trouble over the fit of a gown or the success of a dinner party, but think they have no time to bestow upon the health and physical soundness which are absolutely necessary to happy wifehood and motherhood.

Any weakness or disease of the delicate special organs of her sex totally unfits a woman to be a wife or mother. It is a woman's primary duty to be strong and healthy in a womanly way. Careful living and judicious treatment will certainly and completely eradicate these delicate complaints.

A complete and practical treatise on this subject with careful professional advice and suggestions for self-treatment are contained in "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. This 1000-page illustrated book will be sent paper-bound absolutely free for cost of mailing only: 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce, as above.

Dr. Pierce has given a life-time to the study of women's diseases, and has had as wide a practical experience in this particular field as any living physician. His "Favorite Prescription" is a perfect and scientific remedy for diseases of the feminine organs.

It is the only medicine devised for this particular purpose by an educated and skilled physician. It is a positive and permanent cure as attested by more than ninety thousand grateful women.

DELANO, FRIDAY, JAN. 22, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—The City Grocery, C. H. Green & Co, is holding its share of the trade.

—Danz's Orchestra, of Minneapolis, arrived this A. M. to play for the K. P's tonight.

—A. E. Manning the Bridge street restaurant man is putting groceries in connection with his other business.

—The pupils and the teachers are busy arranging for the state examinations next week, in the Public High Schools.

—It it claimed by some of our political wire-workers that the Town of Franklin will not pole over 50 per cent of its customary vote in March.

—The Modern Woodmen of America now have three dozen members here and are increasing their membership quite rapidly. Their insurance seems to catch people as being cheap and reliable.

—Musical talent is having a boom in this nighborhood. Competition is the life of trade. Two brass bands in Delano makes things lively. Whoop er up boys, see who can make the speetest music.

—When election day rolls round and those who have been voting for years come to the polls to cast their ballot only to be refused. there will doubtless, be considerable excitement occasioned, in some instances.

—The few cold days and Sunday's blizzard made some of our citizens talk about old Tennessee and the Sunny South. That's all right for a few cold days but the balance of the year Minnesota is hard to beat for climate or soil.

—Whenever strangers listening to the sweet trains of harmony from either of our brass bands offers compliments it will be in order for the public spirited Delanoite to remark, "You just ought to hear the other one".

If the Legislature should get a move on them and pass the law making local option by counties the thing for Minnesota's regulation of the liquor traffic and Wright County should vote on it at the spring elections, it is highly probable it would rank among the foremost anti-saloon counties.

—George P. Schaffer has purchased the lots of Mrs. Sieloff where the blacksmith shop now stands on the corner River and Elm streets. We understand he contemplates building a commodius and convenient building there in the early spring for his large and rapidly increasing mercantile business.

—Reports of births and deaths must be handed to the Health Officer in the Village, and in the Township to the Town Clerk, on or before ten days after the occurrence. Members of the family are liable to a fine of $20, and Physicians $25 for neglecting to comply with this law. Don't be surprised if some one has to pay a fine.

—The politician are beginning to talk about a ticket for village officers. The election comes in March. It is necessary now for foreign born men to have all their citizen papers before they can vote. Be sure in selecting a ticket that all the canidates are qualified to act as officers by being legally qualified citzens of the United States.

—Because you see George Bolton, hustleing about livelier than common in his shirt sleeves these cold days you must not think spring is coming. It simply because Winter has gone. The R. R. is striking most of her depots with a wave of prosperity. They are not working so many men, but those that have work are unusually buisy.

—The Epworth League entertainment and the installation of officersat the M. E. Church Sunday evening passed off pleasantly. Owing to the storm during the day the audience was small; but the singing, reading and other exercises were well rendered and the small audience was well repaid for braving the cold and coming out. Rev, Farber preached a short sermon after league.

—The concert given by the Delano Cornet Band in the City Hall Friday evening was well attended and appreciated as a rare treat. Prof. Everson acquitted himself creditably as a band leader. And his songs composed by himself received great applause. The twelve members of the band under the present management make music. Peter Peterson's clarenet solo, Mrs. Dora Stewart accompanyment, and the Eagle quartett's numbers were good. The piano solo, the storm, by Mrr. John Blackwell, was listened to with rapt attention from first to last by the vast audience.

—Card playing, selling to minors and men intoxicated and old drunkards and keeping open Sundays and after eleven at night and other violations of the state laws are constantly indulged in in Delano. Why don't some of the state detectives and officials drop round this way some time. They could quickely fine enough to shut up most of the saloons if not some of the saloonkeepers, and possibly some of officials who knowingly permit such breaches of the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota. What's the use of having license laws if the parties to the contract nor anyone else pays any attention to them?

—Several carloads of snow fence went west this morning.

—For Legislative news and bank suspensions see inside of this paper.

—It is about time the officers of the Delano Washington's Birthday Association were holding a meeting and making a program for the 22nd of February. It is only a month off.

The Waverly horse case was decided in favor of the defendants.

John L. Streeter, of Montrose, on charge of bastardy, by Miss Mary Ross, was bound over to nent term of court, by Justice Walter, of Delano.

Mrs. Gibney, of Dassel, whose husband was killed by the Bryan train, sued the company, the trial was held at Buffalo verdict for the company.

Miss Bertha Tuchtenhagern was given a verdict by the jury for $600 for damages against Joseph Giblin, for carlessness in accidentally shooting her.

County Attorney Tarbox will have to figure carefully to keep his list of lost cases down to that of his predecessor Cutting which he so industriously used for campaign argument.

Sam B. Cronk was committed to the Hennepin county jail, by a Buffalo justice, last week, for making an assult on his wife. Too much poor whiskey, Julius Miller was also sent on a similar charge.

CROWDING.

(Cleveland Leader.)

Don't crowd! There's room enough for all!
Why push and jostle so?
Why shove your neighbor to the wall.
Or seek to lay him low?
Don't crowd!

Don't crowd! You're just an atom here!
Who hold your brother back?
Go seek a way that's new and clear—
Why keep the beaten track?
Don't crowd!

Don't crowd! Once you strove bravely, too,
Against the odds above!
Think how defeat oft reached you through
Some rivals steady shove—
Don't crowd!

Don't crowd! Ah, might I just as well
Address the drops that make the sea!
Wherever men or mice may dwell
There will the jealous ever be To crowd!
—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BRYANS new book is about ready for the market. It will, doubtless, be interesting reading to people interested in the politics of the day.

THE Dassel Anchor has changed proprietors. Mr. Henke has gone to Wis. to engage in newspaper business, while A. C. Brokow and R. L. Hayford of Litchfield will run the Anchor.

FROM present indications the Supreme Court will decide as to who will make the appointment of a member of the State Pharmacy Board. It is bad when the Governor, the Legislature and the Pharmacists can't agree but have to call on the Courts to help them out.

THE 31st anual meeting of the Minnesota Editors and Publishers Association, will be held at the Commercial Club, in St. Paul, on Thursday and Friday, Febuary 18 and 19. An interesting program has been arranged, and a large attendence is expected. President J. J. Hill has extended the courtesies of the G. N. R. R.

APROPOS of Manchester's bill to close theaters on Sunday one of the city dailies had a picture of men coming to the door of the theater and finding the door closed turning into an adjoining saloon! Open saloon, in the Saintly City, on the Lord's Day, and the reporter knows of it! Manchester and his reform colleagues must have turned the other corner and gone to church.

THE Sheriff's Association of the State of Minnesota met at the Court House in St. Paul, Tuesday. The annual election of officers was held, J. C. Nugent, of Wright County, being chosen President: About thirty sheriffs were in attendance. They are arranging to have Sheriff's fees made uniform in different counties and to have other bills brought before the legislature in the interests of their association.

MR. OLNEY'S arbitration treaty with Great Britain appears to most Americans to be yielding up the arbitration of the Monroe Doctrine to the decission of a commission. This we are not prepared to do. This Doctrine has been decided upon before by the people of the U. S. at least, and needs no further arbitration. Just what right our Congress has to yield up its priveleges to commissions; especially to commission composed of a majority of foreigners we don't unkerstand. We had better attend to our own business and let others attend to their's seems to be the general feeling on this subject.

THE Senate Judiciary committee has reported favorably the passage of the bill to abolish the struck jury system. Nobody ought to oppose the abolishion of such a system as that. It is clearly opposed to the best interests of any poor man The idea of having a jury for the poor man and another for those able and willing to pay for it! It is too ridiculous for anything! Do away with the struck jury place rich and poor litigants on the same footing. Law suits are bad enough without giving anybody the advantage. Suits should be decided justly on their merits without fear or favoritism, or struck jurys.

CAN there be any significance in the purchasing of inaugural paraphernalia and the appointment of a Bank President as Secretary of the Treasury all from Chicago?

IF it is true, that had the fire in the Little Falls high school building started during school hours all the children could not have escaped; that city ought to consider itself fortunate for the opportunity to build a new one. No city can afford to have that kind of a school house.

PEOPLE are begining to wonder if the Minnesota Board of Pardons will de selected with a view to giving Cole and Jim Younger, their fredom. If the Board of Pardons should begin their career by shortining the sentences of these men they would most likely find that the people would find that they had no further use for a board of pardons.

A GREAT deal is being said by certain newspapers about the inauguration ceremonies of President elect McKinley. His carriages and equipments are discribed. His wifes gowns are minutely set before the public gaze. This sort of thing has been overdone. If President McKinley would appear in a plain sensible suit of clothes and his wife should appear dressed as has been her custom for years it would be more in accord with the times and the occasion.

Editor French lets himself out in great shape in commenting on the Day Dunn contest this week. He goes at it as if it were a part of the "sealer" business. He oven pitches into Billy Culkin and goes so far as to say: "Our satisfaction over the result is tempered with disappointment at the fact that the Senator from this district voted for the usurper to retain his seat. We believe he should thrown to the winds his technical reasons and taken the broad grounds of good common sense and political honesty, and voted to seat the rightfully elected Senator."

OFFICIAL BONDS WRONG!

In the failure of City Treasurer Haugan to secure secure sufficient bonds as Treasurer of Minneapolis a good lesson is learned, Mr. Haugan seems to have been all right when elected but owing to bank failures and other dificulties his credit was impaired so that people didn't feel like guaranteeing his coming out whole with the city funds. He claims to have handled, so it is reported, about $16,000,000 of city funds and to have about $400,000 of that amount in banks, about half of which he thinks may be returned to the city treasury, leaving a deficency of something like $200,000. Now what justice between men would there be in asking some kind neighbors who could not say no to placing their names on Mr. H's bond, to step up and bankrupt themselves and bring their families to want through no fault of theirs, nor of the principals, but through the financial wrecking of the banks in which the funds were placed.

In many counties it requires about all the neighbors and well known acquaintances, and political friends that have a few surplus dollars to their credit to make up the big bonds required for county treasurer The neighbors don't like to refuse to sign; they place their names on for all they can conscientiously claim to be worth, or even more, in order to make up the amount. If the treasurer should happen to have bad luck; or should see fit to change his residence to Canada or Mexico before his term is out, it is not fair that his kind neighbors should be left destitute by having to pay his deficiencies, for which they were not responsible, only on account of their inability to say no. when asked to sign his bond.

Would it not be better for every taxpayer to pay his share of the deficiencies in the treasury? Would it not tend to make people more careful in the selection of officers to see added to their tax receipts occasionally, for deficiency in the treasury owing to the defalcation or embezzlement by the treasurer of a few thousands of dollars? When people under the present system come to vote sometimes they say. "I know the candidate is not reliable; is unfit for the office, but his bondsmen will make it good." If they were bondsmen in proportion to the amount of their tax they would look at it a little differently. If a county gets stuck by electing a dishonest or incompetent official the county should suffer the consequences, and not lay the burden off on a few who happened to be better acquainted, or to live neighbors to the defaulter.

There is something wrong about the whole system of neighbors and friends being made paupers through trusting too much in their neighbors or friends, and going on their bonds. Things should be changed.

Duuth Herald: Senator D. B. Hill says he considers newspapers unreliable. The newspapers have a similar opinion of Dayid B.

St. Cloud times:—Lind was defeated last fall, but the chase he gave Clough scared the latter so bad that it was not until this week that he said anything about having been elected governor himself.

Brainerd Journal; When is a thing cheap? When it is easy to get, A majority of the people were afraid money would be cheaper if Bryan was elected. Now honest injun, boys, is it hard enough to suit you?—St. Cloud Times.

Litchfield Independent: Governor Clough has shown his obedience to the political machine or state house ring, by his appointments to state positions. Efficiency cuts no figure, and every appointment is made to pay some political debt. He appointed a son-in law of Mike Doran to the insurance commissionership, at the request of the gold Democrats who helped to elect him.

Swift County Monitor: The county commissioners of Lac qui Parle county have decided to call a special election for the purpose of voting $25,000 in bonds to aid in building a new court house. Swift county now has about $20,00 in sight in a court house fund, but the commissioners still hesitate about taking the first steps toward putting up a building. The sinking fund plan is far ahead of bonds, but sometimes there is considerably delay in getting it a moving.

"If the Republicans," says one of their papers, "can give the farmers better prices by putting on the tariff you bet the Republicans can get some of the farmers' votes. The farmer should do like the rest of the folks—go where his interests are best served. It's a dead sure thing that the Conrier-Journal's party can not or will not do anything for the farmer." "The Courier-Journal's party" is the only party which advocates a policy that will do anything for the farmer. That policy is to allow the farmer and everbody else to do for himself, unhandicapped by bad money and unrobbed by subsidy grabbers and false systems of taxation. The party that claims to be able to benefit the farmers by protective tariffs is simply trying "to get some of the farmer's votes" through deception. The very party that tells the farmers that protection will put up prices tells the people who buy the farmers' products that protection will put down prices.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

England will Not Lead.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—In the house of commons to day the first Lord of the treasury and government leader, Mr. Balfour, replying to questions of Mr. Field, member for the St. Patrick's division of Dublin, said there war no probability of the government initiating such a moyement as the calling of an international monetary conference. He added that it would be premature to discuss the composition of a conference, which, so far as he, Mr. Balfour, knew had not been proposed.—Globe.

May Quit Pointing Guns.

Rochester, Minn., Special, Jan, 19—The coroner's inquest in the case of Lawrence Erickson, the young man who was accdently shot by his friend Fred Swenson, developed that Swenson had pointed his gun at Erickson and playfully gone through the motions of shooting without thinking whether the weapon was loaded. Swenson was arrested and is now in jail. By the provision of the Underleak law, pointing a gun at another is a misdemeanor, and the act of causing death while so committing a misdemeanor makes the crime manslaughter.—Pioneer Press.

Precedent for Day.

To the Editor of the Globe.

On the death of President Lincoln, Vice President Johnson became president. The senate elected Senator Wade as its presiding officer, who by virtue of said election became vice president. Did Senator Wade lose his place in the senate on the expiration of President Johnson's term of office? Was not the case of Senator Wade identical with that of Senator Day? Did Wade retain his membership because the Republicans had a majority in the senate, and was Day turned down because the majority was against him? —R. W. Johnson.

Mr Bryan Is Talking.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 27.—Hon. W. J. Bryan visited the Texas Legislature this morning, and all the business in the two houses was suspended while he made a ringing speech characteristic of his last campaign. He took occasion to say that he noted with pride Texas in the lead in the matter of laws to regulate the corporations that were doing the country harm. He stated that in his state and others, in the past twelve months, corporations had stepped out of their chartered rights and into politics, and that he favored the enactment of a law prohibiting any corporation from contributing to a campaign fund. He said that while reformers were always called enemies of the government, time would show that they were all right, and he desired to encourage them in their worthy fight against corporations that were doing the country so much damage.—St. Paul Dispatch.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22, 1897.

Senator Cameron who has only a few more weeks of public life and who considers himself entirely out of politics and who doing some very plain talking—like his father, the late Simon Cameron he has an expressive vocabulary—about the flip flop certain republican Senators have turned on his Cuban resolution. He is especially bitter against John Sherman, who he says assurred him before he was compelled to accept the position of Secretary of State in McKinley's cabinet that he was for his resolution and who has since then used his influence among Senators who wish to be solid with McKinley against the resolution so industriously that if the resolution was now brought to a vote it would probably be defeated.

A Washington realestate agent said, speaking about John Sherman and how he acquired some of his wealth: "It may be only a coincidence, but it reminded me of a former transaction of the wily Sherman when I saw that just about the time it became certain that he was to become next Secretary of State he took out a permit for the erection of a block of dwelling houses in East Washington. When he became Secretary of the Treasury under Hayes he built a block of houses in an undesirable section of East Washington and they were all sold to employes of the Treasury. I cannot say, of course, that Mr. Sherman made those Treasury employes buy undesireable houses at a big price, but you can imagine how it worked when the real estate agent who handled the property approaches a Treasury employe with a proposition to buy one of these houses, which everybody knew belonged to the Secretary of the Treasurery, and gave him a gentle hint to the effect that the Secretary would not be likely to discharge a clerk who was buying one of his houses, I shall keep my eye on those houses Mr. Sherman is now haying built. I have a curiosity to know whether any of them will be bought by State department employes."

Czar Reed is nearer to having an open revolt on his hands than at any period since he became the autocrat of the House. A respectful petition signed by 208 members of the House has been presented to him asking him to suspend his arbitrary rule against public building bills and to allow a time to be set for the consideration of 22 of those bills now on the calander. He intimated quite plainly to the Committee which represented the petition that he didn't wish to grant the request, although he took it under advisement If he grants this request, there will be plain sailing for him, and not much show for the bills to get through the Senate during the remaining tune of this session; if he refuses it, there may be a very lively row. 208 members, almost two-thirds of the House, can easily uncrown the Czar, if so disposed.

The members of the House Committee on Public Lands declined to follow the wishes of Speaker Reed concerning the Free Homestead bill. The bill has been reported to the House just as it was amended by the Senate and the House will be given an opportunity to vote on the Senate amendments, just as it might have done when the bill first came back from the Senate had not Speaker Reed ordered the bill referred to the Committee. The committee refused even to accept an amendment, exempting from the operation of the bill the lands which the government is selling as trustee for the Indians.

Representative Swanson, of Va., one of the most prominent of the younger democrats in the House has this to say in a public interview about the future of the democratic party: "There will be no reorganization of the democratic party. It is today stronger and more compact, more aggressive and buoyant than any defeated party ever was before. Without intimidation, coercion, or corruption a vast majority of the voters of this country today are in accord with it. Having divorced itself from the present administration, it is building near the affections and the interests of the masses. The democratic party will continue its aggressive fight for both gold and silver as legal tender money and against social privileges to trusts, combines and corporations. Those who failed to act with us in the last election will most of them return to their party. Many have already done so. No concessions in principles or politics will be made, though, to gain the support of these, Shorn of their power of patronage and discredited as loyal democrats those who do not return will not be potential for evil in the future. The democracy proposes to beat no retreat from the advance grounds which it has taken."

McGary Again.

INDEPENDENCE, Minn., Jan. 25th '97.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE:—Time is on the wing; and the world is moving on at a rapid pace, waiting neither for the single gold standard nor international agreement, and it is only a little while until there will be new officers and a new crew at the head of our governmant. Then, it is clamed, the eyes of the blind will be opened; the ears of the deaf will be unstopped. The land shall flow with milk and honey, and we shall cleve one to another and rejoice that we have been delivered from Egyptian pondage. The goods that was promised last fall by the drummers of McKinley, Mark Hanna & Company, will be delivered at your door. O what a rejoicing there will be hard times and proverty will remove stalk itself abroad as does death, pestitence and famine at the midnight hour. The chief apostles on the republican side last fall promised us a shower of great blessings if their party only got in. They made 7 millions of people believe that such an event would bring the millennium to every man's door by the bushel basket full. Now when the Inaguration trumpet Sounds from the outer poarch at the Capitol at Washington, what a gathering of people there will be. The man who voted for a single gold standard will be there, many of them paying their running expences on a borrowed capital. The man who voted for a high protective tariff will be there, in his shoddy suit, thanking the Lord that he is not like some other men but is willing to be the tool and cat's paw of some clique & clan corporation, for their self aggarandizement, and a detriment to his own interest. But whatever may be our fate we can be no worse under the incoming administration than we are under the present one For the present one has been a failure, so far as principle and honor is concerned. When the gods of Mammon bowed their heads in adoration last fall to that golden calf set up in the midst of the camp at gotham. It was a precedent never before brought out in this country or any other. While 6 million of people or more last fall worshiped at the sacred shrine of Abraham and the patriarchs of old, 7 million more bowed the knee to the god of Mammon, and said in good old Anglo-Saxon language, sink or swim, live or die, I give my heart and hand to this vote.

Some say now the battle is over let us be friends (This we are perfectly willing to do) and shake hands over the bloody chasm and tip a tiger for the incoming adminisiration,—Yes, we will forgive the past—but we cannot forget some things, When a people gifted with ordinary intelligence would come out and brand Bryan and his followers as anarchists and repudiators because they favored free coinage of silver at the rato of 16 to 1, while the very man they were voting for was only a convert of the single gold standard of about six months standing. Previous to that had always been a free silver man; always voting that way while in Congress and he is on record as such.

Last fall many made the foolish and simple assertion that Bryan was a kid and too young to be ruler of free people. Alexander the Great was only 20 years old when he took command of the armies of Greece. He conquered the world in less than twelve years, and died at the age of 32. Napoleon Bonaparte was only 26 or 27 years old when he took command of the armies of France; was 46 when he fou ht the battle of Waterloo, and died at the age of 52 Henry Clay was United States Senators at the age of 29 Daniel Webster was a member of Congress at the age of 31. George Washington was a member of the Continental Congress at the age of 42; took command of the army at the age of 43. U. S. Grant at the age of 40 was a Major General. And yet Bryan at the age of 36 was not old enough to serve as a head ruler of a free people. We would not call McKinley a demogogue, a repudiator, an anarchist as thousand have called Bryan and his followers. But are only sorry that Mr. McKinley and his followers will never be able to fill the promises and pledges made to the people last fall. Then the medicine will act, and the last state will be worse than the first, men cannot do impossibilities. The bonded and mortgaged debt is hanging over this country so heavy and so thick that it will take some unseen power or expert generalship to bring us out of this dilemma and place us again udon a sure foundation. A single gold standard a high protective tariff and starting up the mills cannot bring about financial prosperity, unless the poor man can get money to pay debts, buy goods, pay taxes, etc., and the poor man cannot have these favors when all legislation is in favor of the rich and the money changers. There is not a man in the country who voted for the single gold standard last fall be he rich or poor but what would like to get that fifty cent silver dollar as they called it.

Gentelmen you claimed a Waterloo last fall, and think you have banished us into exile. But while we do not aspre to a monarch's throne, we will never fill the grave of the exile. If the Lord is willing ever here to stay, by the help of providence we shall contend for equal rights for justice, and offer special privileges to the classes.

This morning's St. Paul Globe claims that Senator Newlands, (he that made such a good free silver speech at Rockford last fall) has bargained with the leading protectionists at Washington for enough free silver votes to help pass a protective tariff bill high enough to suit the eastern manufacturers, provided the western men are allowed to make the schedule on western products.

During the past 40 years the water in the Gulf of Mexico has risen one foot and scientists are trying to explain it.

There is one good thing about 1897. It will be a remarkably light year for general elections. Only six states will hold elections at all.

Are we degenerating? A woman in Pennsylvania has sued for $10,000 for two kisses, and Kansas state officials did not kiss the Bible when inaugurated out of fear of microbes.

A piano fell on a man and killed him. Usually a man falls on a piano and the listeners (who paid 50 cents to get in) wish they were dead. The first is accident; the second is art.

Statistics show that when a man commits a murder in this country there is only one chance in sixty that he will be legally hanged for the crime. This is what keeps Judge Lynch so long in office.

Vests woven of fine chains that will turn a bullet are being worn by English statesmen and millionaires. Census takers in Massachusetts who have to ask old maids their age are talking of importing a car lot.

Delaware is threatened with the loss of one of its picturesque features, the whipping post. For more than a century this inspiring instrument of torture has been in use for the punishment of petty criminals. Now the constitutional convention proposes to abolish it forever.

Soap is not a modern invention introduced since the days of civilization and towels. It is mentioned twice in the Bible, and a soapmaker's shop has been discovered in the ruins of Pompeii. Some of the soap was found also, and although it had been buried nearly 2,000 years it had lost but little of its efficacy.

Out of 28,000 applications for patents in England in 1896 more than half were for improvements in bicycles. They have wheels in the head in England, as well as in the United States. The English sporting papers, however, acknowledge that the tools and machinery for bicycle manufacturing are better in the United States than in England, and are in great demand.

Settling vexed questions by arbitration is nothing new, so far as the United States and Great Britain are concerned. We settled the island claims in Oregon by arbitration, the Alabama claims, the Behring sea, the Alabama issue, and the San Juan boundary, and now the Venezuela trouble. And all has been done more satisfactorily than if it had been settled by the armies and navies of the two nations.

The United States is now maintaining 28 scientific bureaus for the development of the national resources and industries, which employ over 5,000 persons at an annual cost of nearly $8,000,000. These bureaus are doing all kinds of scientific work, studying the earth and its products, botany, crops, economical questions, statistics, forests, fish, fruit culture, insects, as well as collecting and preserving specimens.

The governor of Kansas has been asked by a woman of the state to recommend the passage of a law prohibiting the use of corsets, but the governor has declined to interfere. It would establish a dangerous precedent. The next attack might be on liver pads or suspenders. The only remedy for the suffering Kansaness is to go to the courts with the corset evil and get an injunction or two, or a couple of stays.

In the near future, as soon as the new law goes in force, there will be only five crimes punishable with death under the United States laws. These are murder on territory over which the United States has jurisdiction, including forts and so on, rape on the same territory, treason, piracy and treasonable betrayal in the trust of the army and navy. Under the old laws there were some 60 offenses punishable with death.

An innovation in the east is the "office girl" in place of the "office boy." Among her qualifications are these: She doesn't know how to whistle, she doesn't smoke cigarettes, she is not addicted to dime novels, she does not indulge in horse play with other office girls, and she is brighter, cleaner, more energetic and neater than the boy. There is something worth thinking about. But if this thing keeps up what is going to become of the boys?

The sultan of Turkey can stand a good deal of prodding. He has agreed to certain reforms, but every one must be wrung from his unwilling hands. The porte is still playing its game of floating on the comparatively placid water caused by the opposing action of the diverse currents of European interests. England and Italy favor armed coercion, a demand hastened by popular sentiment. But Russia, which is acting as a commander of the allied forces, favors giving the Turk more time. It is hard to drive a balky animal when a half dozen teamsters are disputing about methods.

British India is scourged by plague and famine. The bubonic plague is, doubtless, identical with the "black plague" and "black death" of the middle ages. The plague is a concomitant of famine conditions and unsanitary surroundings combined. The mortality in the famine districts and in Bombay itself is frightful, and the government has just realized that millions are being swept away and relief of large proportions must be given. During the last great famine in India the government very meagerly afforded relief. More will be done now, and contributions are pouring in from London.

In his will an Indiana man left $2,000 "to be so invested that the interest shall pay for a glass barrel," in which his name is to be blown, the barrel to be filled with the best apple brandy and set upon his grave as his only gravestone. It is to be filled twice a year, on the Fourth of July and on Christmas. Where will that barrel be when the first Fourth of July rolls around? The intention undoubtedly was to provide an apple brandy oasis for thirsty tramps with the expectation that each would drink his fill and then give way to the next in decorous order, but without the protection of troops it is doomed.

MINNESOTA SOLONS.

The Legislative Proceedings from Day to Day.

Everything Running in a Smooth Manner and There Is an Evident Desire on the Part of Members to Make a Purely Business Session.

St. Paul, Jan. 20.—There seems to be a generous, or some other kind of rivalry between the senate and the house, as to which branch will capture the honors of securing important legislation. Nearly every bill of importance has been introduced in both houses, sometimes simultaneously. Both houses have bills putting the grain commission under the civil service rules; also giving state banks the right to demand 60 days' notice of their depositors, the same as savings banks; also regulating the state deposits; changing the tax and election laws, and so on. Monday in the house of representatives, Johns, of St. Paul, stole a march on a Minneapolis member by introducing a copy of the Georgia anti-trust bill. This bill imposes fines and imprisonment in the penitentiary, for those who engage in trusts in Minnesota. Senator Sheehan, of St. Paul, was planning to introduce the same bill in the senate, but there being no session of the senate Monday he could not do so, and so Johns stole a march on him as well. Sheehan did the best he could and introduced his bill today.

Senator Greer also emulated the house, by introducing the same bill which was presented Tuesday in the other branch, providing for a state library commission and a system of traveling libraries. Another bill was for the repeal of the "corrupt practices" act, on the theory that honest men obey it, while dishonest men gain an advantage by ignoring it. Hence it is better to permit all the candidates for office to be corrupt rather than to compel a portion to be decent. Senator Theden is still regulating elections and offered his tenth bill on that subject today. The real item of interest in the senate, however, yesterday was the executive session, to consider the governor's appointments, especially that of Dr. Reynolds for the health board, in place of Dr. Hewitt. There was an animated debate but Reynolds was confirmed. The only appointment held up was that of J. H. Block, of St. Peter, who was appointed a member of the board of managers for the insane hospital.

Editors are always strong on moral reforms, and Representative Manchester, editor of the Lake Benton News, introduced a bill making a fine of $25 to $100, imprisonment for 30 days and forfeiture of license for theatrical managers who give Sunday entertainments. Manchester will have no passes to the theater this winter. Mr. Feig had a bill abolishing the $5,000 limit of damages when railroads and other corporations kill their employes. Another bill of some interest provides a state board of which the state treasurer is not a member, to determine in what banks state deposits shall be placed and what bonds shall be required. The committee on legislation reported favorably on the constitutional amendment making a governor or governor-elect ineligible for the U. S. senate during his gubernatorial term, but the bill was rescued from passage by a reference to the judiciary committee.

St. Paul, Jan. 21.—It is almost a pleasure to be able to record a measure upon which the two houses of the legislature are not in accord. Tuesday, for instance, a bill was introduced in the house prohibiting Sunday theaters. Yesterday the same bill was introduced in the senate. Tuesday a bill was introduced in the senate making the railroad commissioners elective instead of appointed by the governor. Yesterday a similar bill was introduced in the house. If this thing keeps on, the last 30 days of the session will be devoted to the work of conference committees appointed to determine whether it shall be a house bill or a senate bill which becomes a law, both measures being exactly alike. That is why it was refreshing yesterday to have Senator Wyman, of Minneapolis, advocating the arbitration treaty now before the United States senate, and comparing Grover Cleveland to Abraham Lincoln, while Representative Donnelly, a populist and semi-democrat was offering resolutions against the treaty, and denouncing Cleveland. Both resolutions went over for the day, the senate one going to a committee and that of the house being made a special order for today, when Judge Hicks favoring peace and Donnelly favoring war, will again cross words.

While the United States expels its clerks to conceal the fact that the senators tell the reporters what is done in executive session, the Minnesota senate voted to have their executive sessions open, like the regular business sessions. Now if the governor has any more horse doctors to appoint on the board of health, he can send the names right in and find out what the senators think about it by reading the reports in the newspapers. One of the events in the senate was the passage of a bill, under suspension of the rules, which will enable Mr. Block, of St. Peter, to serve as a member of the insane asylum board notwithstanding he is sheriff.

The Rochester insane asylum was originally an inebriate asylum, with a special tax on every saloonkeeper in the state to support it. The saloon men arose in their political might and transformed the institution into an insane asylum, with a ward devoted to the care of inebriates. A start towards returning to the first principles was made yesterday, by a bill offered by Senator Stebbins, of Rochester, appropriating $50,000 to erect a separate building for inebriates. And thus we reverse the trite saying, making it read "The first shall be last."

Another reform measure offered provides for erecting a reformatory for women located between St. Paul and Minneapolis. As the bill provides for the purchase of from 40 to 60 acres of land, it is the evident intention to have the new reform woman become a farmer.

The house made up yesterday for its industry in sitting Saturday and Monday, when the senate took a vacation, by holding a very short session. Notwithstanding this twenty-five bills were introduced. Among them was one curbing the ambitions of sheriffs by forbidding them from practicing law. Another forbidding the sending of flowers to criminals. Another makes incurable insanity a ground for divorce, while another tinkers with the election law by abolishing the tri-colored tickets and providing a single ballot to contain the names of all the candidates. The remainder were chiefly bridge and local measures.

St. Paul, Jan. 22—Only two bills were offered in the senate yesterday, and those not of general interest. Almost the entire work was devoted to considering the Dunn-Day contest. It was the innings for the attorneys. M. D. Munn, of St. Paul, opened the ball on behalf of Mr. Dunn, and was followed by R. B. Evans, of Minneapolis, in behalf of Day, who spoke until between 5 and 6 o'clock, when an adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock today. When Mr. Evans concludes, either ex-Attorney General Clapp, who is one of the attorneys for Dunn, or Mr. Munn, will make the concluding argument for the contestant. There was no semblance of politics in the speeches yesterday, the argument being entirely a legal one, with an effort to show that Senator Day actually became lieutenant governor when Lieut. Gov. Clough succeeded Gov. Nelson in the executive office; on behalf of Dunn and on behalf of Day to show that, as a legal proposition he was simply president of the senate, but still continued to be a senator. After the attorneys have concluded, a number of the senators who are loaded will speak on the question, and it may be a couple of days before a vote is reached.

The senate passed the Donnelly resolution for a committee to investigate the transfer of the Mountain Iron property, and Senators Yale, Sheehan, Greer and Ringdal were named as the senate portion of the committee. Though Senator Sheehan was one day behind the house with his Georgia anti-trust bill, he got his measure recommended to pass yesterday and may come under the wire first in the race for glory on this measure.

Some members of the house evidently desire to find out where the state is at, in the matter of deposits in broken banks, and a resolution was offered calling upon the state treasurer for a detailed statement of the deposits in insolvent institutions.

The house disposed of one of its contests by giving Mr. Lellman, of Hennepin, the sitting member, his seat, as the contestant did not appear. In the Benton county case, Judge Hicks, under the authority of the resolution over which he and Mr. Donnelly had a war of words, submitted a report that there was no just ground for a contest, and if the house adopts that report, as it probably will, that will end the contests in that branch.

A bill of a good deal of importance, if it should become a law, was offered, requiring railroads to operate second class coaches on all their passenger trains, charging no more than two cents per mile. If this bill ever gets on the statute book, it will result in passenger trains being chiefly composed of second class coaches, with one first class coach attached, much the same as the sleeping cars are now run.

The tinkering with the tax laws was continued by the offering of a constitutional amendment authorizing city or county authorities to exempt personal property from taxation by a vote of the people. This measure could be used to boom business enterprises by offering exemption from taxation for a term of years as a bonus for their establishment.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—The senate occupied the entire day in hearing the continuation of the legal arguments in the Dunn-Day contest. Mr. Evans concluded his argument for Mr. Day at the morning session, and as Mr. Clapp was unable to speak, owing to throat trouble, Mr. Munn made the concluding effort in behalf of Mr. Dunn. The argument yesterday was, as on Thursday, entirely a legal proposition, and no one would suppose from listening to it that railroad or political interests had any bearing on the case. Nevertheless, when it comes to the decision, those factors will undoubtedly be the basis for the result. A man can see the force of a legal argument, when it conforms to his views of the case in other respects, with much more force than when it goes against his wishes. As there are good legal arguments on both sides, every senator can conscientiously vote upon the subject from a legal standpoint and still vote just as he wants to on other grounds. The senate intends to continue the discussion today, though there is no certainty that a vote will be reached today.

So many members of the house were interested in the oratory in the senate that the proceedings of the popular branch of the legislature were rather dull. Mr. Heimerdinger threw in a bomb shell, in the shape of a resolution calling for a committee to investigate the advisability of a law reducing the salaries of state and county officials, including members of the legislature. The cut proposed is 20 per cent, but not to go into effect for two years. This even brought Mr. Jacobson, the great economist of the house, to his feet, who gave notice of debate, and the resolution went over. Mr. Jacobson and some other members of the legislature probably expect to be here two years hence, and they do not relish the idea of cutting their pay down from five to four dollars per day. When the state was younger, members of the legislature received only three dollars per day. It is safe to say this resolution will have a rocky road, unless the portion cutting the legislative salary is eliminated.

Representative Feig introduced four bills yesterday, "by request," which are made to apply to cities of over 100,000 population and less than 150,000. They provide for electing city clerks, city engineers and boards of public works in cities of the proportions named. Of course, such bills can only apply to St. Paul and Minneapolis in this state. It remains to be seen which city will admit that it has only one hundred and fifty thousand people, in order to come in under the bill. The usual bill taxing mining and mineral lands appeared, but for the most part the twenty bills offered were of minor importance.

There was quite a breeze over the resolution directing the state treasurer to furnish, by Tuesday next, the amount of state deposits in each of the insolvent banks, and the names of the sureties for the state. The objection appeared to be the making public the names of the sureties, as it is liable to be damaging to business men if wide publicity is given to such unfortunate obligations. As a makeshift the resolution went to a committee.

Jacobson and Staples seemed to have relented on the vacation question for they allowed the house to adjourn till Tuesday morning. This will make some amends for having to work last week when the senate was having a vacation.

St. Paul, Jan. 25.—After debating the matter all day the senate at 7 o'clock, Saturday evening, decided to oust Frank A. Day of the Sixth legislative district, by a vote of 30 to 23, and followed this by a vote of seating H. H. Dunn, 32 to 21. Senators Stevens, Yale, Young, Miller, Wyman and Culkin spoke in behalf of Day, and Senators, Sheehan, Thompson, Sperry, Knatvold, Spencer and Iltis argued for Dunn. The speeches were made more to explain the reasons why the senators voted as they did than with any idea of converting any one. Several senators frankly stated that the legal arguments presented had not changed a vote. When the oratory had spent its force a vote was reached. Originally a resolution was offered unseating Day and seating Dunn but before a vote was reached the question was divided and the first vote was on this proposition:

Resolved, That the facts referred to in the report of the committee on elections created a vacancy in the office of senator from the Sixth senatorial district on the 31st day of January, 1895, which vacancy continued until the 3d day of November, 1896.

Upon this the vote stood:

Yeas—Barr, Cole, Collester, Currier, Dunham, French, Fuller, Greer, Hansen, Heneman, Iltis, Jones, Keller, Knatvold, Lloyd, McArthur, Ozmun, Peterson, Potter, Poltgieser, Roverud, Sheehan, Smith, Spencer, Sperry, Stebbins, Sweningsen, Thompson, Thorre, Wing—30.

Nays — Cronkite, Caulkin, Hanna, Hodge, Howard, Johnson, A. G. Johnson, W. E. Larson, Masterman, Miller, Morgan, McHale, Reishus, Ringdal, Schaller, Sevatson, Stevens, Stockton, Theden, Whitman, Wyman, Yale, Young—23.

The other branch of the divided resolution was:

Resolved, That H. H. Dunn was, on the 3d day of November, 1896, duly elected to the office of senator from said district, and is entitled to his seat as such senator.

This passed by the same vote, except that Senators W. E. Johnson and Whitney, who voted against ousting Day, voted to seat Dunn, making that vote stand 32 to 21 in favor of Dunn.

The Anderson bill taxing railroad lands, which was passed in 1895 by the bare constitutional majority, Senator Day's vote being necessary, was frequently alluded to in the debate, the friends of Day claiming it would render that measure nugatory if he was unseated, and the opponents denying the claim. The matter will undoubtedly be carried to the courts to decide.

The 30 votes cast to unseat Day were entirely republican, with the exception of Senator Keller (Dem.) of Stearns. In the negative vote there five populists, two democrats, two silver republicans and 14 straight republicans.

A Liberal Raise.

The auditor of St. Louis county has placed the big Oliver mine on the tax list for four years back from 1895, during which time it only paid a royalty of 25 cents per ton to the state as leased land. State Auditor Dunn had intended to tax the mine at 1 cent a ton of output, which would amount to $7,000, of which St. Louis county would get half. By placing it on the tax list at regular rotes the county would get over $9,000 back taxes, while the state will get merely the royalty. — Duluth South Shore and Atlantic road has announced that it will meet the cut on the St. Paul-New York rate, taking effect Jan. 25.

Of His Own Free Will.

Albert Blanz was sentenced from Stearns county in 1888 for life, for murder in the second degree. His term was commuted by Gov. Nelson, and he was released on parole in June, 1895. He broke his parole by skipping from the state in October of that year, and all efforts to apprehend him were futile.

Several days ago, Warden Wolfer received a letter from him from New Orleans, in which Blanz expressed sorrow at his past conduct and offered to return to prison of his own accord. Transportation was sent him through the Pinkerton detective agency.

AMERICAN GIRLS LEAD.

They Are the Best Skaters in the World, Says an Expert.

A two years' visit to Europe spent in study of the methods of skating in England and France has served to convince me that the American girls are the most graceful skaters in the world.

One of the essential rules of the English school is to skate with a "straight knee and this surely teaches ungracefulness. But while the men cling to this old school rule the women of England, I am glad to say, have abandoned it to such an extent that to-day there are many graceful skaters among the fair sex there. Notwishstanding this rigid style, Englishmen execute their movements on so grand a scale that they obtain a sensation akin to that of flying. Their strokes certainly excite the admiration of those who see them apparently floating at will, gliding at times the entire length of the rink on one stroke, only to return again or branch off in another direction by executing a "rocker" (rocking turn) or "bracket" or perhaps, the simple "three."

Hand-in-hand and "combined" skating are now in vogue in Europe. After clasping hands one of two skaters starts backward on the ordinary "cross roll," while the partner follows with forward strokes. On the third stroke the one going forward completes a circle, still followed by the other. Another showy movement is the "combined grapevine." Two persons, passing each other, join hands. One starts the grapevine, leading with the left foot forward; the other starts with the right foot forward: thus both skaters are forced sideways along the ice.

Other movements are in the "vogue," "seagull," "opera swing" and "Qs," but the most atractive of all is the waltz on skates. I have seen many couples gracefully waltzing at once and giving the rink the appearence of a ballroom.

Once of the most graceful women skaters in Europe is Lady Randolph Churchill. She learned to skate in New York, and now executes long, graceful sweeps and curves which vastly improve her skating. Others noted for thier grace on the ice are the countess of Minto, Mrs. W. H. Grenfell, Mrs. May Balfour, Honorable Nrs. Algernon Grosvenor, the marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, Lady Archibald Campbell, Mrs. Cannon, Mme. Girrard, Lady River-Wilson, the Misses Lewis, daughter of Sir George Lewis, and Lady Northcote.

The American women are truly the most graceful skaters in the world, but I must add that owing to the small scale on which thier figures are executed their movements in fancy skating are not worthy of praise as their English cousins, who until lately have been handicapped by dearth of ice.—George Meaglaer, in N. Y. World.

TURNING a mad dog loose is a trifling thing compared to what the devil can do with a gossiping tongue.—Ram's Horn.

When a man falls out of a ten-story window you'd naturally say he is a dead man. Well, perhaps he is and then again, perhaps not. Something may save him. There may be a friendly awning that will let him down easy, so he may be sound and well to-morrow. You never know what may save a man who seems to be as good as dead.

Many a man who seemed to be dying of consumption, and whom the doctors pronounced just as good as dead, has got well and strong and hearty again by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This wonderful medicine has shown the doctors that consumption isn't always a fatal disease. It can be cured if you get at the germs of it in the blood and clear them out thoroughly. That is what this "Discovery" does. It makes new blood,—healthy blood.

The germs of consumption can't exist in healthy blood. They simply let go their hold and are carried out of the system; then the new blood builds up new tissue, new flesh, new power, new life. It carries vitality to the lungs, the bronchial tubes and every other part of the body.

It cures people after cod liver oil has failed, because their digestive organs are too weak to digest fat-foods. The "Discovery" makes the digestion strong.

For thin and pale and emaciated people there is no flesh-builder in the world to compare with it. It doesn't make flabby fat, but hard, healthy flesh. It builds nerve-power and force and endurance. It is never safe to pronounce any one "dying of consumption," or any other wasting disease, until this marvelous "Discovery" has been given a fair trial.

Dr. Pierce's thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" will be sent free paper-bound for the cost of mailing only, 21 one-cent stamps. Cloth-bound, 10 stamps extra. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

AN UNFORGOTTEN KISS.

The rain is rattling on the pane, the wind is sweeping by,
Now with discordant shriek, anon with melancholy cry.
A lonely man, I sit and read beside the dying fire
The daily tale of love and crime, of greed and vain desire.

Th eletters blur and fade, the room grows dim and disappears,
And in its stead old scenes come back across the waste of years;
And set in frame of golden hair a fair
young face I see,
Whose two soft eyes of deepest blue look wistfully on me.

Once, on a memorable eve, when heart and hope were young,
Those luminous eyes upon my life a sudden glory flung:
As she was then I see her now, my young,
my only choice,
The brightness on her sunny brow, the music in her voice.

One question, and but one I ask, then for an answer wait;
My very heart is motionless, expectant of its fate!
A wondrous light—the light of love—glows
in the tender eyes—
Her breath is warm upon my face—O sweetest of replies!

But bless my heart! The driving rain is coming in, I fear—
Or is that shining little drop upon the page a tear?
Well, who would think an old gray head could be so soft as this,
When more than thirty years have fled since that fond, foolish kiss!
—John Scott, in Chambers' Journal.

"RAMBLING ROBIN."

BY JAMES DAVENPORT.

People called him "Rambling Robin." You could have seen him almost any day walking along with his head hanging down, and his eyes fixed on the ground. Nobody spoke to him, nor did he speak to anybody. His clothes were in rags. He wore no collar. Sometimes a red scarf was fastened round his neck, but oftener than not his neck and chest were bare to the cutting winds. Nobody knew where he came from, and nobody cared.

Some said he had been an actor at one time—others that he had been a doctor, whilst many maintained that he was a man who had gambled away a large fortune. Whatever he might have been, we could all see that he was no common vagrant.

I do not know whether the peace and good will which are supposed to come to all men at Christmas-time had anything to do with it, but when I passed him one Christmas Eve a few years ago, as I was hurrying off home, a sudden impulse led me to stop.

"Will you come home with me and have your supper, Robin?" I said.

He stopped and lifted up his head. Poor fellow! I noticed the tears spring to his eyes. Kind words were strangers to him.

"My—my supper!" he gasped. "I never have any supper."

I quite believed him. In fact, if he had said he never had anything to eat at any time, I should not have contradicted him.

"But make an exception to-night," I urged. "Christmas-time, you know. People break the ordinary routine of their lives at Christmas. Come along."

He made no answer; at least, not with words, but his eyes spoke plainly enough, and, quickening his pace, we strode along together towards my home.

At last we reached the house, and my wife opened the door. My little Mabel came toddling to meet me, and as I lifted her up and carried her back on my shoulder, I told my wife I had brought a friend home for supper.

Robin and I sat talking together whilst Annie was getting the meal ready. His face had brightened, and his brilliant conversation confirmed the opinion I had formed of him, that he was a man of culture.

Mabel climbed down from my knee, and went across to Robin.

"Have oo no 'ittle dirl?" she lisped.

He stroked her hair gently, and shook his head.

"And no mamma?" she asked, looking first at me, and then at the smiling face of my wife.

Robin turned his face away. Trust a child for finding the way to a man's heart.

"No, no mamma," he replied, after a pause.

Mabel sighed, and came across to me.

"Is 'ee poor man?" she asked.

The intervention of my wife with the information that supper was ready saved me from replying.

The meal over, my wife rose to take Mabel to bed, but before she left the room the little girl ran back, and climbing on Robin's knee, kissed him "Dood night." Then Robin and I pulled our chairs to the fire. His eyes were shining. He seemed a different man. I handed him a cigar, and we sat smoking for awhile without speaking.

"Would you like to hear the history of 'Rambling Robin?'" he asked, bending forward. "If you would, I will tell you the first part. The second part only begins to-night. . . . You shall hear that in a year or two."

I did not quite understand him, but I nodded and waited for him to start.

"Two lines," he began, "frequently occur to me. You remember them:

'Who falls from all he knows of bliss,
Cares little into what abyss.'

They are the truest lines ever written," he said, and he stared into the fire for a time without speaking.,

"Listen, and I will tell you how I fell. Five years ago I was a young man. Do I look young now?" and he pointed to his sunken cheeks and gray-streaked hair. "And yet five years have made the difference.

"My name is Robin Alerne. I was living with my father in Scotland, and it was there I met my Flora. I can see her now, as she was the day I first met her. It was a glorious day in June. I had sauntered out with my rod in the morning, and was whipping the stream which ran along the outskirts of the wood, when the sound of sweet music fell on my ear. I turned round, and saw a woman. She had not seen me, and as she came along she sang in a voice as sweet and pure as was the singer:

'Her face is fair, her heart is true,
As spotless as she's bonnie, O!
The opening gowan, wet wi' dew,
Nae purer is than Nannie, O!'

"She was slinging her sun-bonnet in her hand, and the sun was playing with her golden hair. Her neck was bare, its whiteness contrasting with her bonnie, sunburnt face.

"When she saw me she stopped and blushed. Then she threw on her bonnet, and walked on hurriedly.

"She was a girl from the neighboring farm. I fell in love with her, and we met in the wood, unknown to anyone. Then my father heard. He forbade me to see her, and told me if I disobeyed him he would turn me from the house.

"I met Flora the same night, and persuaded her, on that glorious moonlight night, to be my wife. We came south together, and I married her. I was successful in obtaining a clerkship, and after my work at the office was done, my wife would sit in the little chair by my side, whilst I sat writing at my desk. For I had the gift of writing bits of stories, and often when the night had drawn on, and work was put away, Flora and I would sit talking of the future, of the day when I should be a famous author, and the drudgery of the office should be a thing of the past.

"But our happiness was too great to last. The roses on my darling's face began to fade, and, though she tried to smile away my fears, I felt sure she was going to be ill.

"Then one night when I came from the office I found her ill in bed. In despair I sat down to write a story, which, if accepted, would enable me to get her away into the country, or to the seaside. I worked at it all night, and finished it. Then a week later I received a letter at the office from the editor telling me that my story had been accepted, inclosing a check, and asking for more stories.

"Flora had been growing worse each day, but now, I thought, she should soon be better. I cashed the check and bought some luxuries for her, and, passing a flower-shop, I went in and obtained a spray of lilies. They were her favorite flowers.

"Then I hurried away home. I could hardly walk fast enough, but at last I reached my little house, and entered. I ran upstairs, and threw open her bedroom door.

"'Flora,' I cried. 'Success at last, my darling. You shall go away for a few days now.'

"She did not answer me. 'She must be asleep,' I thought, and noiselessly I walked across the room.

"I stood over the bed, looking at my sweetheart's lovely face. It was so calm, so beautiful, so pure. There was a sweet smile on her lips, and her hair was hanging down, framing her face in gold. My thoughts wandered back to that day in June, and the words of that song came back to me.

"I knelt at the side of the bed, and, placing the spray of lilies in my Flora's little hand, waited in silence, watching and praying—praying that she would soon be restored to health again.

"She awoke with a little start.

"'I am so glad you have come, Robin,' she said, as I kissed her. 'I have had such a glorious dream. I was dreaming that you had written a book, and that the world was ringing with your name.'

"I interrupted her.

"'Perhaps that day is not far off, love. See, my story has been accepted, and the editor begs that I will send him some others.'

"She did not speak, but the proud look in her eyes told me what her thoughts were. Then she saw the lilies and she kissed me for them."

Robin covered his face with his hands, and a sob shook his frame. He rose from his chair and walked round the room. Then he stopped, and, with his face averted, he finished his story:

"In less than a week she was dead. She died in my arms. I thought she was better, but it was not to be. She was too good to live. We were too happy for this world. Heaven would have had no meaning could we have lived together longer. And when her last breath was gone I laid her back gently on the bed, and covered her face from my sight. I went on my knees and cursed—cursed my fate and everything else.

"Now, perhaps, you understand my fall. 'Why work,' I thought, 'when I have nobody to work for?' My literary work was neglected. I lost my situation at the office, I have sunk deeper and deeper, until now." he paused for awhile, "now I am 'Rambling Robin.'"

Then he came across and stood by the fire.

"But the innocent prattle of that little child of yours has brought me to my senses. As there is a God above, I will yet make the world ring with my name. Even if I cannot work for my dead Flora, I can work for her memorys sake. And so I will. I start to-night on the second part of my life. In two years I will let you know the result. I will come and see you. Good-by."

I pressed him to stop the night, but he would not. I persuaded him, however, to take the loan of a few pounds, and as he walked to the door I slipped a note into his hands.

And last Christmas Eve he kept his promise. He came to see me carrying a small parcel under his arm. It was a book—the book of the year. He had written it under a nom de plume. His name now is known throughout the English-speaking world, and the book which made his name is dedicated:

"To my angel wife and Mabel."—Tit-Bits.

Crushed.

S. R. Crockett, the "Kailyard" novelist, was waited upon, after one of two or three lectures he has ever delivered, by a heavy, solemn-faced Scot, who shook him by the hand in a melancholy manner. "I hae read a' your buiks," he said, and, after a pause, he added: "Up to this." Mr. Crockett expressed his thanks. The man was silent awhile, and tried again: "You dinna do this for a livelihood?" he asked, referring to the recent lecture. "No," replied Mr. Crockett, meekly. "I was thinking that," said Mr. Crockett's critic, with still deeper solemnity.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Reasonable Request.

A preacher once found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he had fairly begun. On seeing this he stopped and exclaimed: "Brethren, it's not fair! Wait till I get a start, and then, if I am not worth listening to, gang to sleep; but dinna nod yer pows before I get commenced. Gie a buddy chance!"—Leisure Hours.

A COLD SNAP.

Low Temperature Causes Intense Suffering Among the Poor.

Mercury Falls Below the Zero Mark Over a Wide Territory—Reaches 51 Below in Minnesota—Appeals for Aid.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—The people of Chicago, in bodies and as individual citizens, were aroused Monday to take prompt and generous action for the relief of the 40,000 destitute inhabitants, whose suffering for want of fuel, food and clothing has reached an extreme stage as a result of the terribly cold wave which came upon the city Saturday, increasing in intensity until Monday it reached the lowest point officially recorded in a quarter of a century. Between five and seven o'clock Monday morning the weather bureau in the Auditorium tower, where it is warmer than on the street, recorded 20 degrees below zero. Only once in the history of the bureau—December 24, 1872, 23 below—has the temperature fallen lower. From nine a. m. to two p. m. there was a gradual rise, the range being 18 to 12 degrees, but the relief was hardly felt when accompanied with a cutting wind from the northwest. The highest temperature for the day was ten below zero.

Poor Suffer at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Jan. 26.—The cold wave, which reached here Saturday night, continues and the mercury remains close to zero, with high wind, but no snow. The suffering among poorer classes of people is intense, and Sunday night over 500 unfortunates were sheltered at the police stations.

Reports received Monday show the cold wave extends south to Texas and west to the Rocky mountains. In western Missouri the mercury dropped 60 degrees in 24 hours, and dispatches received from all parts of the state indicate that great damage has been done to the wheat crop, and that much of the early budding fruit has been killed.

Throughout Oklahoma, Arkansas and in northern Texas the temperature has fallen from 30 to 70 degrees in the past 36 hours, and in the latter section light snow has fallen. In western Texas the storm reached the proportions of a blizzard and severe loss on the cattle ranges is apprehended. Throughout southern Illinois and western Tennessee the weather is the coldest of the season. The mercury in many places is below zero and a light snowstorm is prevailing.

The Weather at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Jan. 26.—The cold wave which came here Saturday was felt here Monday in full force. In the morning the thermometer recorded 20 below zero. The relief organizations of the city are overwhelmed with applications for help from the suffering unemployed and there is much distress that cannot be alleviated.

Coldest Ever Known.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 26.—The last 24 hours has been the coldest ever known in Michigan, and at points in the state the thermometer registered 24 degrees below zero. In Detroit the mercury marked 20 degrees below at the Michigan Central slip dock on the Detroit river, and at St. Clair the river was entirely choked by ice, and showed 24 degrees below zero. From all over the state came reports of extremely cold weather.

Minnesota and the Dakotas.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 26.—Excessive cold is reported again all over the northwest. It is 20 below in St. Paul, and as low as 32 below at points northwest of here.

Fifty-One Below.

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 26.—The government thermometers here Monday registered 32 degrees below zero, but private instruments went much lower. There is no wind. It is 51 below on the ranges at Virginia, 42 at Tower, 40 at Ely and 28 at Two Harbors.

Suffering in Omaha.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 26.—Pitiful stories of want and destitution are coming to the attention of the authorities, aggravated by the intense cold which still holds its grip on the city and state. The city authorities on Monday had over 1,000 families to provide coal for, in addition to food and clothing. The charitable institutions of the city are able to assist only a small portion of those in actual need of protection.

In Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 26.—The terrible cold continues and the suffering among poor of Cleveland eclipses any previous record. The below-zero weather—for at eight a. m. Monday the mercury had dropped to 15 below—brought a tremendous crowd of half-starved, half-frozen, scantily-clad people to the city relief office. They applied for food, fuel and clothing, the demand for coal being greater than at any previous time in the history of the city, not excepting the panic year of 1893. Red tape in the matter of investigation was dispensed with, and for the first time in the history of the city the applicants for relief were given the benefit of the doubt.

In Iowa.

Dubuque, Ia., Jan. 26.—This section of Iowa is experiencing the coldest weather it has known for many years. Monday morning it was 22 degrees below zero. The heavy snowstorm was followed by severe cold. Several cases of freezing have been reported, but none of them of a serious nature. The poor people are in desperate straits and the authorities are besieged with applications for relief.

Pennsylvania.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 26.—The coldest weather of the winter prevails throughout western Pennsylvania. In this city the mercury dropped from seven to ten degrees below zero, while thermometers in the country registered from five to ten degrees colder. The cold wave was preceded by a heavy fall of snow.

In Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 26.—The temperature in northwestern Kentucky registered ten degrees below zero early Monday morning. The minimum in the Blue Grass region was two degrees below. Louisville's lowest temperature was three degrees below zero at 7:30 a. m. At 11 p. m. the mercury stood at two above. All cases of suffering are being relieved by the charity organizations.

In Canada.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26.—The coldest weather of the season prevailed throughout Ontario Monday. The lowest temperature reported Monday is 52 degrees below zero at White River, in the northwestern part of the province. Eight below zero was registered in this city, the lowest so far this winter. Temperatures at other points are: Ottawa, 26 below; Kazabazua, Que., 32 below; Pembroke, Ont., 30 below, and Almonte, 27 below.

EXPELLED FROM THE ORDER.

Knights of Pythias Take Extreme Action in Case of Charles H. Klee.

New York, Jan. 23.—The grand tribunal of the Knights of Pythias, sitting in this city, expelled Charles H. Klee of Bayard Taylor Lodge 157, of this city, from the order. The action was taken on an appeal by Alonzo Bedell, the grand chancellor of the order in this state, from a sentence of three months suspension passed against Mr. Klee by the New York State lodge at its session in Buffalo in 1894, when Mr. Klee was charged with conduct detrimental to the welfare of the organization. The charges grew out of the decision of the Supreme lodge in 1894, that all the business and services of the lodges should be conducted in the English language.

So great was the feeling aroused among the German members by this action that early in 1894 Mr. Klee and several other Germans started an organization known as the Improved Order Knights of Pythias. Mr. Klee was made the past supreme chancellor of the new order, but he retained his membership in the original knights.

The original order numbers about 300,000. What proportion of them will support Mr. Klee is not known. The decision promises to lead to serious troubles in the original society.

Congress of Mothers.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The executive committee of the National Congress of Mothers, which will be held in Washington February 17, 18 and 19, have arranged the programme of exercises for that event. It includes a reception of the visitors by Mrs. Cleveland at the white house on the 17th and the reading of many appropriate papers. The movement for the meeting of the congress has attracted the attention and enlisted the interest of women all over the country. Letters of inquiry are coming from every class of mothers, many of whom can scarcely write, but all expressing a great anxiety to receive benefit from the discussions. While the congress is in session a model nursery will be operated to interest mothers in proper hygenic surroundings for children.

Insurgents Win a Bloody Fight.

Cincinnati, Jan. 23.—A special to the Commercial-Tribune from Key West, Fla., says that News was received in Havana from Cuban sources that a fight occurred in Pijua, Matanzas province, last week, in which the Spanish lost 100 men killed and wounded. They were attacked by Capt. Morenzio's band of Cuban guerillas at daybreak, while marching to reenforce a Spanish garrison there, and but for the aid extended from Pijua would have been cut to pieces. Pijua was abandoned the next day, and the town was burned by the Spanish, who retreated to Colon, taking with them 150 wounded and sick Spanish soldiers who were in the hospital at Pijua.

Press Correspondent Dies in Cuba.

Havana, Jan. 21.—Dr. Burgess says that Henry Delgado, correspondent of the Mail and Express of New York and an American citizen, whose residence was at Hudson, N. Y., died Tuesday night. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee had interested himself to the utmost in the case of the unfortunate. Delgado was captured by the Spaniards while he was lying ill in an insurgent hospital in the province of Pinar del Rio in December last. From that place he was brought to San Ambrosio hospital in this city, which is set apart for political prisoners.

Big Fire at Syracuse, N. Y.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 26.—A big fire which started at the corner of South Salina and Fayette streets early Monday evening, owing to the violent wind became practically unmanageable, and at midnight had destroyed three large business blocks occupied by the New York cloak house, Palmer's millinery house, Kimball Piano company's agency, Leiter Bros.' piano and jewelry house and L. A. Witherill's dry goods establishment. Many other firms suffered extensive damage. The loss will aggregate $250,000.

An Extra Session for March 15.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Unless he should change his mind in the meantime President-elect McKinley will call an extra session of congress for Monday, March 15. This information was given to Congressman-elect J. C. Sturdevant, of the Twenty-sixth district, by Maj. McKinley, in Canton, a few days ago. Mr. Sturdevant said he gained from Maj. McKinley's conversation the impression that the president-elect thought the tariff question should be disposed of at an early date.

COAST DEFENSES.

Resolutions Adopted by the Convention at Tampa, Fla.

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 23.—In the coast and harbor defense and improvement convention Friday the committee on resolutions submitted its report, which was adopted without debate. The resolutions provide that the convention shall not submit any suggestions to the government looking towards the appropriation of any specific sum of money for the national defense, leaving the matter entirely to the recommendation of the proper authority. The army organization or "Lamont bill" is fully endorsed, and an early consideration of the same bill by congress is urged, and its passage recommended. An increase in the annual appropriation for the state militia of the United States and the distribution of the Springfield rifles turned in by the United States army among the militia or national guard of the various states is recommended. Congress is urged to enact such legislation as will give proper aid to the naval reserves of our country. The yearly addition of fighting ships and torpedo boats to the strength of the navy is recommended. The attention of congress is called to the necessity of immediate protection to the seaboard of the country.

The convention closed its session Friday. The committee on resolutions further recommended the organization of a national defense organization and that the following gentlemen constitute the officers of the permanent association for the first year: President, Gen Horace Porter, of New York; secretary, Col. J. A. Frye, of Massachusetts; first vice president, Gen. J. B. Gordon, of Georgia; second vice president, Gen. Lew Wallace, of Indiana; third vice president, Hon. A. K. McClure, of Pennsylvania; fourth vice president, Gen R. A. Alger, of Michigan; fifth vice president, M. H. De Young, of California; sixth vice president, Gen. William Miller, of Florida; seventh vice president, John C. Popes, Massachusetts. It was also resolved that the next convention be held at Washington, D. C.

LOST CONTROL OF HER NERVES.

A Helpless, Painful Condition.

From the Tribune, Minneapolis, Minn.

It is said that the present generation is living in an era of nervousness. Some attribute the cause to the climate of our country; if there is an atmospheric effect it certainly is the least of the causes that produce nervousness. The great freedom enjoyed by the American people is in a large measure to blame for the high-strung condition of our nerves. There is rustle and hustle on every hand. There are excursions, picnics and long journeys. We work days and plan during the nights, and in our hurry we bolt our food, sleep with irregularity, with seldom a thought of our nerves.

MRS. C. H. GUISE.

Mrs. C. H. Guise, of 410 Central Avenue, East Minneapolis, had the misfortune to suffer constantly from nervousness, and her trouble was aggravated by want of sleep. Night after night of sleeplessness had created a worn out condition and she sometimes would jerk and jump unconsciously.

In relating her experience to a Tribune representative, she said:

"I wish to state to you the great benefit I have derived from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. For many months I was afflicted with nervous debility and could get no relief, until I began using the Pink Pills, the required result came very soon, and I hope I may have the privilege of recommending them to everyone suffering as I did, for I am certain the medicine gives instant relief without any bad results.

(Signed) MRS. C. H. GUISE."

Subscribed and sworn to before me, a Notary Public.

T. E. ANDREWS, Notary Public,
Hennepin Co., Minn.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

—Bit by bit the immensely valuable real estate in Denver once owned by Senator Tabor has passed out of his posession, till now the only property standing in his name consists of 16 lots surrounded the family homestead. This, too, will go to creditors next week under a foreclosure. There are mortgages on it, amounting, with interest, to $35,000, and the house and land will hardly realize that amount. Not long ago Tabor was ranked among Colorado's richest men, but misfortunes of various kinds have left him practically penniless.

—Madison Cawein, the Louisville poet, whose verses are sometimes seen in the magazines, disclaims the distinction of genious, which his friends attribute to him. "Genious," he argues, "does its work lightly, without effort. I don't. Eighteen good lines is a morning's work for me. What I accomplish is by hard work and talent, not by genious."

—Ibsen's statue for the front of the Christiania National theater has been finished and sent to Berlin to be cast. He is represented in a long, closely-buttoned coat, with his hand behind his back, bending forward in a reverie. It is difficult to recognize him, for the stulptor has reprecented him,, without the spectacles which he always wears. There is a companion statue of Bjornsen.

Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. DELANO, FRIDAY, JAN. 29, 1897.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Miss Arnold gave a plesant party to a number of friends at the Meister parlors, Tuesday evening.

--Sunday, Monday and Tuesday were cold days. The lowest registered thermometer showed 29½ below zero.

--The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church will have a 5 o'clock tea at Mrs. C. H. Green's, Friday Jan. 29. Everybody invited.

--Read the notice of a meeting for arranging for Washington's Birthday celebration, at 7:30 P. M. Monday, Feburary 1, at M. A. O.Hair's office.

--Yesterday the cold snap let up, and people began to move about a little more, and have now concluded to remain in Minnesota at least until next winter.

—The K. P dance, last Friday evening was attended by about 65 couples. Had the weather been more pleasant and the roads more passable the City Hall would hardly have held the crowd.

—The case of Diptheria, at Angus McEachran's that made its appearance the fore part of the month has about recovered, and the premisis have been thoroughally fumigated and the quarantine was raised Thursday.

—If Jim Hill is going to allow those who ship stock to wait three or four days for cars this cold weather he should have some sheds built at the stock yards and not have the animals left out in the open air to suffer.

--Samuel R. Coffin, son of W. J. a former resident of Delano is now foreman of the Ida County Era. at Ida Grove, Iowa. W. J. used to run a photograph gallery here and moved away several years ago when "Sammy" was quite small. We are pleased to note the success of one of our Delano boys.

--The tax-gatherers were at Meister's Hotel Tuesday and Wednesday, before noon on the first day they could not be even seen, without a long wait, the crowd was so big. It beats all how anxious people are to get their taxes payed. Some of them drew a long sigh of relief when they had secured their receipts and again got out of the jam.

—It is currently reported that a couple of Hennepin County young boys met on Wednesday in a Delano saloon and engaged in a friendly scuffle, which terminated in one of the boys biting a mouthful of lower lip off of the other, thus marking him for life, and leaving in plain view to everybody he meets a reminder that Delano whiskey is not the proper drink for Hennepin County boys even on cold days.—We hear later that the one bitten was a man.

--At about 11 o'clock last night the fire bell was rung and after making the rounds of the town the citizens found the fire was located in the John Haffner residence on third street now occupied by O. L. Billings. The fire companies were soon on hand. The piana was rushed out onto the sidewalk, loose articles were thrown out into the snow and large volumes of water from the hose soon turned to icicles over a portion of the house while things inside were generally deluged. The house was sayed in a damaged condition. People living a block from the City Hall complain that they did not hear the fire bell. It was rung in good shape.

—State examinations were held in several branches at the High School this week. A very large percentage of pupils have failed to pass for some reason or another. It is claimed in some branches as high as a hundred percent of failures were recorded. It does seem that in classes of 30 or 40 pupils the questions and the "larnin" should be a little nearer together. It is very discouraging to an entire class to come up for examination and learn that not an individual can pass. Something is mismanaged somewhere. This ought not to be. Pupils should be examined in what they know not in what they don't know. The pupils, the books and the questions should bear some relation to each other.

—When the four o'clock train on Monday was about to pull out for St. Paul several of our citizens noticed a man trying to find a chance to get onto the train without being seen by the conductor. He missed his calculations as the conductor had seen him and kept close watch so that the traveler was left on the track. Soon after Marshal Nelson and Joe Merriman took charge of him on the strength of a telegram from Litchfield, which gave a good discription of the stranger. He was searched and a 32 caliber revolver taken from him and he was led down to jail where he remained until the evening train west when he was brought to the train and placed in charge of the sheriff from Meeker county, who had been to the cities looking for him. He proved to be the man who had escaped from Litchfield jail and who was charged with breaking into the Bassel depot recently. The prisoner acted malisaly here and made the officers carry or drag him to the jail and back to the depot, refusing to walk, saying he proposed to have the officers earn their money.

—While carrying the plate matter over from the depot on his shoulders, a couple of weeks ago, Editor Wharton came by the Post Office and suddenly, but not very gracefully sat down on the sidewalk. He wasn't long in getting up again. As the Eagle didn't mention this it may be news to some people.

County Cullings.

The Cokato Review was issued this week for the first time. It is claimed to be the first school paper published in Wright County.

The Monticello Times strenuously denies the imputation given out that a movement was on foot to place Clearwater in Stearns County. Changing county lines ought not to be lightly considered; nor too easy of accomplishment.

Senator Culkin, of Wright, is reported as being among those who voted against declaring Senator Day's seat vacant, also against seating Mr. Dunn in his stead. It looks strange to people out in the country to see men who two years ago allowed Mr. Day the priyilege of holding two offices, Lieut. Governor and State Senator, now, although belonging to the same body, with no intervening election, unseating him from the Senate. Wright County's Senator is not among that number.

It has been intimated that the Sergeant at arms of the State Senate thought he was running things about the capitol. He is a Wright County man.

From the Wayerly Tribune, we learn that S. A. Anderson, 68 years of age, of Marysville, froze his hands last Saturday while walking home from Marysville, and that Dr. J. V. O'Connor assistad by Dr. Chilton amputated four fingers of the right hand and three on the left hand.

The Journal publishes a long list of names of people who have recently taken out their second papers and become citizens of the U. S. Among others occurs such well known men as Donold Cruickshank, H. Tanner, and Charles Stein.

William Whan, of Buffalo, died Tuesday Jan. 26.

Mrs. George Riffe, of Albion, died Wednesday of last week.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter, at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

THE new cruiser Brooklyn struck a ledge of rock and nearly went to the bottom in the Delaware River. Our navy ought to keep out to sea; it don't seem safe for such vessels around the shores.

WHAT is the matter with Page Morris that he has to have our legislators to beg Mr. Reed to find a good place for him? Is he not as capable as Charlie Towne or what is the matter. K.

THE Duluth News Tribune Annual for 1897, a supplement in pamphlet form, A Vast Empire and its Metropolis, is at hand. It is nicely gotten up and shows the enterprise of both people and printers from the Zenith City by the unsalted sea.

THE fabulous sums received by Grant Bramble for his rotary steam engine don't seem to materialize. There seems to be an overstock of confidence somewhere, and Grant Bramble appears to be only an ordinary Bramble after all.

THE Evening Penny Press, now a stock company, is running in good order. They expect to raise subscription soon from $2.50 to $3.00 per year. If you want a good daily paper you had better subscribe befor the raise and save half a dollar.

THE Loud bill for rearranging postal rates and doing away with a large percentage of 2nd class mail matter will tend to reduce the deficiency in the postal service. Some parties have abused the privileges granted them under the existing law until some such step as that of the Loud bill is necessary.

ALL the republican members but one of the Minnesota Legislature from the Sixth Congressional District are said to have signed a petition to Hon. Thomas B. Reed asking that Judge Page Morris be appointed a member of the committee on Rivers and Harbors. From what we have heard from Mr. Reed, he is apt to appoint his committies to suit Thomas B. Reed.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND made one of the jolliest speeches of his life to the Academy of Medicine at Carnagie Hall, N. Y. a few evenings ago. He gave the country doctor of fifty years ago a great deal of credit and praise. He must remember some service done, or is trying to get on the right side of the profesion in anticipation of needing them after awhile.

LABOR organizations represeuted by attorney W. W. Erwin are after Labor Commissioner Powers with a sharp stick, so to speak. They claim that he issued a political book during the campaign. They claim that "The Purchasing Power of Gold" should not have been gotten up and printed at the state's expense under the guise of Labor statistics, or anything appertaining to Labor matters. Mr. Powers is acting as his own attorney in the case.

DULUTH is having quite a controversy as to whether or not the street railway shall be allowed to use salt on its tracks. After reading the story of the poor horse that was tied for several hours where he stood in a mixture of the salt and snow in the streets of an eastern city, and whose hoofs came off as he was driven over the streets immediatly afterwards, it would seem people would prefer to give a few more men jobs cleaning snow off the tracks to using salt which produces such sideffects by reason of the intense cold caused by the snow and salt mixture.

THERE is an effort on foot to establish a woman's reformatory. W. H. Holton superintendent of the St Cloud reformatories of this it is alleged, established in connection with the institution there; if so all well and good, let it go. If not and a new house is to be built Delano is the proper place for it. Delano is easily accessible to all parts of the state; near the great cities where most of the incorrigible females are supposed to hail from and if everybody else is going to have a public institution of some kind, Delano ought surely to have this. Let our members of the Legislature see to it that Delano is provided for and has her share of public crumbs.

AFTER Congress amends the proposed treaty with England, on arbitration so that it ensures the safety of the Monroe Doctrine and looks out for a few more rights of the U. S. it seems those so interested in bringing it about are not so anxious to have arbitration as they were. Everbody wants peace, but don't think it necessary to yield all our rights to others in order to get it.

FROM the way the late election of City officers at Duluth went it looks as if those people who were so sure that Towne got most of his votes from foreigners was mistaken. Just think of it almost a unanimous reform sweep, only two Republican Aldermen getting in, out of a possible eight. The new election laws disfranchised a lot of votes which from the result of the present election must have been Page Morris votes.

ROCKFORD RUMBLINGS.

The ancient and beautiful little village of Rockford nested among the hills on the bank of Crow River does not seem to change very much. "Men may come and men may go" may apply to other places; and even in a measure to this. Yet, after the lapse of nearly a quarter of a century, the familiar faces and the whitened locks of Messrs Mounts, Waren, Harvey, Ames, Conklin, Hessler, Purdy and Geo. Florida, Jeff, Benner would almost make one think that Rockford was excluded from this charge. But the brook is there; the raging Crow turns the wheels of industry. The golden grain is ground, the saw logs are turned into lumber, and the wool is turned into nice warm yarn, flanels, cloth, blankets and other things going to prove that Rockford is some ahead of where it was 25 years ago.

Boys have become men, some of them sporting tiny moustaches, others have beards of larger growth, and most of them can argue on the silver question, or the tariff; while many are high up in the mysteries of the "Oriental Order of the Eastern Star", and claim to have the best lodge in existence of this order. George Crandall, Charley Bugbee, Will Guptil, and a few others can tell all about the order. They claim Dr. Soper for a brother, Attorney Cochran for a half brother, and other prominent citizens of the county as near and dear relatives. Then there are the Johnsons Frank and Chet. They came to town after it was started. They belong to the new generation: the kid element. Yet they are pronounced as royal good fellows, even though they cannot give the grip nor the pass word to the flourishing order. Frank says it wasn't him that tried to toll the neighbors chickens over to the store New Year's eve. If it was anybody belonging to the firm it must have been "Chet". Delanoites well remember the ancient legions about this worthies noctural habits; How ordinary windows were no particular detriment to his appearing at the breakfast table next morning fresh and rosy and prepared to dispose of the usual amount of provender. It is understood that he has a fondness for the flesh of fowls also: But not even a suspicion seems to fall on him, where he is known. However he insists that a trail of corn was plainly visible from the Johnson crib to a Rockford hen house. We don't know which hen house; as the village has several. But if the owner of the hens that live in this particular house does commence suit against Johnsons it may crop out who he is.

There is more news at Rockford but we couldn't get it all at once.

Among our Exchanges.

Farm Field and Fireside: It is estimated that more gold and silver have been sunk in the sea than are now in circulation on the earth.

Duluth Herald: One of the best things reported about Mr. Gage, the next secretary of the treasury is that his selection does not please Wall street.

Dassel Anchor: Every time England Spain or any other old played-out monarchy gets a bluff called you hear the same old cry; "War is inhuman—let's arbitrate".

St. Paul Globe: With a few more accidents the Brooklyn and Texas will prove that rocks and sandbars are furnishing all the harbor defense that Uncle Sam needs.

Prison Mirror: One great trouble with the politics of this country is that too many young men entertain the idea that the right to vote implies the right to copy the bad habits of the people whom they vote for.

Penny Press: Poor abused Nebraska has had but a single bank failure, that at Beatrice, and the bank shows up $1.28 for each dollar of liability. The bank did not, however, fail, but simply closed because the business did not pay a profit. It was also out of fashion or it would have continued to receive deposits regardles of conditions.

A Silvr Measure.

Springfield, Ill., Feb 1, A bill was introduced today by Representative Compton to prohibit the taking of notes, bonds and other obligations, payable otherwise than in lawful money of the United States. It is intended to abolish the gold contract and the lease system.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 29, 1897.

The Senate did a wise thing when it defeated the amendment offered to the Military appropriation bill appropriating the cost of transportation of the West Point Cadets to and from Washington, in order that they might be allowed to appear in the Inauguration day parade. In the first place, spending money for such a purpose is an extravagance at any time and doubly so at this time when, as Senator Stewart pointed out, thousands of our people are in need of the actual necessities of life. In the next place, the military forces of the government should not be allowed to take any part in the inauguration of a President. The presence of the U. S. troops no doubt adds to the pleasure of those who view the parade, but all the same they ought not to be there. It is a bad idea, and the precedent of having a few U. S. troops in the parade to give it variety, which we have been setting in this generation, may some day be taken advantage of by unscrupulous men by bringing enough of them to Washington to forcibly inaugurate some man who has not gone through the formality of being elected by the people. In my humble opinion it would be a wise precaution for Congress to pass a bill prohibiting armed troops, whether state or national, from coming inside the corporate limits of Washington on inauguration day. The inauguration of a President isn't a military function and the military should have nothing whatever to do with it.

That arbitration treaty has not yet been reported to the Senate from the Committee on Foreign Relations, notwithstanding the public meetings and showers of telegrams and letters in its behalf. The general impression is that the Committee will recommend several amendments to the treaty, setting forth clearly that it is not to be allowed to interfere with our maintenance of the Monroe doctrine.

The House this week passed the immigration bill as reported from the conference committee.

Senator Daniel made a speech against the Nicaragua Canal bill this week, opening with this dramatis language. The bill is dead. The speech of Senator Turpie killed it, and Minister Rodriguez has exposed its corpse in the public morgue." He expressed doubts as to whether the canal would be a commercial benefit to the U. S. if it were constructed, and declared that the passage of the pending bill would in effect put the U. S. into the bunco business. He further pointed out that aftr pouring the proposed hundred million dollars into the canal the U. S. could not maintain exclusive control over it. Independent of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty between the U. S. and England, there is a treaty between England and Nicaragua that gives the armies and navies of England free access to the canal. The speech by Senator Daniel was made after Senator Morgan had introduced amendments to the Canal bill intended to meet objections raised by Minister Rodriguez in behalf of Nicaragua. It is generally believed in Washington that Senator Daniel was right when he declared the bill dead.

Some of the Senators appear to have taken second thobght about the bill authorizing the President to appoint representatives to an international money conference, which it was at first supposed was to be allowed to go through just as it was reported. Senator Cannon has offered an amendment directing the President to call a conference, and Senator Stewart has offered another, providing that the United States government shall, in case the conference fails to reach an agreement in favor of international bimetallism, within thirty days after the adjournment of the conference open the mints to the free coinage of all gold and silver presented.

The semi-official announcement that McKinley has already selected his friend, William F. Hahn, of Ohio, to be U. S. Marshall of the District of Columbia, has aroused much resentment among the Washington republicans, who gave liberally of their time and money to elect McKinley and who believed that he would live up to the home rule plank of the St. Louis platform, notwithstanding a hint dropped by Mark Hanna some weeks ago intimating that the Federal offices in the District of Columbia would be given to voters instead of non-voting residents. The resentment is as yet quiet, but it cannot be kept so if McKinley fills the offices with carpet baggers.

Ex-Congressman and Ex-Gov. Long, of Mass., is about to find himself in the same class with Bliss, of New York, who after having virtually accepted a Cabinet portifolio was compelled, by the red hot opposition to him, to recall his acceptance and to try to let himself down easy by saying it was on account of his wife's health.

Massachusetts men headed by Senator Hoar are making a fight on Long, and the friends of every other New England man who has cabinet hankerings are helping it along, and present indications are that all this will be too much for Long and that he will soon be letting himself down easy.

CALIFORNIA.

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 13, 1896.

J. H. MCGARY, ESQ.

Dear Sir: Your ever welcome letter has long since been received and the only apology that I can offer in reply is, better to answer late than never.

First I am enjoying most excellent health and I feel so much reenperated that I feel myself justified in saying that I have gone back in life ten years for I certainly feel that much younger having gained 30 pounds in flesh. Thus far in my letters I have given you a very limited description of this beautiful country and if I could but remember where I left off I would know where to commence again. I arrived here June 1, and found what I termed hot weather. It had got past the warm indicated by the mercury and up to August 1, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 3 p. m. the mercury ranged from 85 to 103 degrees in the shade. I was at San Bernardino June 9th and found the mercury 120, in the shade a very common occurence in that locality.

My brother felt the extreme heat very much and we decided to go to the ocean at Santa Monia but the change was too radical. The cool sea breeze and damp atmosphere was very much against him and in about one weeks time he decided to return to Pasadena and sweat it out. I however remained nearly two weeks and was much delighted with life at the ocean. Thousands of people go there during the heated term, and enjoy bathing in the surf. They have a most perfect system for bathing, can have any kind of bath you desire, hot or cold, salt or fresh water, vapor or turkish by different methods here you find the natives a cross between Indians and Mexicans or Spaniards a people guided by simple habits and living a primitive life almost on natures natural products. Many live on acorns walnuts, almonds, and fruit cornmeal is the one substancial cereal and is used as best suits them and they are perfect specimens of phisical manhood and womanhood. Few of them ever sleep in a bed; when night overtakes them they lie down for a sleep and the night does not always suffice; it is no inconveniance to them to sleep day times. It is very amusing to see them bathe in the surf and if the wave happens to be 4 or 6 feet high they enjoy it all the more, and sometimes when off their guard the wave will tumble them end over and when tired tumbling in the wave, they will lay down on the hot sand and I have seen them bury each other up all but their heads. I noticed a statement the other day that in Mexico in the eleven million of people only one half million sleep in beds, and judging from that class here I have no reason to doubt the statement. A few days ago I crossed one of the lower ranges of mountains and after getting down the very steep sides I went into a Mexican home, a cloth tent, noticed an old sack used as a pillow but not a sign of a bed tick or cover was in sight, and all hands seemed to be fat rugged and happy.

This is the rainy season and it feels cool today with the mecury a little above 40, and the Gods of rain are letting silver. This is a very productive country and will produce anything almost anywhere provided it is wet enough, and that is the great draw back to this paradise of America. Too little water, but they are developing more by artesian wells and tunneling under the mountains. Many water companies are found here and in almost all instances they are a monopoly and litigation is the order. Some are sued for using more than their share, others sue because they do not get enough and others are sued for water promised and not furnished. Suit after suit is the result. Much of this country will produce immense crops of corn, wheat, oats, barley and alfalfa where water finds its common level. Fine corn yields over 100 bu to the acre. Wheat, oats and barley are nothing extra they are mostly all cut for hay, for during the summer months, all stock has to be fed on hay except on the wet lands where alfalfa clover makes fine feed they cut alfalfa 6 or 7 times a year. In districts that have to be irrigated but little alfalfa is raised. Oranges and lemons have to be watered two or three times a year to insure a success. Peaches, apricots, nectarines, prunes, all kinds of plumbs, cherries, almonds all grow without irrigation this is no apple country but famous for berries of all kinds, when irrigated and will bear the year around. You can see strawberries all the time a drug in the market, green peas, beans, lettuce, celery, all garden truck in abundance and very cheap. I had an experience here this season I never had before, I dug potatoes on June 20th ripe, well matured and when done digging I planted the same over again, and on Oct. 1st I dug them again. The Chinese gardens near Los Angeles where they can irrigate do that right along. To tell of immense acreage of fruit through Southern California would be to write something that would be incomprehensible to people in Minnesota, and to assert which is the best part of this part of the State I will not undertake it, all seems the best. I think no part of our country affords so few ship harbors as the California coast. I am not correctly informed but my impression is that San Francisco, San Pedro, and San Diego are the only perfect inner harbors on the California coast south of San Francisco. San Diego bay is a fine bay about 18 miles long about a half circle and a narrow sand beach for nearly 8 miles between bay and ocean and sometimes the swells flow clear over into the bay but at Carando beach and hotel the peninsula is over a mile wide not over 15 ft above sea level. Carnado hotel is built in a circle with a large inner court that is very attractive and beautiful. Its bath houses are of the best. Here is also the finest museum on the Pacific Coast. San Diego and National City situated on the main land are beautiful thriving cities. I took in almost all that part of the country but have forgotten the names of the many places I was at. Went out to the boundary of Old Mexico and here I saw a picture of proverty and dispair never before beheld by me. So pittiful I will not try to paint it. A sight ever to be remembered is the Sweet River dam out from San Diego. It has to be seen to be appreciated. It is 500 feet long, 100 ft high, 40 ft thick at the bottom and 12 ft on top and is built in the shape of a half circle with the bow up the stream and built of cut stone. My letter is getting long and I must omit 100 miles of the most interesting and picturesque scenery in this part of the state and give a brief account of some of the peaks of the Siera Madre Mts. The trail up Wilson's Peak is nine miles long built on a uniform grade of rise of 10 feet in each hundred and cut out of an almost solid granite wall at great expense, and here is where it took skill, energy and courage to make a survey. For my part my coyrage almost failed me after the trail was completed. The day I went up a dense fog covered the valley. At 3000 ft I got into the fog; at 5500 I got above it and when on top was near 3400 ft; so that I was over a 1000 ft above the fog. The sun was shining beautifully and here the well timed expression of every cloud having a silver lining was well witnesed and feasted on. It is a sight that few people ever have the privilege of seeing. Could see islands in the ocean 140 miles away, could see mountain peaks 200 miles off. To look down the steep sides many are perpendicular over 2000 ft and for a moment you become giddy and feel as though you were going to fall upward The trail is only from three to five feet wide and one place the sides were down almost strait I crawled on my hands and knees, the hight made me dizzy. They have a fine camp near the top; one good house and a number of cloth houses or wall tents capable of accomodating 100 persons. My next trip was up the Mt. Lowe Electri and Cable R. R. It is five miles by electric car to Rubio canyon at the foot of the cable road. It is 3300 ft long and rises 62 ft in a hundred to Echo Mountain House. The white charriot drawn by a large wire cable up the incline was so frightful that nearly all the ladies shut their eyes daring not to look down upon the beautiful cities and orange groves at the mountain foot and in the distance.

And from Echo Mountain House to Alpine Tavern is 4 miles up a steep grade. They run an electric car that will hold 25 persons. Going up is bad enough but to come down at the mercy of the braks is somewhat unplesant and uncertain. A trail of two miles on foot carries you to the top of Mount Lowe, a fine carriage drive is enjoyed up there. Alpine Tavern and Echo Mountain House either will accommodate 400 persons rates $3.50 per day. It rained nearly all day here and on Mt Lowe it snowed, and you could take a sleigh ride up there and in 50 minuites you could be feasting in an orange grove and pulling poppies and roses in the fields below this last trip was so terifying that I do not care to take it again. I remain respectfully yours. I. A. CHRISTLIEB.

Beginning the first of the new year, the Weekly Courrier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., will be changed to the Twice-a-week Courier-Journal. It will be published Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The paper will be six pages, or twelve pages a week, instead of ten pages weekly, as at present, an increase of 832 columns of matter during the year. The Wednesday issue will be devoted exclusively to news and politics, while the Saturday issue will be strictly a family paper—filled with stories, miscellany, pictures, poetry, sketches, etc. The politics of the paper will not be changed, and the battle for pure Democracy and true Democratic principles will be continued successfully, in the future as in the past. In spite of the expence involved in the improvements noted, the price of the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal will remain the same, one dollar a year, with liberal inducements to agents or to old subscribers who send in new ones. A feature during the coming year will be the editorials of Mr. Henry Watterson on political and other topics of the day.

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the New Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill.

Long-range guns are getting so common that in the battles of the future the combatants will have to sight each other by spyglasses.

Prison authorities in New York think it would be practicable to employ the convicts of the state in roadmaking, after adopting a secure system of prison camps. The work would be acceptable and beneficial to the men, who are now rendered almost insane by a lack of all forms of physical exertion.

It has been a source of interest and wonder to arctic explorers to find such quantities of singing birds within the arctic circle. They are abundant beyond belief. But the immense crop of cranberries, crowberries and cloudberries that ripen in the northern swamps account for the presence of the birds.

A certain little mechanical device is called in Germany "Automatischespiegelglassplattenblitzschutzvorrichtung." As its name clearly indicates, it is an apparatusforprotectingagainstlightningconsistingofplatesofmirrorglassactingautomatically. In this country we are in the habit of calling this simple device a cutout.

There is a rule in a livery stable in New York where only the animals of the rich are kept that no man shall shout at the horses. Horses of good blood are nervous, and loud, excited conversation is felt by every horse who hears it, and it keeps them nervous and uneasy. No man is allowed to use profane language in the hearing of the horses. Some people are more particular about their horses than about their children.

The Oklahoma courts have decided that parties who were divorced in that bailiwick and failed to pay the costs in court will have their divorces annulled, whether they have married again or not. The courts of Oklahoma are fearfully and wonderfully made. True enough, they should be paid, but because they were not smart enough to collect their fees gives them no right to undo the decisions they have made.

Old-fashioned molasses is disappearing as an article of diet and in its place appears "black strap" and various sirups. Most of the molasses goes into the distilleries, where it is made into rum, for which, notwithstanding the efforts of the temperance workers, the demand is constantly on the increase, especially in the New England states and for the export trade. It is said that the new rum will make a man strike his wife and kick over the stove quicker than any other drink.

None of the biographies of Robert Fulton mention the fact that a number of ladies were among the passengers of his first steamboat, the Clermont, on its first trip up the Hudson. Miss Helen Evertson Smith, in a paper on "A Group of American Girls Early in the Century," contributed to Century, shows that several of Chancellor Livingston's cousins, who were celebrated for their beauty, were on the boat. The engagement of one of them to Fulton was announced and appropriately celebrated at the conclusion of the trip.

The leading attraction at the Paris exposition in 1900 will be the largest bicycle ever constructed. The saddle and the handle bars will overtop all the other buildings in Paris. Spiral stairways are to lead upward through the tires and visitors will be permitted to ascend for "a price." The backbone of the great bicycle will be a banquet hall where at one long table 600 persons can sit down at a time. The saddle will be a platform on which a hundred people can be accommodated in the open air. In the handle bars will be vast picture galleries. This will certainly be a unique attraction.

The jubilee celebration of the organized crusade for temperance in England will be one of the features of the observance of the 60th year of the reign of Queen Victoria. The first regular Band of Hope, the name of this temperance society, was organized at Leeds on November 9, 1847. It became a union eight years later under the guidance of Stephen Shirley, who is yet alive. The movement has grown, and at present throughout the United Kingdom and the colonies numbers over 22,000 societies, with nearly 3,000,000 young people pledged to total abstinence. The queen has accorded her royal patronage.

Few people realize the magnitude to which the electrical industry has grown in the United States. In electric lighting alone there are more than 10,000 plants in operation, and the combined capital employed is more than $500,000,000. At least $100,000,000 is invested in electrical appliances used in mining, about $15,000,000 in electric elevators. In electric railways nearly $1,000,000,000 capital is employed. Altogether the combined capital invested in all electrical enterprises in the United States is $1,500,000,000, exclusive of that employed in the manufacture of electrical machinery, which is $500,000,000 more.

TURNED OVER TO THE LADIES.

Suffragists Take Charge of a Session of the Iowa Legislature.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 30.—The event of Friday's session of the woman suffrage convention was the acceptance of an invitation to visit the state senate in session. The session was turned over to the ladies, Miss Anthony taking the gavel, and addresses were made by Miss Anthony, Mrs. Bradford, of Colorado; Mrs. Catt, of New York; Mrs. Colby, of Nebraska; Mrs. Shaw, of Pennsylvania; Miss Blackwell, of Massachusetts, and others. They will urge the legislature to submit the issue of woman suffrage to a vote.

In the afternoon resolutions were adopted expressing satisfaction with the progress of the cause, the recent victory in Idaho, the splendid showing in California; urging congress to submit a proposition for the suffrage amendment to the constitution; urging legislatures to submit the matter to their states; declaring in favor of international arbitration of all disputes. The evening session was devoted to the celebration of the victory for equal suffrage in Idaho.

Arbitration Treaty Indorsed.

Washington, Feb. 1. — The senate committee on foreign relations Saturday voted 6 to 4 to order a favorable report on the arbitration treaty with two amendments. The most important was that which added at the end of article 1 the following words: "But no question which affects the foreign or domestic policy of either of the high contracting parties or the relations of either with any other state or power by treaty or otherwise, shall be subject to arbitration under this treaty, except by a special agreement." The second amendment strikes out all reference to his majesty, the king of Sweden and Norway, as the umpire in case the court fails to agree upon an umpire in accordance with the provisions of article 3 and article 5.

Depew Predicts Good Times.

New York, Feb. 1.—Chauncey M. Depew in an interview predicts better times, but says they will become worse before they improve and that an extra session of congress must be called to settle the policies in regard to the tariff, currency and foreign affairs before there is any improvement in existing conditions. Of the money question he said: "After the tariff there should be some legislative action in regard to our currency which will do away with such possibilities as came to the surface in the late campaign and which arise from a non-elastic currency. It was this quality of currency which led so many honest men last November to vote for a change which promised them better monetary conditions."

For an International Conference.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The bill for the representation of the United States on any international monetary conference that may be called occupied and was passed in the senate by the triumphant majority of 46 to 4. It authorizes the president to appoint five or more commissioners to any international conference, with a view to securing a fixity of relative value between gold and silver as money, by means of a common ratio between the metals, with free mintage at such rates; and it also authorizes the president to call, in his discretion, such conference to assemble at such point as may be agreed upon. Senators Allen (pop., Neb.), Pettigrew (silver, S. D.), Roach (dem., N. D.) and Vilas (dem., Wis.) voted in the negative.

The express car was detached from the train by the robbers and the door blown open with dynamite. Two small safes in the car were blown open and looted. The express car then took fire. The conductor and trainmen worked hard to save the car after the robbers had gone, but the car and contents were destroyed. The messenger thought the robbers did not understand getting into the big safe and consequently they could not have secured much over $20. The mail car was also visited by the robbers and registered letters taken.

New York, Feb. 1.—A Key West special says: Another marine disaster to the Spaniards is reported. Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 30.—Every steamer on the Tennessee river above Chattanooga Thursday night was icebound, some of them being at small landings miles from any city or town.

To Quiet the Church Bells.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—An ordinance prohibiting the ringing of any large bell in the city limits was presented to the council by Alderman Greenacre, of the Thirty-first ward, and referred to the judiciary committee. If such an ordinance should be passed it would mean the discontinuance of all bells, including chimes on churches and other public or private buildings.

Men Available for Military Duty.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The secretary of war has transmitted to the senate an abstract of the militia force of the United States for the year 1896, according to the latest returns received. The grand total of all arms of the service is 1,115,627, and the number of men available for military duty (unorganized) 10,149,184.

APPEARANCES DECEPTIVE.

Real Gain Shown in Trade, Although Progress Is Slow.

New York, Jan. 30.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"Nearly everybody had promised himself a land of milk and honey after New Year's, and the slow progress looks like standing still to men in such a state of mind. Moreover, there are multitudes throughout the country who have been taking large ventures in advance of or apart from their regular business because they expected a rise in prices. But prices fall as yet to bring them profit. Wheat has declined severely, cotton has scarcely risen enough to pay brokerage, wool holds steady in spite of enormous buying, woolen goods hardly change in price, iron and its products decline, leather is sluggish, hides are lower, for some shoe manufacturers accept a shade lower prices, the average of railroad stocks is slightly lower than it was December 31 and the advance in trust stocks has been small. To traders in such properties the month has been disappointing. Yet during the week the record shows that ten iron works have started and only two have stopped, 12 woolen mills have started and nine more are about ready to start, while three have stopped. It would do more harm than good to exaggerate the improvement. But a study of conditions governing business indicates that the wheels are on the right track and moving in the right direction. Merchandise exports from New York in January have been about 4 per cent. larger than last year and imports 15 per cent. smaller than last year, when the excess of exports was over $18,000,000, while cotton exports from other ports have also been larger.

"The decline in wheat of over 6 cents, in spite of an official report of yield far below estimates generally accepted, reflects perception of the error of the report, and also of the influence of enormous exports of corn instead of wheat—80,000,000 bushels in seven months. When two bushels of corn can be had for less than one bushel of wheat it is largely preferred in European markets, and in January 7,859,127 bushels of corn have gone abroad from Atlantic ports, against 5,396,349 last year, while Atlantic exports of wheat and flour have been 6,535,154 bushels, against 8,843,679 last year. As the great crop of corn prevents much advance in its price, its outgo affects the demand for wheat. A heavy liquidation of speculation has occurred, with the price of corn scarcely changing."

Bradstreet's says:

"There is a moderate increase in the distribution of heavy winter goods, but commercial travelers very generally report that buyers are even more conservative than earlier in the month, and that wholesale trading in January, except in lines specified, is smaller than for years. Mercantile collections are interrupted, and the improvement looked for in iron and steel is not in sight. The most favorable feature of the business week is the sudden and sharp falling off in the total number of business failures in the United States, the aggregate being 326, as compared with 429 last week, a decrease of 103."

Maniac's Awful Crime.

Wayne, Neb., Jan. 29.—Thursday morning, on a farm ten miles southeast of this city, C. K. Rash, in a fit of madness, brained his wife and three children with an ax and then hacked the bodies to pieces. The deed was discovered by a boy who had been sent from a neighbor's house to engage Mr. Rash to help shell corn. Approaching the house he was startled by cries, and, supposing that there was a struggle going on inside, burst open the door. The furniture of the room was in bad disorder and the walls and ceiling spattered with blood. On the bed was the body of Mrs. Rash, the head so badly battered that it was scarcely recognizable. In an adjoining room lay the bodies of the children. Upstairs in a loft lay the husband of the family. His vacant stare and wandering talk showed clearly that reason had left him. The family was in moderate circumstances and esteemed highly.

Cabinet Nearly Complete.

Canton, O., Feb. 2.—The announcement made by Hon. James S. Wilson, of Iowa, that he had been tendered the portfolio of agriculture by Maj. McKinley and had accepted, fills the cabinet with reasonable certainty, excepting the offices of attorney-general and postmaster-general. The McKinley cabinet to date, therefore, may be given as follows:

Secretary of State—Sherman, of Ohio.
Secretary of the Treasury—Gage, of Illinois.
Secretary of War—Alger, of Michigan.
Secretary of the Navy—Long, of Massachusetts.
Secretary of the Interior—McKenna, of California.
Secretary of Agriculture—Wilson, of Iowa.

Seven Perish at Hoboken, N. J.

Hoboken, N. J., Feb. 1.—This city was visited by two disastrous fires between 11:30 Saturday night and three o'clock Sunday morning. Seven persons were burned to death and 30 families were made homeless. The Saturday night fire started in the three-story frame building at 410 Newark street. Here Mrs. Schroeder and her five children lost their lives while the husband and father was playing cards in a near-by saloon. Mabel Mangles, eight years old, was the only victim claimed by death in the other fire which occurred about a mile from the scene of the first.

Mrs. Post Passes Away.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 29.—Mrs. Amelia B. Post, wife of ex-Congressman M. E. Post, died Thursday night after a lingering illness. Mrs. Post was instrumental in having the first legislature of Wyoming territory pass the law granting the franchise to women in 1869, and it was to a large degree due to her efforts that woman suffrage in Wyoming was not abolished by the second legislature. Mrs. Post was a member of the republican state central committee for a number of years. She was frequently offered public office, but never accepted.

Valuable Coal Lands Leased.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 2.—A number of wealthy New York capitalists have leased 12,000 acres of coal land lying up the Allegheny river in Allegheny and Westmoreland counties. The coal is better adapted for making coke than that of most coal districts, and will be used for that purpose. The ovens with the new retort process will give minor products of gas, ammonia and soda ash.

Snow in New England.

Boston, Jan. 29.—Not since the blizzard of 1888 has there been a storm of such severity throughout New England as that which has prevailed during the past 24 hours. All sections report heavy snow, varying from 15 to 34 inches on the level, while the high wind that has been blowing has, in many places, piled up drifts of five to ten feet in height.

Wheat Ought to Be Dear.

London, Feb. 2.—The Mark Lane Express says it is surprised at the decline of prices in the United States, and remarks that the definite crop returns of 1896 do not warrant any depression.

Savings Bank in Chicago Fails.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—A receiver has been appointed for the Dime savings bank. There is due depositors and others $365,000.

CURRENCY REFORM.

Comptroller Eckels Gives His Views to a House Committee.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Comptroller Eckels on Thursday gave his views upon the financial condition of the country to the house committee on banking and currency. While there was no doubt of the necessity for changes in the government's financial system, Mr. Eckels said, the public was disposed to attribute too much of the existing trouble to the lack of monetary legislation. Overtrade, overproduction and extravagance in private and public expenditures, partly induced by speculation, were largely responsible for the country's business difficulties. The day had passed when the volume of money was its most important factor. Improved facilities for transportation and methods of exchanging had lessened the importance of large volume. Improved credit was more important. The first essential in this country was the stability of public credit.

The current redemption of the demand obligations of the government, he said, was the chief problem of the treasury. In funding and cancellation of these obligations so that maintenance of a gold reserve would be no longer necessary was the most desirable policy; whether it was the most practical one was a question. Mr. Eckels added: "A business man who constantly redeems his notes without retiring them and keeps them out constantly will come to a settling day that will break him. The chief feature of a banking bill would be to take from the government the issue of credit notes. The banks can do this."

May Claim Big Taxes.

Washington, Feb. 2.—States have the constitutional right to tax the entire capital stock of interstate corporations doing business within their limits. This was the startling decision of the supreme court Monday in what is known as the Ohio and Indiana tax cases. There were three dissenting justices—Field, Harlan and White. It is one of the most important decisions rendered by the court in many years, as it not only involves grave constitutional questions, but will place interstate corporations at the mercy of state legislatures everywhere. Ten of these cases were brought by the officers of the Adams, American and United States Express companies. They were suits in equity to enjoin the assessment and collection of taxes under the acts of the general assembly of the state of Ohio, passed April 27, 1893, and May 10, 1894, for the taxation of express, telegraph and telephone companies, on the ground that the acts were in contravention of the constitutions of the state of Ohio and of the United States.

The Public Debt.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The debt statement issued Monday afternoon shows a net increase in the public debt, less cash in treasury during January of $15,078,735.22. The interest-bearing debt increased $2,120,916. The non interest-bearing debt decreased $140, and cash in the treasury decreased $12,957,959.22. The balances of the several classes of debt January 31 were: Interest-bearing debt, $847,364,750. Debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $1,382,930.26. Debt bearing no interest, $374,633,057.14. Total, $1,223,370,737.40. The certificates and treasury notes offset by an equal amount of cash in the treasury outstanding at the end of the month were $595,975,573, an increase of $15,166,000. The total cash in the treasury was $858,553,910.21. The gold reserve was $100,000,000. Net cash balance, $115,362,420.73.

Charged with Filibustering.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 1.—The United States grand jury found indictments against Gen. Carlos Roloff, secretary of war of the Cuban provisional government, and his compatriot, Dr. Joseph J. Luis, on the charge of "beginning, setting on foot and providing, within the district of Maryland, means for a military expedition against the territory of a foreign prince with whom the United States is at peace; to-wit, against the island of Cuba." July 3, 1895, Capt. Hudson purchased the steamer James Woodall in this port, and fitted her up as a filibuster. On July 9 she sailed ostensibly for Yucatan; but it is alleged that Roloff and Luis caused the vessel to put in at Arbor Key, Fla., where men and munitions of war were taken aboard and subsequently landed on the Cuban coast.

Cleveland Addresses Physicians.

New York, Jan. 30.—President Cleveland arrived in this city Friday and attended the annual dinner of the New York Academy of Medicine at Carnegie hall. The president delivered an interesting address, full of praise for the modern physician and the advantages to society of the researches of medical scientists. He urged the profession, in its devotion to its professional duties, not to disregard the claims which the body politic had upon it, but to be ever alive to the civic duties which devolved upon all patriotic citizens. In opening his remarks the president paid an eloquent tribute to the "old village doctor."

To Organize a People's Party Press.

St. Louis, Feb. 2.—A call has been issued requesting all editors or publishers of people's party, agricultural, bimetallic and independent reform papers to meet at the Hotel Ashland in Kansas City, Mo., on the morning of February 22, 1897, for the purpose of organizing and perpetuating a real People's Press association. The call states that the present so-called National Reform Press association is not a representative body and is in the hands of officials many of whom have been deposed and repudiated both by the people's party and press of their respective states.

Corn Cheaper Than Coal.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 1.—Inquiry started by the secretaries of the state board of transportation goes to show that more corn than coal is being used for fuel in Nebraska, especially in the farming districts. Farmers say that corn at 9 to 11 cents per bushel is cheaper than coal. Railroads will be asked to reduce rates to allow in shipments of coal and out shipments of corn, thus reversing the rule.

Elected Senator from Washington.

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 30.—George F. Turner, the well-known lawyer of Spokane, who received the caucus nomination of the populists and free silver republicans, was elected United States senator by the legislature on the first ballot, receiving 67 votes.

AN OLD WEDDING RING.

What a symbol of love is that circle of gold,
By the token of which our devotion was told!
How our youthful affection shines out, as it seems,
In the light of the romance around it that gleams;
And it knows no beginning or ending, or why
Its continuing course should not run till we die.

And a sign and a seal of our reverence, too,
Had a part in our creed, when that old ring was new,
When a slender, light hand was upraised to our lips
And our kisses were pressed on its slim finger tips.
For that circle of gold seemed a hallowing pledge
Of a homage profounder than words dare allege.

But the metal that's purest wears quickest away,
And that old wedding ring has grown thinner to-day;
Yet the hand which it graced graces it in its turn
With a magic the alchemist vainly would learn.
For sweet charity's touch has so filled it with gold
That that hand never lacked to the hungry and cold.

And the summers may come, and the summers may go,
And the winters may whiten the hair with their snow;
Still the hand which a lover delighted to kiss
Wears the signet of half a century's bliss,
And no earnest of joy in the Heavens above
Is more sure than that ring and its cycle of love.

CHANGE IN GHOST STORIES.

He had been dead for a matter of 112 years, so naturally the place looked strange to him.

What he now saw had never been a part of his physical existence, and he wondered if it were not best for him to go back to the graveyard and have a conference with some fresh corpses who would know all about those things which has thus early filled him with doubts and misgivings. From the newly dead one he could obtain information which might keep him out of trouble. But, as he calculated upon it, such action, it seemed to him, would make him a laughing stock for all the fool ghosts in the neighborhood. They would deride him as a jay ghost who did not know enough about the haunting business to set at it without a guide book or a time card or a letter of advice and credit. They would gather around and hoot and jeer and shame him half to life, for they couldn't shame him half to death, he having been dead for a good 112 years.

"I wish," he said to himself, "that I had exerted myself a little to keep abreast of the times. Here I find myself with my entire death wasted. Just lazying around in a comfortable grave in the daytime and spending the nighttime in disputing with a lot of old fossilized sixteenth century ghosts concerning things of no interest whatever, I have allowed opportunities to pass and a lot of juniors who weren't even born, much less dead, when I died, have pushed me aside and I am just a piece of old furniture. If I were a thousand years old or something like that it would be better, for I could lie and swear and slash around retailing stale yarns, like King Arthur or Caesar or Ahab or one of that lot, and be interesting. But I don't know anything about the remote past or the adjacent present. I have fooled away my chances, but I am going to remedy conditions. I am going to go haunting around this town and get up a reputation and go back to them and assume my proper position in spiritual society. Why, just think of it! Dead 112 years and have never scared anyone yet! Never screeched at a schoolboy in a lonesome wood or groaned around in a deserted house, or anything."

You could see that he was ashamed of himself and that he was determined to rectify his errors of omission. To be sure, he was a bit nervous and dubious about it—although, perhaps it isn't correct to use that first adjective in description of a ghost, inasmuch as his nervous system is generally supposed to be compressed air or fog or something of that kind. He felt that it was a pretty serious undertaking for a strange and passe ghost to drift into a strange town with the avowed purpose of haunting it into a state of terror, but he was an insistent old spook, and buckled down to business with determination.

"As I have always understood it," he remarked to himself, "the thing ought to begin with a demonstration in the matter of blowing out lights. I remember when I was alive that they used to talk of ghosts sneaking up behind one and blowing out the lamp, and it always filled me with horror. It's a good trick. I wonder who invented it? I—hello! If here isn't a chance just ready for me. I'm a tombstone!"

The city was dark, it being after midnight, and all was very still. Suddenly, however, as he turned a corner he slammed square up against a window, out through which a faint light streaked its way. At a desk sat a man, dozing over a book. It was a beautiful chance. The ghost quietly slipped inside.

"There is going to be a festival of fear right here in about four seconds," he murmured softly to himself.

"Oh, I guess not," he thought. "Just imagine how he will feel, how his hair will raise, how his flesh will crawl when I lean over his shoulder and blow that light out! Why, it almost scares me myself!"

He leaned over and blew.

The light continued to burn steadily.

The ghost had straightened up ready to give vent to a wild, demoniac laugh, as is the custom, he believed, for such cases made and provided, but he did not laugh. There was nothing to laugh at. The man continued to read on undisturbed in his dozing fashion.

"That's funny," the visitor said to himself. "Haven't I got any lungs any more or any strength of breath? Well, here she goes again." And once more he leaned down and "whoofed" at the light. It did not shiver.

The ghost stepped back into the middle of the room, put his hands into his pockets and stared at the light. "Well, I'm blamed!" he said to himself. "Now, what do you think of that? I blew enough wind at that thing to extinguish a bonfire, and it doesn't even flicker."

As he stood intently regarding the light the man at the desk rose drowsily, and with a yawn stepped out into the hallway. Strange as it may seem, this rather relieved the ghost, for he wanted to investigate without the presence of inquiring and embarrassing witnesses. He had now forgotten that his purpose was to affright. He drew gingerly near the mysterious lamp, and pulling in a long breath prepared to make the effort of his life—or death, as it were.

Suddenly, while he was still in the act of inhaling atmosphere, the light went out. The ghost's hair rose.

He trembled from head to foot. "Wha-wha-what d-d-did that?" he tremulously asked himself. Then as a thought came to him: "It was one of those fool new ghosts, I'll bet. Say, you!" addressing space, in the hope that some fellow specter would answer. "I'm haunting this place. Go on away and attend to your own business. Who are you, anyway?"

There was no answer.

"Aw, say," pleadingly insisted the ghost, "talk up and tell a fellow. What's the use of acting that way? How did you blow it out? I like to bu'sted trying it, and couldn't." He thought that bit of flattery would tempt the rival spirit to respond, but it didn't. Then the full horror of it appeared to him. There was no other ghost there. He realized it. He was alone. Utterly, hopelessly alone. Oh, for the cheer of some other spectral presence!

His teeth chattered in a noiseless, foggy manner. His fingers trembled, and his legs shook beneath him, and if he had known how or had had the material to break out into a sweat he would have broken out into one of exceeding coldness. He thought of the man who had sat at the desk and wondered if he would never return. He seemed so long gone. Oh, for a glimpse of him sitting there dozing at his book!

The light flashed up.

The room was filled with its radiance, and yet nobody had come in with a flame to relight it. This was more terrifying than its extinguishment, for while a fellow-ghost might have blown the thing out, it was palpable that even a fellow-ghost could not have relit it without some preliminary performance which would have indicated what was going to happen. He knew all about those phosphorescent lights which ghosts carry around with them when they are haunting sloppy country roads where some robber has been hanged, and he knew that none such had been present. He was speechless with fear. Oh, would that man never return? If for but a moment he could see him and feel that there was something human—like he used to be—in the room, his mind would be easier. He would never again go haunting respectable people, he swore to himself. It didn't pay.

The door opened and the man came in. The ghost would have rushed to him and embraced him, but he was afraid to make himself too conspicuous, for fear the man would drive him out into the night, as he had a perfect right to do, of course. All he wanted now was to sit right down in a dark corner and shiver and wait for daylight. And he sat there and watched that man hungrily, slavishly, worshipfully, fearing every moment he would go away again.

Throughout that night strange things happened. Weird whistles sounded frightful alarms and voices came from what looked like the ends of ropes, but which were speaking tubes. Bells rang, and that valorous, fearless man talked to the wooden box, and talked as though he knew the box understood. Strange instruments of brass clicked and rattled when nobody was near them, and at odd times a mysterious thing shot out a long line of white paper, and although at every periodic whirr and whizz of the contrivance the ghost grew more excited and fearfully crouched lower, the man wasn't the least bit worried. Probably no ghost ever spent such a night.

At last the morning broke, and with the first gleam of daylight that tried spook, who had courageously set out haunting, made a rush for the door and went galloping down the streets and towards the suburbs, beyond which the graveyard lay.

A little later the day shift came on duty at the police alarm office. The night man told his relief he wished he would have the incandescent lamp mended.—Chicago Record.

He Was Cake Proof.

Little Algy was invited over to the neighbor's for his Christmas dinner, and the first thing that caught his eye was a big cream cake. He declined soup, fish and turkey, and his hosts feared he was so bashful he would not eat.

"Now, Algy, what are you going to have?" he was asked.

"Cake."

He was given a generous slice, and in an incredibly short space of time it had disappeared.

"What will you have now, Algy?" he was asked.

"Cake."

Another piece went the way of the first.

"Would you like something else, Algy?"

"More cake."

"I'm afraid you will have bad dreams if you eat so much of that rich cake." Algy was silent. "Can't I give you something else?"

"Yep; cake."

"Well, you can have one more piece, but I know you will have bad dreams."

The next morning Algy appeared at the door of his late hosts.

"I just come over to tell you that I didn't dream nothing," he remarked. "Can I have some more cake?"—San Francisco Post.

Hymns and Boiled Eggs.

Bishop Paret, of this city, some time ago was the guest of an Episcopal family in West Virginia. Learning from the bishop that he liked hard-boiled eggs for breakfast, his hostess went to the kitchen to boil them herself. While so engaged she began to sing the first stanza of the hymn "Rock of Ages." Then she sang the second stanza, the bishop, who was in the dining-room, joining in. When it was finished, there was silence, and the bishop remarked:

"Why not sing the third verse?"

"The third verse?" replied the lady, as she came into the dining-room, carrying the steaming eggs. "Oh, that's not necessary."

"I don't understand," replied Bishop Paret.

"Oh, you see," she said, "when I am cooking eggs, I always sing one verse for soft-boiled and two for hard-boiled."—Baltimore Herald.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Both Bodies Are in Good Working Order.

Gossipy Letters Giving in Detail the More Important Work of the Senate and House of Representatives.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—The resolutions offered by Senator Wyman last week favoring the arbitration treaty were adopted by the senate yesterday and sent to the house for concurrence. Perhaps because U. S. Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, stated that the senate ought not to be dragooned by sermons and resolutions into adopting the treaty, and perhaps owing to the latent Fenian spirit, they were so modified before they passed as to favor arbitration on general principles without committing the legislature to the particular treaty now pending. This seems to be an entirely safe position, being based on the principle of the hunter who fired in such a way as to hit it if it was a deer and miss it if it was a calf.

Another matter which agitated the senate was the motion of Senator Cole, of Fergus Falls, who wants to reconsider the vote whereby Frank Day's seat was declared vacant as of date of January 31, 1895, and make it read instead April 23, 1895. Mr. Cole comes from a section which is interested in the Anderson bill taxing railroad lands, and as he went home over Sunday he learned that his constituents feared the unseating of Day would invalidate the Anderson bill. This was argued back and forth during the three days' debate, and whatever damage may result from the unseating of Day, was done with the full knowledge of the senators. Mr. Cole's motion was laid on the table, but will doubtless be heard from later.

Among the bills presented was one appropriating $28,000 for improvements at the state fair grounds, an investment which, if made, probably benefits more people than through any other one institution in the state. There was also a bill providing for placing the legislative manual in every school house in the state. This is supposed to be owing to the fact that the manual contains a brief biography of the members of the legislature and the rising generation can have them pointed out to them by their teachers, the illustrious men of the state, so that they can go and do likewise.

In the house yesterday there was an interesting passage concerning the Heimerdinger resolution for a committee to cut county and state salaries down 20 per cent. Mr. Donnelly, who perhaps differs from Messrs. Jacobson and Feig, in that he does not expect to be re-elected, favored the resolution cutting everything, including the salaries of the members of the legislature. Mr. Jacobson was frank enough to say that it was nonsense to expect them to vote to cut their own salaries. They were not getting too much now and he moved to strike out that portion of the resolution which included the legislature in the cut. This was evidently a happy thought, for his motion passed and then the resolution was adopted. And now the state and county officers can begin to look out for a bill reducing their salaries.

Mr. Donnelly wants to find out what the election tickets cost last fall, and the amount of money the candidates had to pay for them. He thinks the state is speculating off the candidates for office, and regards it as bad enough to be a candidate without paying something to the state for the privilege. Out of the 21 bills introduced six were making appropriations for roads and bridges, and one appropriates $4,000 to buy seed for farmers in Otter Tail county whose crops were destroyed by drouth.

Representative Schmidt is still looking after the iron matters and had a bill repealing an old law of 20 years ago which enabled mining companies to organize without any assets in the shape of paid up stock. No decision has yet been reached as to the relative membership of the reapportionment committee from the respective houses, but an effort was made yesterday, through the conference committee, to agree upon the mooted question. Meantime valuable time is being lost and every day's delay adds to the chances of reapportionment being defeated altogether.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The legislative event yesterday was the debate in the house concerning the arbitration treaty now pending in the U. S. senate. It may not effect the question of peace or war during the centuries to come, but it furnished an episode for a day in the Minnesota legislature. Senator Wyman's resolution, which passed the senate, was in favor of arbitration on general principles, without committing itself specifically to the pending treaty. Mr. Donnelly had offered resolutions in the house opposing the pending treaty, on the ground that it was more favorable to England than to this country. It having been advertised that these resolutions would be the special order in the house, the largest audience of the session assembled, many ladies being included among the number. Mr. Donnelly, of course, was the leading orator, and also, of course, was antagonized by Judge Hicks, of Minneapolis, who favored the Wyman resolution. Donnelly's speech was a phillipic against England, and was so long protracted that an afternoon session was necessary to conclude the debate. In the round-up, the Wyman resolution was adopted, with an addition favoring the protection of the Monroe doctrine.

The debate alluded to occupied so much time that the other proceedings of the house were not extended. Among the resolutions offered was one abolishing the office of bank examiner, and another opposing the passage of a United States law making national grain inspection.

The bill forbidding flowers being sent to prisoners in jail, and also the bill making all tramps vagrants were indefinitely postponed. This is first blood for Weary Wraggles.

As there is a constitutional inhibition against special legislation, a bill was offered fixing the salary of assistant county attorneys in cities of not less than 100,000 nor more than 185,000 at $2,500. This is about the fifteenth or twentieth bill introduced which applies to St. Paul alone. As the same modus operandi can be applied to any town in the state, there seems to be no difficulty in securing as much special legislation as ever.

The bill forbidding flowers being sent to prisoners in jail, and also the bill making all tramps vagrants were indefinitely postponed. This is first blood for Weary Wraggles.

This is about the fifteenth or twentieth bill introduced which applies to St. Paul alone. As the same modus operandi can be applied to any town in the state, there seems to be no difficulty in securing as much special legislation as ever.

The house did not create any new officers yesterday but the senate came to the front with a bill providing for two additional clerks for the public examiner. The salaries are $1,800 each. While the house is talking of abolishing the office altogether, the senate is increasing the working force. Senator Greer offered a bill which regulates faculty of the state university by really making two faculties, one being for the freshman and sophomore classes and the other for the higher classes, each faculty being independent of the other.

Another bill, which may be of much interest, requires mercantile agencies to submit reports they make concerning a business man to report upon, requiring the signature of the business man to the report before it can be sent out. The refusal of the business man to sign such proposed reports would hold up the agency from sending out any reports at all. The bill besides, makes it a misdemeanor to make a false report and requires a license fee of $1,000 per year to be paid by each agency to the state. The inculcation of patriotism in the rising generation was provided for by a bill forbidding athletic contests between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. on Decoration Day.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The ghost of Frank Day's vote on the Anderson bill still walks. The result is that a bill was introduced in the senate yesterday, identical with the Anderson bill. This is done for fear that the supreme court will decide that if the vacation of Frank Day's seat dated Jan. 31, 1895, and the Anderson bill was passed by his vote at a later date, the act is not legal. The seating of Dunn seems to have opened a Pandora box of evils.

Senator Keller had two innings yesterday. He introduced a bill compelling saloons to display a red light and put out the sign "Dangerous" as conspicuously as the sign "saloon." After a whole lot of fun, the rules were suspended to act upon the bill, and it was defeated. Keller's second inning was over the appointment of Bundy, of Otter Tail county, as member of the state board of equalization. Senator Cole called up the appointment for confirmation, but Keller succeeded in having the matter put over until next week. Later in the day Gov. Clough withdrew the name entirely.

The bill reducing fees for naturalization papers from two dollars to one dollar was passed by the senate. The original effort was to reduce the fee to fifty cents, but the reduction to one dollar was a compromise measure which the clerks of the courts assented to. In view of the thousands who will be disfranchised, unless they take out their second papers, owing to the new constitutional amendment, the clerks will do a thriving business even at the reduced rate. The house bill exempting one typewriter and one sewing machine from execution was passed, and now only awaits the governor's signature to become a law.

In the house, Mr. Underleak got in a drive at Mr. Donnelly in the shape of a resolution forbidding the introduction of any subject in the form of a resolution which could be covered by a bill. He said too much time had been wasted discussing resolutions for mere buncombe, referring of course to the debate on the arbitration treaty resolution which occupied the entire day Thursday.

The bill making a governor or governor-elect ineligible for election to the U. S. senate during the time for which he was chosen governor, received its quietus in the house yesterday. Representatives Jacobson and Donnelly uniting with sufficient force to kill it very dead. A large number of bills were introduced but they were chiefly for bridges and of a local character. Mr. Donnelly offered one pertinent to the hard times. It requires every bank, during business hours, to keep posted in its public counting room, a statement of the condition of the bank the previous day and also provides that notes over six months old shall not be regarded as assets. Such a measure would wipe out a great many assets in this state.

The senate took another recess until Tuesday but the house was more industrious and will be in session today.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—The mutterings of the coming storm relative to the location of the fourth insane asylum at Anoka were heard in the house on Saturday. The governor sent in the majority and minority reports of the commission appointed to select the site. The reports were ordered printed for future consideration, but not until there had been a good deal of debate, during which Mr. Donnelly, of Hastings, and Mr. Staples, also of Dakota county, had condemned the action of the commission in changing the location from Hastings after having once given that point the preference. There is evidently a row in prospect.

The resolution calling upon the banking committee to investigate the bank examiner, and expressing the opinion that his office should be abolished, was overwhelmingly defeated, and, in the stead, Mr. Feig offered one raising a special committee of five to investigate the causes which have led up to the recent failures of state banks and report what legislation is needed to prevent future failures.

Another evidence that the constitutional amendment forbidding special legislation is nugatory was furnished by the introduction of a bill relative to the care of public funds, which only applies to cities of over 150,000 population. This isn't special legislation, but it applies only to Minneapolis.

One of the most practical, and perhaps the most important bills of the session, was offered by Representative Stone. It provides for an immigration board, to consist of one member from each congressional district to be appointed by the governor. No salary is allowed, except to the secretary, but the commissioners are to be allowed traveling expenses. The design is to revive immigration work, which has been sadly neglected for many years.

Another bill, of especial interest to St. Louis county, provides for the election of a mine inspector in every county where mines exist. It is patterned after the Michigan law, where it is very popular, owing to the protection it secures for miners in their necessary dangerous employment.

Mr. Donnelly stirred up the banks again by two bills, one requiring them to keep posted in their counting rooms their lists of stockholders, and the other requiring immediate suit to be brought against stockholders to enforce their liability when a bank fails.

Something of a jug handle county local option bill was offered by Mr. Hollister. It provides that at every general election the counties shall vote on local option, and if it carries no liquor shall be sold in the county for two years. If it fails to carry, then the towns can vote to licence or not to license, as at present. If the county votes no license, the towns have no further discretion in the matter.

As the senate took a vacation from Friday to Tuesday, the house wanted to skip Monday, but Jacobson was on hand to demand industry, and so there will be a house session today.

St. Paul, Feb. 2.—Yesterday was cyclone day in the house, the senate not being in session. That is, it was chiefly devoted to wind. Only five bills were introduced, and aside from one reducing the legal rate of interest to 6 per cent and 10 per cent by contract, they were all of minor importance. The great bone of contention was the bill offered by Schmidt, of Duluth, making a board of three persons to select a bank where the state funds shall be deposited. The argument against the bill was that it relieved the state treasurer of responsibility, which he should be compelled to shoulder, and the argument for it was that the state treasurer could favor certain banks, withdraw funds from country banks to bolster up city banks, and that he really ought to be relieved of the great responsibility which now rests upon him. Mr. Jacobson made a very determined effort to defeat the bill outright, but it was finally referred back to the committee for further amendment. Its ultimate passage is doubtful.

The bill abolishing the $200 bounty for the arrest of horse thieves was approved.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the committee appointed to investigate the transfer of the Mountain Iron mine from the state to private parties to pay the expenses of witnesses without the usual circumlocution of submitting each item to the legislature and having the committee on legislative expenses report before payment can be made. This committee evidently means to do some business.

As usual when only one branch of the legislature is in session, the proceedings were brief.

Large Game Seizure.

Executive Agent Fullerton, State Game Warden Bowers of North Dakota and Warden Stephens of Detroit seized 1,600 game birds shipped from Minnesota to Philadelphia and Boston, at the Milwaukee depot in Fargo. The birds were packed in 11 barrels and shipped as household goods by E. W. Davis, of Detroit, to Max Polum at Moorhead. They were carried across to Fargo without rebilling and hauled to the Milwaukee depot, where eight barrels, containing 1,172 ducks, were shipped to George W. Kimball & Co., of Boston, and three barrels containing 428 partridges and prairie chickens, were consigned to F. H. Milden & Co., Philadelphia.

Narrow Escape.

Z. C. Day, of Jackson, a well digger, had a narrow escape from death in being attacked by a mad horse. The horse was bitten by a dog about New Year's, and on entering the barn, the other day, the horse made a plunge for his master, and jumped into the manger, which gave Mr. Day time to loose and let out of the barn another horse and a cow. After the mad horse had freed himself, he made for his master, who got out of the door and shut it. He then shot the animal.

Burned.

The old Washington avenue rink in Minneapolis was destroyed by fire. It was there that Patsy Cardiff won and lost a reputation as a pugilist. There also Pat Killen, Jack Dempsey, Ike Weir, Charley Mitchell, Jem Mace, Tommy Warren and a host of others entertained the sports of Minneapolis. Nearly 10 years ago, too, Patti thrilled the music lovers within its walls. Its usefulness, however, had departed with the years.

Badly Frozen.

Charles Grant was found in the woods near Red Wing, his feet being frozen to the bone. He was crossing the river just north of the city when, supposing his feet were being frozen he discarded his shoes thinking the snow would kill the frost. Later he took off his clothes and wrapped them around his feet.

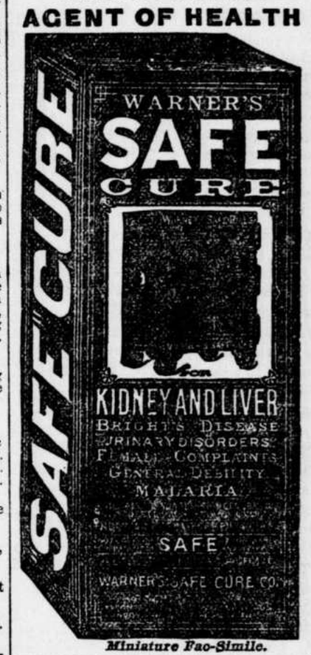
THE ADVANCE AGENT OF HEALTH



Miniature Fac-Simile.

"Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean," wrote the poet Tennyson. But tears always mean something. There are tears of melancholy, tears of joy, and of despair, and those saddest most pathetic tears of the nervous overwrought woman who has been bearing up as bravely as she may under a daily burden of weakness and dragging, torturing pain.

No wonder women weep. The wonder is that they are not oftener in tears for all they have to bear and suffer; and the saddest thing about it is how little their sufferings are understood. Even the doctor, nine times in ten says: "Oh, a little nervousness, that's all" or "neuralgia," or "insomnia," or "dyspepsia." If he suspects the real cause he insists upon examinations and local treatment,—about the very worst thing possible to a nervous, overwrought woman.

There is no need of these repugnant methods. Any woman may insure health and strength in a womanly way by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures the weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism absolutely and completely. It was devised for this special purpose by one of the most eminent and experienced physicians in this country; an expert specialist in women's diseases.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Any woman may consult him by letter, free of charge. Her letter will be answered not by a mere nurse or uneducated, unscientific person, but by the most competent medical authority anywhere obtainable.

All women should read Dr. Pierce's thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It contains more clear and comprehensive advice on medical subjects than any other book ever published. A paper-bound copy sent free for twenty-one one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. —Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Tomorrow will be Delano Monthly Fair Day.

—The St. Peter's school obserred Candlemas day by taking a holiday. Services were held in the church.

—There will be a masquerade ball in the City Hall on next Friday, the 12th. of February.

—We understand the St. Peter's school is making great preparations for an entertainment on the evening of the 22nd of February at the City Hall.

—John Sherry says he believes. The "ground-hog was na oot" last Tuesday. Mr. S. is evidently is not superstitious, and don't believe in the tradititions of the past.

—The letter from I.C. Christheb of Pasadena, Cal, to J. H. McGary in this issue of the GAZETTE is highly interesting to those of our readers who think we haye been haying cold weather.

—John Flannery an aged man living alone, in the village, took down his stove pipe to clean it during the cold spell in January, and before he got it up again, froze his fingers and toes severely.

—Eden Vally Journal: Persons who let their horses stand on the street for hours without blankets, should be arrested and fined or else tied to a post for a few hours themselves to see how they'd like it.

—The questioh of whether the U. S. should adopt the proposed treaty of arbitration with England is being much discussed by people all over this land. Some Delanoites are in need of an arbitration treaty to keep peace among themselves while they talk the treaty up.

—That dreadfully squeaking noise proceeding from the round elevator for some time past was not due to any lack of oil about the machinery. But was occasined by the manipulation of the scales by the operator. If persistence is a prognosticator Delano is doomed to have an Ole Bull in the near future; if Fred and the fiddle don't fail.

—Ground-hog day, Feb. 2nd, passed off pleasantly the thermometer hung around thirty above all day. There was some signs of thawing on the sidewalks, and the snow got into good snow ballins condition a part of the dayi The sun did not shine and the traditional ground-hog did not see his shadow. So it is preaumed he remained in antibipation of an early syring. If so he may get his ears frozen yet before winter is done.

—The teacher of the Grammar Department of the High School informs us that so far as her room was concerned in the recent examinations. the only papers she expected to send in were these in Geography, and that out of 23 papers, 15 were passed. The Grammar, Arithmetic and History examaninations if sent in now could not be sent in again in the spring, so she preferred to let the whole class wait for the spring examination when they would be better prepared, taking this only for a practice examination. In History 2 papers were so high above average that she sent them in. Miss Gates has only had charge of this department for a part of the year. When the year is up she hopes and expects to make a good showing. Pupils should apply themselves to their studies, take their books home at night and find time to study some. Parents should encourage this course, and then our High School will have abundance of material from which to turn out graduates. Teachers can't do it all; and should not be blamed for more than their share.

—Dr. Soper furuished us the following interesting item: A very pleasant evening was spent at Mrs. Erank Lindsley's home by the "Shakespeare Club." Hawker: Vocal Solo, "Angels Ever Bright and Fair", Miss Marjorie O'Hair: Recitation, "The Farwell", Mrs. F. H. Lindsley: "Merchant of Venice", Members of Club. Mrs. Lindsley kindly provided refreshments.

LONG AGO.

FROM THE METHODIST HERALD.

I once knew all the birds that came
And nested in our orchard trees,
For every flower I had a name—
My friends were woodchucks, toads and bees;
I know what thrived in yonder glen,
What plants would soothe a stonebruised toe—
Oh, I was very learned then—
But that was very long ago.

I knew the spot upon the hill
Where checkerberries could be found—
I knew the rushes near the mill
Where pickerel lay that weighed a pound!
I knew the wood—the very tree
Where lived the poaching saucy crow
And all the woods and crows knew me—
But that was very long ago.

And plning for the joys of youth,
I tread the old familiar spot
Only to learn this solemn truth:
I have forgotten, am forgot.
Yet here's this youngster at my knee
Knows all the things I used to know;
To think I once was as wise as he!—
But that was very long ago.

I know 'tis folly to complain
Of whatsoe'er the fates decree,
Yet, were not wishes all in vain,
I tell you what my wish would be:
I'd wish to be a boy again,
Back with the friends that I used to know,
For I was, oh, s happy then—
But that was very long ago!

—Eugene Field.

YOUNG women attending school near Terra Haute Ind., are said to have hugged and kissed the teacher off from his job. Another volume of Hoosier Schoolmaster, by Edward Eggleston, would now be in order.

THE famous London Mystic, Dr. Alexander J. McIvor Tyndale, tried hypnotism on Charles and Mrs. Hansen now in jail in Minneapolis for the murder of Nels Benson. So far as heard from the experiments amounted to nothing; Mrs Benson telling about the same story under the influence as when not under. Hansen, the doctor pronounces non-impressionable. When the doctor told him:-"Now you can't open your eyes." he is said to have opened them and laughed at the performance.

MINNESOTA has recently been made aware that it had a Governor. A governor with a backbone. And that he proposed to be Governor. Still more recently it has turned out that Minnesota also has a Secretary of State and that Mr. Berg himself will attend to the affairs of that office and continue to let printing contracts, and Mr. McGill, of Ramsey can introduce a bill into the Legislature and work it though if possible and need be in no fear of having his share of the printing cut off on that account. There is nothing like public officers, whether Legislators, secretary of state, or governor, having good stiff vertebral colymns of their own.

APPROPRIATIONS are now in order by our Legislators, and all our public institutions are after their share. The Normal schools are in for something. It looks to us as if the Normal school is doing good work. That many young people who cannot take a univesity course, or a college course are given instruction much heeded by them. They are taught what and how to teach others. and thereby given a knowledge which materially aids them in pursuing their own education Many of our most promising young people are obliged to work their way in the world: to educate themselves; teaching is in this line; and they can keep ahead of their classes, and they are as apt to do good work as is the graduate who has forgotten and does not take pains to look up many points. A teacher should receive instructions in his work as well as a doctor, a lawyer or a minister.

Of course where a teacher is qualified all around he should do the highest grade work. Such teachers cannot be hired in most country districts, and from the country districts with proper training most of our best men and women come. The Normal scholars seem to get nearest the people in the country.

The move to keep the Normal schools open during the summer months when most teachers have their vacations and could attend is a good one. Each school should give the best possible chance to everyone to attend who may wish to do so. These being public schools designed to benefit the public should run with that end in view.

COLORADO has passed a law permitting prize fighting, and Corbett and Fitzsimmons are preparing to see who can knock the other out according to law, once.

DONNELLY has a bill before the Legislature to prohibit contracts being made payable in gold. It is a terrible state of affairs when a nation like this has made its money in such shape that the states must needs legislate concerning it, in this manner. If one kind of money is as good as another under the present standard there should be no call for such legislation. But no stronger proof is needed that the bankers don't consider one money as good as another than the fact that they demand gold in their contracts.

A BILL has been introduced into the legislature to raise the saloon license to $1000 a year instead of the present $500. If it is wrong to sell liquor, licensing it don't make it right. If it is right for a rich man to pay $1,000 license and, having a monopoly of the business, get richer very fast, why should not a poorer man be allowed thh privilege of making money as well as his wealthy neighborb It may have a tendency, however, to make fewer saloons, and offer a less number of inducements for young men to wander from a sober life. Whatever is done, provision should be made for closing up at once, without delay, any place that violates the laws by selling on Sunday; to old drunkards; to intoxicated men, or to minors. If saloons persist in violating laws and raking in all the pennies they can to pay license, they must expect people to persevere in drawing the lines a little tighter all the time until they are prohibited entirely.

Lincoln's Birthday.

Today, Feby. 12 is a legal holiday in our state. Made so by the legislature. It is observed in remembrance of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, "The rail splitter," "Old Abe," "Honest Abe:" "Sixteenth President," "Father Araham," "Emancipator," "War President," "Savior of his country," "Martyred President," who earned for himself a warm place in the hearts of his countrymen. He was born in Kentucky, February 12, 1809, labored for a living, studied law, was a captain in the Black Hawk war, his company being mustered in by Jeff Davis. He was a member of the Illinois Legislature, became a lawyer, ran against Stephen A. Douglas for United States Senator, was elected President in 1860, carried on one of the greatest wars of modern times, emancipated four millions of slaves. April 14, 1865, he was shot at Ford's Theater, in Washington, by John Wilkes Booth. Lincoln was a typical American and one whose name will long be remembered.

Vote for the Best Men.

In a few days the Township and Village elections will be held. These are local offices. You all know the men who are going to be elected they are your neighbors. The township is not so big but any man likely to come up for Supervisor, Justice, Assessor, Constable, or any other office will be your acquaintance. What is best for the town is best for the people in the town. Think for a few minutes what are the duties of the different officers and who will best discharge those obligations to the benefit of the public rather than to the filling of his own pocket. Don't allow some body to come around and give you a cigar or a drink out of a bottle and get you to agree to vote for Tom, Dick, or Harry because he is of your nationality or because he belongs to your church or even because he knows the same password and grip that you do, the object to be obtained is to get the very best man the town affords for every office in it, so far as possible and not to contribute to the establishment of a colony of a particular people, church or society. The business of the towns is to be looked after. If you would have good roads, repaired in season, and well done for the least possible expense be sure to elect men that will do the work right. If you will have the poor looked after, quarantines attended properly; Hog cholera and other diseases among your animals prevented elect a man who will take an interest in these things and do what his official oath asks him to do. If you will have justice meted out elect men for Justice of the Peace and constables who are capable, reliable and not themselves law breakers Elect honest, sober, industrious men. When the regular politicians come around electioneering, telling you Mr. A. or Mr. B. would make a good officer if he would only take it; don't believe him about the "only take it". There are very few men in the country who are not willing to accept the honors of their neighbors; and who would gladly do so if properly offered the nominations. But few men want to enter into a contest for nomination and election against combinations, and intrigueings of every variety. Nominate the best men you have and get a second, and place them before the people honestly and fairly, and vote for them and elect them. Then will your town affairs suit you better than they have for a long time.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 5, 1897.

The schemes to keep Senator-elect Kennedy of Delaware, out of his seat which was concocted by "Little Billee" Chandler and other Republicans of his ilk, is in a fair way to fall through. Although the Senate Committee on Elections is controlled by republicans it has refused to be a party to this scheme to the extent of reopening the claim of Du Pont to the seat, and it is not believed that the flimsy claim of Gas Addicks will be seriously considered by the committee at all. A republican Senator said today that he thought Kenney's credentials were all right and that he was satisfied that he would be seated.

Nobody seems to have an idea that the amended arbitration treaty with England, which has been favorably reported to the Senate, will be acted upon at this session. In fact, its friends would be afraid to force a vote at this time least it should result in rejection of the treaty.

One of the legacies of the Harrison administration is a treaty that binds the United States to pay $6,000 a year towards the support of a monarchy, and an almighty poor specimen of monarchy at that. The treaty in question was made with Germany and England and the money goes to pay the expenses of the semi-savage King of Samoa. A year or so ago President Cleveland recommended legislation looking towards the abrogation of this treaty, and each year there has been a protest made when the House reached the item of the Diplomatic and Consular appropriation bill carrying that $6,000. This week when the item was reached Representative McMillin moved that it be struck out, because he did not think it right that our people should be contributing money to the support of a monarchy anywhere and under any circumstances, but his motion was voted down, not because a majority of the House favored the appropriation but because they considered that as long as the treaty is allowed to stand we are in honor bound to pay our share of the money.

Gen. Bradley T. Johnson, who was recently in Cuba is now in Washington and doing some very plain talking. For instance he said: "The Cubans will surley succeed unless the policies of the administration in aiding Spain crushes hope out of the Cubans. Every power, the army, the navy, the judiciary, of this great government is now in active operation to aid Spain and crush the rebellion. Every power will be exerted during the next administration to the same end. The money power demands peace, quiet, rest; but behind it all is the irresistible, omnipotent, all-prevailing force of manifest destiny which controls history, direct the ages, and is absolutely beyond and above the force of one generation, and controls them all. In this case, the will, the hope, the enthusiasm of the American people overwhelms Wall street and the peace of the money-changers, and will have free Cuba."

Hon. John W. Kern, of Indiana, now in Washington, says of the democratic party in Indiana is as full of life and in as good condition as it has been during any time within the last twenty years. Every day since the election has intensified the belief of the voters out our way, who supported the Chicago ticket, that they had the right side of the argument. Instead af higher wages and full time, promised by the republicans, wage-earners have experinced a decrease in their earnings since last November. Even now there are thousands of good men who were scared or buncoed into leaving the democratic party that are are very willing to come into the fold once more. They realize that they have been made the victims of a big confidence game."

The dismissal for the second time of a silver democrat from the Treasury department may result in a scandal. The man dismissed is Mr. William E. Ryan, an expert accountant, who was a candidate for Congress in the Rochester (N. Y.) district last November. Mr. Ryan was first dismissed the day after election. On Dec. 2nd he secured a reappointment at the reduced salary, under a civil service certificate. He recently served notice of his intention to contest the election in his Congressional district, on the ground that the use of the Myers Ballot Machine was illegal, and this week he was again dismissed. It is said he was given a hint by a person in authority that it would not be wise for him to make a contest, and he thinks he now knows why.

If Senator Candler can tell in a speech he has promised to make on his resolution declaring to be the sense of the Senate that this country should not permanently accept the single gold standard, but should strive to have gold and silver put on the same terms by the free coinage of both, any other reason for the adoption of the resolution than the bamboozling of silver republicans into the belief that their party is going to do something for silver the silver majority in the Senate will doubtless vote to adopt his resolution, although they and every body else know that it would be meaningless so far as accomplishments are concerned. Everybody knows that the Senate believes in the free coinage of silver.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE:—Undue excitement is a rare thing in our Town. We are a temperance people have no Saloon, and never indulge in a fight; But I believe that many of our ablebodied young men would be willing to go and help Cuba out if they did not have such a large crop of yellow fever and aligators there. Many years ago, away back in the forties we had a little brush with just such a class of people, as the Spaniarps,(The Mexicans) and the United States found that they were not very humane. But our sympathy is for Cuba let the battle go as it will.

The "Treating" Custom.

Phildelpha Bulletin: A member of the legislature at Harrisburg has proposed a bill by which the custom of "treating is to be declarred illegal in Pennsylvania and a penalty put upon the offender. The practice of buying drinks for companions at bars as a mark of friendship or hospitality is one of the peculiar customs of the American people, which most of the men who participate in it freely acknowledge has become an abuse. It has been robbed of much of its original significance as an evidence of good fellowship by reason of its promiscuousness, is often a senseless custom and is unquestionably a prolific breeder of drunnkedess. It would be a good thing to do away with the practice altogether, but this will not be brought about by a legislative enactment which interferes with personal rights. We have too much lesislation, of this kind already. The "treating" habit can be broken up only by a voluntary recognition of its tomfoolery and viciousness, and by a gradual enterance into a sort of social compact among men to drink only what they actually need or care for.—Pioneer Press.

The official history of the war, published by the government in 112 volumes, cost about $25,000 a volume.

The public printer at Washington states that he has the largest and most complete establishment of the kind in the world, and last year he used 5,457 tons of paper, against 2,718 tons in 1887.

The inventors of the roller boat promise to cross the ocean in three days. Their success is doubtful, but prophets are not as confident as they were that the ocean greyhounds have reached the limit of speed.

Residents of Edgefield county, S. C., have produced a man with a tail, a prolongation of the backbone 18 inches long and 15 inches in circumference. Scientists are much interested in this possible clew to the missing link.

In Belgium on May 1 next the 24-hour day system will be adopted by the railways, post offices and telegraph bureau. One trouble about it is that some people will feel a superstitious twinge when the hands stand at 13 minutes to 13.

Mark Twain is said to be a broken-down man in London, trying to write himself out of debt, but really writing himself into the grave. His trip around the world is said to have been a failure, from a lecturing and financial standpoint.

From what we gather we presume that the proper caper is something like this: A spooning at Newport, thinking in autumn, an engagement in January and a wedding in June—that is to say, three months of attention, three months of reflection, three months of adoration and three months of preparation.

A person would scarcely believe it, until pains had been taken to count them, that there are 17,592,186,044,515 different sounds in the human voice, but it is true. These effects are produced by 14 direct muscles, which give about 16,000 different sounds, and 30 indirect, which produce the remainder.

Among the questions discussed at the recent annual meeting of the National Game, Bird and Fish Protective association was: "What can be said or done to the ladies of America to prevent the inhuman practice of decorating their heads with the dead bodies of our song birds?" The best thing to do is to appeal to American women to abate the crime.

A New York judge has decided that "in the contemplation of the law a dog cannot be called vicious until he has established a reputation by biting more than once." Pedestrians will govern themselves accordingly. If a neighbor's dog bites you, don't despair; maybe the brute can be induced to do it again some day, when you may prefer a request that he be killed.

The supreme court of New York has decided that damages cannot be recovered for anguish caused by delay in the delivery of a telegram. The court admitted the trouble it encountered trying to estimate the money value of a young woman's anguish, and very properly came to the conclusion that it was a psychic property incapable of measurement in money value.

Mrs. Emma C. Sickles, of Chicago, is anxious to be a public benefactress. She asks congress to establish a domestic science bureau in connection with the agricultural department, the purpose being to teach the people to take proper care in preparing the food they live upon. Mrs. Sickles thinks she has hit upon the real trouble in this country; it is not the tariff or the financial question, but merely poorly cooked food and indigestion.

Once in order always in order seems to be the rule in England, where old customs have a hold that cannot be appreciated in more hustling and changeable countries. As an instance, the Springfield Republican tells this: The annual "lion sermon," which has been preached annually for 251 years at the Church of St. Katherine Cree, London, was originated by Sir John Gayer, a former lord mayor who had a narrow escape from being eaten by a lion, and expressed his thanks in this way. Some of the parishioners may by this time regret the timidity or poor apetite of the lion.

A man named Spicer, living in Kansas, recently found a rich surface soil in the bottom of a well 100 feet deep. When the soil was spread on top of the earth vegetation sprang out of it, and the vegetation was unlike anything in modern Kansas. Among other things were little date trees. The seeds which grew out of the soil taken from below had been deposited there perhaps a million years ago and had during all that time retained their vitality. At that remote period Kansas was a tropical or semi-tropical state. Strange things we can learn from these little incidents, and still stranger ones we can imagine.

According to a recent writer on Mexico there is in that country a mania for school building. He makes the assertion that there is at the present time not a village of 100 Indians in Mexico which has not its own free school. In July last the government took control of all the schools, and the result will be a heomogeneous system. A strange fact is that though Mexico is a Catholic country, not a word of religious instruction is imparted in these schools. President Diaz holds that such instruction belongs to the home and to the churches. The priests are not allowed to have anything to do with the schools.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Both Bodies Are in Good Working Order.

Gossipy Letters Giving in Detail the More Important Work of the Senate and House of Representatives.

St. Paul, Feb. 5.—Both the senate and the house yesterday were especially interested in denying newspaper statements. The senate was exercised over interviews with Minneapolis merchants concerning department stores, while the house was disturbed by the newspaper stories that State Treasurer Koerner had not filed his bond. This was clearly disproven, his bond having been filed Jan. 4, as required by law. Another state officer was also defended, in the person of Secretary of State Berg, who had been accused of not producing certain papers desired in the Mountain Iron investigation. This was also shown to be incorrect and Mr. Donnelly said he did not mean it, so that the millenium of good feeling was ushered in as the result of the hullabaloo. The state treasurer, in response to the request of the senate, sent that body a detailed statement showing the amount of money originally in suspended banks, the amount which had since been paid and the balance still remaining uncollected. The only banks where there seems likely to be a loss are the Farmers & Merchants' State bank, of Minneapolis, which still owes the state $21,000, and the American Exchange bank, of Minneapolis, where the balance due is something over $18,000. Even this may be collected from the bondsmen, but as it is over three years since the banks failed, it seems rather doubtful. The Bank of Minnesota, at St. Paul, had the largest deposit of any insolvent bank, amounting to over one hundred thousand dollars, but State Treasurer Koerner has already secured an order from the court directing the receivers to pay him $75,000 immediately out of funds they have in their hands. Considering that originally the state had over $300,000 tied up, the ultimate loss, if any, will be very small.

Mr. Jacobson offered a bill in the house yesterday which will facilitate the state in bringing suits to recover such property as the Mountain Iron mine, the Hastings & Dakota and other land grants which it is claimed have been improperly secured. This legislature is evidently determined to ascertain whether the created can be greater than the creator, or, in other words, whether the state has any rights that corporations are bound to respect. A bill was introduced in the house, in accordance with the usual method, which is the duplicate of one pending in the Senate appropriating $28,000 for the erection of a live stock ampitheatre and other improvements at the state fair grounds. The frequent introduction of the same bill in both houses indicates a dearth of material from which to make business to exhaust the ninety days.

The cyclists do not seem to be strong in the house, as Mr. Grondahl's bill allowing cycle paths to be constructed along the highways does not seem to be popular. The house thinks it would interfere with the farmers, who have to rely upon the roads for marketing their produce. Mr. Jacobson said bicyclists were a nuisance: that they afflicted the cities but the farmers should unite to keep the nuisance out of the country districts. To save absolute defeat the bill was referred back to its author.

St. Paul, Feb. 4.—You can put it on record that every legislative day which is not productive of a controversy is one day lost. The wrangle in the senate yesterday was over the confirmation of Mr. Griffin to a position on the state pharmacy board. The majority of the judiciary committee reported against him and the minority in his favor. The debate was so long protracted that the senators hungered and thirsted, taking a mid-day recess, only to return and continue the battle. In the end the appointment was confirmed, just as every other appointment the governor has made this winter has been, with the exception of Bundy of Otter Tail, whose name was withdrawn, for membership on the state board of equalization.

There has been a good deal of bluster about defeating appointments made by the governor, but it is all ended in wind. In the case of Sheriff Block, of Nicollet county, the legislature even went so far as to remove a constitutional disability by passing an act allowing a sheriff to hold a position on the insane asylum board.

The bill repealing the corrupt practice act was indefinitely postponed in the senate, notwithstanding Senator Greer's statement that the one man in the state who endeavored to live up to to it was defeated at the polls.

The most important bill of the day was offered by Senator Miller. It provides for an additional assistant attorney general whose duty shall consist of prosecuting cases against railroads before the railroad commissioners. It carries with it a salary of $2,400. Another bill provides for the establishment of private cemeteries and crematories. It has for many years been a common thing for persons in Texas, Arizona and other untamed portions of the country, to have private cemeteries of their own, but this is the first movement of that kind in Minnesota.

The location of the fourth insane asylum bobbed up serenely in the house yesterday. It came in the form of a resolution offered by Mr. Staples of Dakota county, providing for a joint committee of seven on the part of the house and four on the part of the senate to investigate the methods by which the asylum was located at Anoka. The resolution passed.

There was a heated debate over the bill making the railroad commissioners elective, instead of being appointed by the governor. The debate brought out a good deal of personal bitterness, among other things it being urged that the commission appoints 200 grain inspectors and thus makes itself a great political machine. The sentiment was strongly in favor of the bill and it was recommended to pass.

Apparently as an offset for the senate bill appropriating $50,000 for an inebriate asylum at Rochester, a bill was introduced in the house to abolish the inebriate ward which now exists in the Rochester insane asylum.

Neither branch of the legislature passed a bill yesterday. While 168 have been introduced in the senate and 317 in the house, the majority of them are still in the hands of committees, and very few have been passed by either house and a still smaller number sent to the governor. The bill appropriating funds for legislative expenses is not among the number whose passage has been delayed.

St. Paul, Feb. 5.—The event of the legislative session yesterday was the passage by the house of the bill making the railroad and warehouse commission elective by the people instead of appointive by the governor. The passage of this bill by the house has been inevitable, ever since it was introduced, and unless some miraculous change occurs the bill will go through the senate. The bill was championed by representatives Jacobson and Feig, and opposed by Representatives Littleton and Hicks. There were other speakers, but these were the leaders. There were 82 votes in favor and 27 against the passage of the bill. The negative votes were as follows: Messrs. Abbott, Bassford, Gray, Dale, Davies, Hartshorn, Hicks, Hollister, Laing, Leach, Littleton, Lovejoy, Lloyd, Manchester, Meyer, McDonald, McGill, Parker, Scott, Scribner, Schmidt, Shell, Simonson, Smith, Snyder, Soule, West.

The passage of this bill occupied so much attention that little other business was done, though fourteen new bills were introduced. Among those introduced was a measure appropriating $15,000 for county and district fairs.

The senate was evidently in an investigating mood yesterday, as a committee was appointed to investigate the advisability of having Minnesota represented at the trans-Mississippi exposition at Omaha. Another committee was appointed to investigate the method by which the fourth insane asylum was located at Anoka. The senate also passed the house joint resolution for a for a committee to investigate the recent bank failures and such a committee was duly appointed. The bill prohibiting athletic sports on Decoration day and closing of saloons within half a mile of places where memorial services are held was passed by a vote of 38 to 10. Senator Yale was the leading opponent of the bill. The mixture of having the same bill introduced in both houses was illustrated by the bill proposing the repeal of the struck jury law. This was read for final action by the senate, but the house had the same bill also ready for passage and to avoid complications the senate laid its bill aside.

Among the minor bills which passed without opposition was one forbiding the supplying of liquor to prisoners in jail. This will have a tendency to make the jails less popular as winter resorts.

Only a few bills were introduced, but among them was one creating the new office of county defender. This officer is to be an offset to the prosecuting attorney, as he is to defend all persons accused of crimes who have no funds to employ an attorney, and also to appear in behalf of those examined for insanity. Another bill offered, if it passes, will establish an institution for crippled and deformed children. The bill starts in modestly by appropriating only $15,000 for both site and building.

St. Paul, Feb. 6—The bill repealing the struck jury law passed the senate yesterday unanimously. A similar bill is pending in the house and unless the two measures get together the movement for repeal will fail. The chief business of the senate was debating the proposition to codify the tax laws, in fact revising the entire taxation system. After debating this topic most of the session the senators gravely decided to think it over some more before taking any action at all.

Both branches have got together at last on the matter of a reapportionment committee and the contest proved a victory for the senate. The senate demanded 14 members on the committee and the house would only concede them seven. A conference report was in both branches of the legislature yesterday making the committee consist of 14 senators and 15 representatives. This report was adopted by both branches and now we may expect a swarm of reapportionment bills, but whether any one of them will become a law is another matter.

One of the bills introduced in the senate yesterday appropriates $10,000 for the purpose of dedicating the Minnesota monument erected on the battlefield of Gettysburg. The dedication is to take place next July and all the survivors of the 1st Minnesota are expected to be present as well as ten companies of the National guard. It will not be a free junket for the National Guard, as each company must supscribe $600. Another senate bill offered, limits the rates for transporting iron ore to five cents per mile per ton.

Mr. Grondahl endeavored to resurrect his bicycle path bill in the house yesterday by introducing an entirely new measure. He tried to have the bill recommended to pass, but the opponents insisted on its being printed, so they could have a chance to pick it it to pieces, as they did his first one. Judging from the proceedings yesterday the bill requiring all executions to take place at the penitentiary at Stillwater is likely to pass the house. The action in committee of the whole was favorable to passage.

Quite a little time was occupied in determining whether or not to adjourn until Tuesday, during which there was considerable sharp talk. After voting that when the house adjourn it be until Tuesday, the question was reconsidered, as some of the prominent members intimated that if the house did not stick closer to business a good many would find that bills they had offered would not get attention in committees. When it was decided to hold a session to-day harmony prevailed.

St. Paul, Feb. 8.—Saturday was the first one since the legislative session began when both branches were at work. Taxes in the senate and banking in the house were the leading features. The senate was agitated by the bill providing for a tax commission to revise and codify the tax laws. This bill was seemingly introduced in forgetfulness that the same thing was done a few years ago and a very complete review of our tax laws made. There has been no material change in conditions since. It was defeated, Saturday, however, on the ground that there was not time to have a proper revision made at this session and that any way, under the constitution, a bill creating revenue must originate in the house. Following the defeat of the bill Senator Stevens offered one which allows delinquent taxpayers to redeem their property by paying the tax for which the sale was made, without having to pay all the subsequent delinquent taxes. Quite an innovation was made by the passage of a senate bill allowing a husband to deed real estate direct to his wife.

The failure of so many banks just at the beginning of the legislative session has been productive of a great crop of bills regulating financial institutions. Probably all have some good provisions coupled with many defects. The house committee on banking undertook on Saturday to clear the skies by a unanimous report against three of the pending bills. One was a very lengthy bill, being a general revision the entire banking law. The effort to kill this led to a lengthy debate which culminated in sending it to the committee of the whole instead of the bone yard. Its final passage is very doubtful, but it will give opportunity for a good many more speeches and offered some relief to the legislator in that manner. The other banking bills reported against were those introduced by Mr. Donnelly requiring state banks to post daily in their counting rooms the condition of the bank at the close of business the day before and also to keep posted the names of the stockholders and the amount of stock held by each. These were also sent to the committee of the whole, in spite of the advance report of the banking committee.

The committee on tax laws made a favorable report on the bill making taxes payable prior to June 1 and January 1, instead of in an annual payment as at present. Efforts have been made at intervals for 25 years past to make the payment of taxes semi-annual, but without success. The recent failure of banks and the tying up of three or four hundred thousand dollars of the state money has revived the theory that the money is just as safe in the hands of the people as in the banks, and likely do more public good.

Among the bills offered in the house on Saturday was another one regulating the rates for transporting iron ore. It makes the rate 7 mills per ton per mile. This is only one of half a dozen similar measures pending in the two branches. In the senate, on Friday, a bill was offered appropriating $10,000 to dedicate the Minnesota monument at Gettysburg. Saturday the same bill was offered in the house. Between the two there ought to be a dedication.

The farmers in the Red River valley who had to sail in boats last spring will be interested in a bill appropriating $25,000 for drainage work in the valley, which is now pending.

St. Paul, Feb. 9.—Yesterday was a dull day in both branches of the legislature. A good many members went home over Sunday and the attendance was light. In the senate a bill was introduced limiting fire insurance companies to one line of business; also a bill relieving the receiver of the Bank of New England, of Minneapolis, from paying interest on the funds belonging to the state, the bank had when it failed. The bank had over $61,000 when its doors closed and the amount has been paid in full. As there is not money enough to pay other creditors in full the bill proposes to relieve the receiver from paying interest which accrued between the time of the failure and time of the final payment to the state.

In the house the business was even of less importance than it was in the senate. Only seven bills were introduced and five of those were for roads and bridges. The only episode of interest was a squabble over a bill organizing the unorganized counties in the northern part of the state. Such a bill was introduced and referred to the committee on towns and counties. That committee reported back a substitute. Mr. Feig wanted the bill again referred to the committee on towns and counties, of which he is chairman, claiming that there were several parties who wanted to be heard. The argument against the reference was that the owners of pine timber are always inventing schemes for delay in order to prevent the organization of counties, because such organization increased their taxes. This argument carried the day and the bill was sent to the committee of the whole, instead of to the committee on towns and counties.

New Appointments.

Governor Clough has announced the following appointments:

Directors state normal schools:

W. B. Mitchell, Stearns county; C. A. Morey, Winona county; George H. Clark, Blue Earth county; William F. Phelps, Ramsey county.

Messrs. Mitchell, Morey and Clark are reappointed. Mr. Phelps succeeds A. E. Engstrom, whose term has expired.

Dairy Commissioner Anderson announces the following list of assistants in the dairy and food department:

J. Lawrence, of Northfield, succeeds E. J. Graham as first assistant commissioner.

W. S. Ebermann, of St. Anthony Park, succeeds E. M. Eaton as chemist.

George Staples, St. Paul, succeeds G. G. Sanborn as inspector.

Inspectors Davis and Gettman, of Minneapolis, are out, and will be succeeded by others not yet named.

C. N. Smith is the only person retained on the Minneapolis force.

Inspector Snyder, of Duluth, S. T. West, of Faribanlt, and E. B. Williams, of Moore county, were reappointed.

Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Ebermann return to the positions from which they were ousted four years ago.

Birch Coulee.

Governor Clough submitted a brief but pointed report from Adjutant General Muehlberg on the removal of a monument to the actual site of the Birch Coulee battle. The adjutant general was authorized to purchase five or ten acres on the actual spot where the battle was fought Sept. 2 and 3, 1862, and was given $1,200 with which to carry out his mission. He reports that with the assistance of some old settlers he located the historic spot, and by means of condemnation secured six acres at a cost to the state of $500. In concluding his report the adjutant general says that in his judgment he thinks it would be a credit to the state if instead of making a large appropriation for the removal of a patched up monument the legislature appropriate sufficient funds to erect an entirely new monument to commemorate the memorable battle.

Making for Duluth.

The Great Northern engineers are working Duluthward and are now reported to be in the neighborhood of Cloquet. The people in that town appear to be mystified as to the plans of the Great Northern for the Fosston extension, but the presence of the engineers in the vicinity of the town has led them to believe the rord intends coming through that place. The Cloquet Pine Knot is of the opinion that the road intends establishing extensive yards there.

The depot at Garden City was destroyed by fire.

IN THE OLD BARN LOFT.

'Tis thirty years, or thereabouts,
Since I used to roll and play,
And turn all kinds of somersaults
On the fresh and fragrant hay;
A-jumping and a-tumbling
On the hay so sweet and soft,
At my home away back yonder,
In the old barn loft.

How the pigeons used to flutter,
And strut about and coo!
And make love to one another,
Like sweethearts used to do.
While I walked the risky cross beam,
Or clambered high aloft,
With half intent of falling,
In the old barn loft.

How I used to frighten sister,
Who was looking for the eggs,
As I dangled there, head downward,
Holding by my little legs;
And, giving then a swing or two,
I'd strike the hay so soft,
At my home away back yonder,
In the old barn loft.

The twittering of the swallows,
While making homes of mud;
The gleeful game of hide-and-seek,
The slip, the sudden thud;
The pattering of the raindrops
Above the hay so soft,
Are memories still clinging
Of the old barn loft.

WHAT THE WIND SAID.

IT WAS the dreariest day in the world—wet, dismal, windy. All the night before the wind and thunder had vied with each other in producing all the noise possible. All day long the wind had howled madly over its triumph. It blew up against the hospital windows in wild gusts, and it shrieked deliriously as it called to the lake, tossing and moaning out a mournful chant of its own.

This, at least, is the way it seemed to the woman in the end bed of the accident ward. "You're vanquished, you're conquered, you're beaten at last," it seemed to say as she lay there watching with her tired, lovely eyes the poor, gloomy-looking clouds buffeted back and forth. "No hope, no hope," it counter-called as it swept furiously around from the street end of the wall and wailed rushingly up and down the narrow court on the other side. Sometimes that court, with its gleaming, white-washed wall, proved a very messenger of hope to this stranded bit of flotsam washed up high and dry by the tides of defeat and despair. The long, narrow shafts of sunlight which crept up one side and down the other as the day waxed and waned seemed to whisper of coming gladness, even to her. But to-day—this desolate, hopeless day—the court was so cheerless that she turned her face away from the window and gazed at the bare whitewashed wall instead. To-day of all days she felt that any added dreariness was unbearable.

"A year ago to-night," she thought, sadly, but with crooning tenderness with which men look upon a dead face, the face of a beloved child soon to shut entirely away from the light of day, and the wind took up the burden of her thoughts and crooned it, too.

"A year ago to-night, a year ago to-night," it called and shouted until she thought her brain was turning. "A year ago to-night—" She covered her aching eyes, too tired to close naturally, with her thin, spirit-like hand and tried to think of something else. What had happened at the time of which that cruel wind insisted on blaring out? What had not happened, rather? He had said that he loved her, and she— A burst of tears, none the less bitter for being so swiftly and sternly repressed, attested to the fact that her whispered vows of reciprocated adoration had been true. And yet, a year later, here she was in the accident ward of a charity hospital, and he—where? She had seen nothing of him since the night upon which she had gone home to find his visiting card on her little table and a hastily scrawled message bidding her a cold farewell, on the back of it. The reason of this action she had never known, but the results! Her very heart and soul were indelibly scarred by the marks of the agony she had endured at that time.

She had given up painting soon after that; and the recollection of his praises and hopes for her success had made the work too sorrowful and agonizing for her to continue it. With her enthusiasm for her beloved work had gone her health, her hope, all but her life. And even that was flickering out now, she thought, with a fresh pang of wild desire to go on living; the big dray which had sent her to the hospital had sent her also to her death. She had wished to die, yes, but death at close range, near at hand, facing one, is a stern reality very different from the idealized vision of death which sentimentality and an aching heart call forth. And to slip out of life in this helpless way seemed all at once unendurable. Her whole spirit rose in arms against it. Her heart beat suffocatingly, she buried her face in the pillow and tried in vain to still the wild throbbing, to calm her troubled breathing. So wrapt was she in the inner struggle which consumed her that she never heard the light footfall of the nurse as she approached with the new doctor, who was making his first rounds that afternoon, never heard the kindly woman speak to her, never knew that an observer was near until a firm, reassuring yet decided hand was laid upon her shoulder.

"Turn around, my friend, let me have a look at you," said a pleasant, commanding voice, and she started into throbbing consciousness at once. Her heart leaped to the sound of that voice, sending the vivid color which her cheeks had used to know back to them, her eyes were bright with the sudden excitement. She looked, to the man who gazed wonderingly back at her, like the merry-faced, light-hearted girl of a year ago. What had brought her here? Next moment she had remembered his cruelty, his undeserved unkindness, and the coldness of the past year came back to her heart and face, making all its paleness and angles apparent. Then, and not until then, did she drop her burning eyes and the new doctor turn his astonished ones away from her quivering mouth and altered countenance. Then he turned to the nurse and spoke as quietly as though the tragedy of his life had not suddenly sprung to a sudden resurrection and dragged into full consciousness with it the bitter heartache of a miserable year.

"This lady is an old friend of mine," he said, calmly, "and I will come back to her after I have visited all the other beds."

The sympathetic nurse, divining something unusual, but betraying nothing of surprise or curiosity, acquiesced, and they passed on. The time which passed before he returned seemed an eternity to the woman in the end bed, half loving, wholly hating him as she did. When she again heard his firm step near her she quivered uncontrollably, and once more hid her face in the pillow heated by her burning face. A moment later the touch she knew so well, had so often thrilled to, was laid upon her arm, and she turned unwillingly yet irresistibly to face him. She could think of nothing sufficiently scathing to say. He should speak first, at all events. And he did, waiting not a moment for her permission.

"Catherine," he said, his voice and face alike pulsating with love, "oh, Catherine, why did you break my heart?"

"Your heart," she flung back intensely; "and what of mine?"

"But you had given it to another," he returned, his face bitter with pain now. "Did I not see him with you in his arms and his lips pressed to yours? And did you not return his caresses with interest? Catherine, I went up the stairs to your room a happy optimist, I came down them a bitter pessimist. It was the old story of a woman's falseness."

"Yes," she answered sternly, though all the while both thought of the interested listeners in the neighboring beds and spoke in tones too suppressed to gratify the curiosity of the keenest ears in the ward. "Yes, it was the old story with a vengeance, but not of a woman's falseness. Of a man's foolishness, rather. The man whom you saw caressing me was my brother!"

The gladness of her heart in finding him thus better than she supposed softened her icy gaze and he was not a whit deceived or discouraged by the hardness of her voice. He knew that she still loved him and he was brave enough and manly enough to seek pardon humbly.

"Catherine," he said, lovingly, worshipingly, bending his face to hers regardless of who saw or heard his confession: "Catherine, I was a fool and worse, but I have been punished severely and I am doubly punished now in finding out how I have made you suffer. But, Catherine, we are all sinners; forgive me, as you hope to be some time forgiven for your wicked mistakes, and take me back into your heart. I know you love me, sweetheart, such love as ours does not die until life does and we shall yet be happy. Give me a kiss of forgiveness, my darling, and let me take care of you forever."

She gave him the kiss silently and he bade her good-by for the time being. And as she lay there, silently gazing out at the gathering dusk, her eyes wet with tears of thanksgiving and her heart warm with love and gladness, the wind lifted up his voice again and came shouting down the court.

"God is good and all is well, God is good and all is well," it sang triumphantly, and to the women in the end bed of the ward it seemed that the deep toned diapason of the lake's voicing answered back in antiphone:

"Yes, let all things praise Him, forever and ever. Amen," she fancied it trumpeted back and she turned her face to the dusky court, the merest outline of the darkest gray now and slept sweetly.—Chicago News.

Gratified Curiosity.

Two young men, whose clothes were of such a style as to make it seem probable that they would at any minute fall into picturesque attitudes and execute a song and dance, stood watching a big building that is nearing completion.

"It's a great piece of work," commented one of them.

"Tain't anything else," was the reply.

"I wonder who's the guy that got it up. He oughtty have his name to it."

"I reckon he has somewhere. Wen a feller makes a hit like that, it's hard luck if he doesn't get his name on the programme."

"What does that say up there?"

His companion slowly read the letters, "MDCCCXCVI."

"That's it!" he exclaimed, as soon as he had spelled it through.

"That's what?"

"The name of the gent that designed the stone pile. I reckon he's some Russian or Welshman that's just startin' in this country. I never heard of him before, but he's good."—Golden Days.

He Called to the Dog.

"When I called on her," said Willy, "the dog chased me out of the yard."

"Did no one see you?"

"Her father did."

"Why didn't he call to the brute?"

"He did. He said: 'Sick him' about a dozen times."—N. Y. Journal.

REVISING THE TARIFF.

Rapid Progress Made by House Ways and Means Committee.

A New Revenue Measure Well Advanced—Some of the More Important Schedules That Have Been Practically Decided Upon.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The work of framing the new tariff law has been will advance by the republican members of the ways and means committee and rapid progress has been made with the leading schedules. The progress made by the committee indicates that they will have the bill well advanced by the close of the present session on March 4, in spite of the fact that some puzzling questions remain to be dealt with. Following is the action decided upon with regard to some schedules:

Important Change on Cattle.

The wine and spirit schedule of the McKinley bill has been adopted almost without the erasure of a line. One of the most important changes is on live cattle, which are covered by a blanket provision of the existing law for all live animals at 20 cents ad valorem. The rate under the new law will be $5 per head on cattle more than one year old, and 25 per cent. ad valorem on cattle valued above $20.

Farm Products.

The rate on barley is the McKinley rate of 30 cents per bushel, which was demanded by the American barley growers. Hay is put at $4 per ton, the same as in the McKinley law, and hops at 15 cents per pound, which is also an extract from the McKinley law. Vegetables all go back to the McKinley rates, potatoes being put at 25 cents per bushel and flaxseed at 30 cents per bushel. Other items on which McKinley rates are restored are: Salt, 12 cents per 100 pounds in packages and 8 cents when in bulk; starch, 2 cents per pound; salt meat extracts, 35 cents per pound; salt meats, 25 per cent.; milk, 5 cents per gallon, and poultry, 20 per cent. Eggs go back to 5 cents per dozen and berries to the old McKinley rate.

The Chemical Schedule.

Under the chemical schedule soap made of caustic of soda and kindred chemicals remain at the rate fixed in the Wilson law, which is considered sufficiently protective. The principal oils are left at existing rates, except in the case of linseed and flaxseed oil, where an advance was required because of the restoration of the McKinley duties on the raw material. Refined borax is advanced from 2 cents to 3 cents per pound, which is somewhat under the McKinley rate. There are only slight changes in dyestuffs and their elements.

Iron and Steel.

Lead in ores is fixed at 1 cent per pound, pig lead is 2 cents, and white lead and lead acetates at 2½ cents. These rates are considerably less than those of the McKinley law. The iron and steel schedule was left in a fairly satisfactory condition to the manufacturers by the present law, and will not be changed, except upon a few special articles, like tin plate and cotton ties and some of the forms of tube steel.

Cotton, Wool, Etc.

A rate of 5 cents per pound upon all classes of wool has been suggested as a probable compromise upon the raw product. The cotton schedule was satisfactory in its present construction to many of the manufacturers when it was put in its present form, and they are asking only minor changes. Wines and spirits will be made satisfactory, if possible, to the California grape growers and manufacturers. The earthenware schedule will also be incomplete, but will be put upon a firm protective basis. The rates on decorated china were put exceptionally low in the present law, because of irritation between the manufacturers and their employes. The new rates will be subjected to some advances. The smaller sizes of plate glass are advanced from 5 to 8 cents per foot when not exceeding 16 by 24 inches, and from 8 to 12 cents per foot when not exceeding 24 by 30 inches square.

VICTORY FOR CUBANS.

Mine Exploded and Spanish Troops Lose Heavily.

Key West, Fla., Feb. 8.—Details of a Spanish defeat almost at Weyler's headquarters have been received in Havana, but the censors have rigidly suppressed all news regarding it.

Insurgents from Garcia's army had invested Nazarene, where a large supply of army munitions was kept, and aid had been asked by the Spaniards. Col. Artemas marched to the relief of the place. Four miles out the road crossed a dense swamp through which flows a narrow, but deep creek. The insurgents mined the road and bridge and hid themselves by the roadside. As the Spaniards were crossing the bridge the mines were exploded. The destruction of the bridge divided the Spanish detachment and the Cubans poured in a hot fire on those in rear and then made a charge with drawn machetes. Many of the Spaniards were driven into the creek, the Cubans cutting them down as they attempted to crawl out on the bank.

The soldiers in the rear column finally managed to escape utter annihilation, but their loss was heavy. The commander was in the van and escaped with the rest of the column to Nazarene. The Cubans captured 50 prisoners, and they report over 100 Spaniards killed, drowned, wounded or missing. Owing to the utter surprise of the Spaniards the Cuban loss was slight.

Bank Notes Being Withdrawn.

New York, Feb. 8.—The national banks in New York are reducing their circulation. One reason for this course is the prospect of a long period of easy money and another is the high prices at which government bonds are ruling. The national bank act by the amendment of 1882 permits a decrease in circulation of only $3,000,000 a month by all the national banks in the country, and there are 2,700 of them. In January for the first time the $3,000,000 limit was reached. This week applications for reduction of circulation aggregating $3,000,000 were sent to Washington from New York alone.

Flood in the Hocking Valley.

Athens, O., Feb. 9.—The Hocking river continues to rise and is working destruction all along the valley. At Amosville, seven miles south, while William Henry, wife and son Harley, 18 years of age, were crossing a bridge over the river, the piers gave way and all were precipitated to the river below. Hugh Griffin was drowned near Chauncey, four miles south, Monday afternoon, while attempting to rescue a drowning horse. The village of Selba, six miles north, is inundated, and two boys are reported drowned.

Drowns Herself and Children.

Big Timber, Mont., Feb. 8.—In a fit of desperation, after a quarrel with her husband, the wife of Robert Cort, a fairly well-to-do rancher living five miles from here, picked up her three small children, rushed to the Yellowstone river and threw the children and herself in.

Goff Declines.

Canton, O., Feb. 8.—Judge Goff has written to Maj. McKinley a letter, received Saturday morning, couched in such terms as to warrant the announcement that he will not be in the cabinet.

THE CUBAN REFORMS.

Minister Dupuy de Lome Talks of the Spanish Scheme.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The Spanish legation has received with the full abstract of the new reforms for the island of Cuba and Porto Rico the preamble of Senor Canovas, announcing the terms of the new decree. This preamble expresses the kindliest feelings towards the Cuban people and declares that their mother Spain is disposed, as she always has been, to open her arms to them and to extend amnesty for past offenses, and declares that the application of the reforms only depends upon the insurgents. Minister Dupuy de Lome discussed the scope of the reforms and said among other things:

"The electoral reforms were not referred to at any length in the decree of the ministry for the reasons stated in the preamble of Senor Canovas, that they will require the action of the cortes. I am informed, however, that the government contemplates extending greatly the basis of the suffrage, but they desire to do it in such a way as to prevent undue influence being acquired by the illiterate portion of the population. An educational qualification which may be suggested by the Cubans, and which seems reasonable and proper, will undoubtedly be adopted by the cortes.

"It is the purpose of the government to show the greatest generosity towards the insurgents who lay down their arms. The reforms cannot well be put in full effect until the sovereignty of Spain is acknowledged in all parts of the island. The government will not relax its military activity in any degree if the insurgents show a disposition to continue the contest and fail to appreciate the great concessions made by the home government.

"The tariff features of the new decree mean a great deal for the United States as well as for Cuba. The first column of the new tariff schedules, providing for revenue, will contain the greatest number of items, leaving the list on which discriminations are made in favor of Spain, not exceeding 20 per cent. of the value of the imports, a comparatively short one. The duties levied will be equal against all countries except Spain, and American manufacturers and exporters, in view of their familiarity with the Cuban trade and their nearness to the island, are likely to appreciate the importance of these concessions. The situation will be much more favorable to American trade than under the reciprocity treaty of 1890."

TRADE REVIEW.

Week Develops No Important Change in the Situation.

New York, Feb. 6.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"No important changes in business appear, but the number of manufacturing establishments starting much exceeds the number of those stopping during the week, and so much that the curtailment of working time in many cotton mills probably does not lessen the aggregate productive force or amount of wages paid. There is distinct increase in orders for woolen goods, some gain in the silk manufacture, a waiting condition with gain in one branch of boots and shoes, and indications of better things coming in the iron and steel manufacture.

"To many it is the most perplexing feature of current events that wheat does not rise much, though it has advanced 1¾ cents for the week. The condition of the market is not explained by any special information, but current prices show that no great confidence is felt in the estimates of supplies available for the rest of the year. Cotton fell 7⅛ cents after the agreement to close Fall River and other print cloth works became known, but recovered the quotation of a week ago, 7.21 cents, without further news. Spinners' takings have been so small this year, those of northern mills about 400,000 bales less than 1894-95, that the admitted narrowness of demand for goods has at present considerable weight.

"Prices for Bessemer pig and gray forge at Pittsburgh have slightly advanced, with a much more hopeful feeling notwithstanding the comparative narrowness of the demand for finished products, and in plates and wire and wire nails there is much more business with good prospects. Reports that 25,000 tons of steel plate and sheet bars have been exported to England are only indications of the temporary excess of supply over demand in this country, and are not supposed to have realized any profit. Yet it is stated that prices of cast pipe are from $2 to $3 per ton lower at New York than at Scotch works. Bars are quoted at the lowest price ever known at Philadelphia, without much improvement in the demand, and steel rails are still inactive and unchanged in price, the railroads waiting for a decline corresponding to the fall in billets. But on the whole the demand for iron and steel products is slowly gaining.

"Failures for week have been 311 in the United States, against 323 last year, and 63 in Canada, against 67 last year."

She Married a Title.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 6.—Judge J. W. Jones on Friday signed the decree which dissolved the matrimonial bonds which held Julia de la Tour du Villard to M. Brice Ernest Gabriel Raymond Odde, marquis de la Tour du Villard. She was Miss Chapin, of New York, and in 1892 married the marquis, with whom she sailed for France and lived till a year ago, when she was forced to leave him, being penniless. She says that, arriving in Paris, they took apartments in a fashionable quarter. Notwithstanding the fact that the marquis was worth 575,000 francs, he considered it beneath him to pay any of their bills, and she was obliged to do it herself, even settling his laundry bills. After her money was exhausted and their landlord insisted upon payments of his rent, she was obliged to pledge her jewels in order to procure the cash to satisfy him.

For a New Portfolio.

Washington, Feb. 5. — Senator Frye has introduced a bill in the senate to create a new department to be styled the department of commerce and industry. A synopsis of its provisions follows:

It is proposed to include within this department the following bureaus now under the treasury: Navigation, customs, internal revenue, statistics, steamboat inspection, coast and geodetic survey, lighthouse board, life saving service and supervising architect's office, and to add to them from the interior department, commissioner of railroads, geological survey and census; from the state department, the consular service; from the war department, internal improvements, including rivers and harbors, and independent bureaus, the department of labor, the bureau of American republics and the intercolonial railway commission.

Suicide of a St. Paul Druggist.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—Mr. Peter J. Dreis, the oldest druggist in St. Paul and a leading politician, committed suicide Thursday. His son, a boy of 13 years, had thrown a snowball at a man in a cutter, the ball striking the horse and causing it to run away. This runaway resulted directly in three other runaways in which large damage was done. Two of the injured parties called at the drug establishment of Mr. Dreis and demanded damages. Without making any answer to their demands he walked directly into the office at the rear of the store and shot himself, death being instantaneous.

Four Suffocated.

North Branch, Minn., Feb. 5.—Word has been received here that Mr. and Mrs. John Brohnamann and two sons, Ernest and William, living about five miles west of here, had been suffocated by carbon dioxide, due to a fire in a closed root house.

A Father Cured of Scrofula.

His Daughter of St. Vitus' Dance.

Facts Vouched for and Sworn to.

From the Tribune, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People have brought joy into the home of G. N. Bensel, of 303 Hennepin Avenue, the well-known Minneapolis decorator and painter. For over ten years Mr. Bensel was afflicted with scrofula in an aggravated form, causing running sores to continually form on the back of the neck and extend up into the hair. To-day he is cured and happy—twice happy we might say; for his daughter who is now fourteen years of age had the terrible nervous affliction, known as St. Vitus' dance, and has also been greatly improved by the use of these pills.

In relating his experience to a Tribune reporter, he said:

"I have had the annoyance nearly twelve years, consisting chiefly of scrofulous tumors on the back of my head and neck. I tried many remedies without receiving the relief desired. It was after persistent efforts of a friend to induce me to use Pink Pills for Pale People, that I yielded, and the result is that now I cannot express my thanks fittingly to that friend for his persistency. I know these pills are a good thing for scrofula. You can see for yourself the dry marks and red spots left on my neck, where formerly were eruptions that emitted matter and the vilest humors of the blood. Now they don't even itch, and I believe I am practically cured.

"I want to tell you too, about the great benefit my daughter, who is now fourteen years old, also received from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For two years she had St. Vitus' dance and we did everything we could hear of to relieve her, but have never found anything that equals these pills. She has used four boxes and is nearly cured. We have great faith in them and will continue their use whenever afflicted.

(Signed) GEO. N. BENSEL."

T. E. ANDREWS, Notary Public.

"This is to certify that I have had a very favorable experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I have suffered more or less for seven years with inflammatory rheumatism and neuralgia pains (sometimes unable to walk for three weeks at a time), and in one instance had such intense pain in the stomach and around the heart that I thought each hour for three days would be my last. Having seen articles in the papers about your pills, I concluded to give them a trial, and have used ten boxes with marvelous results. Have felt better the past month and more free from pain than for many years. I shall continue their use.

(Signed) ETTA PIPER."

One of Mrs. Pinkham's Talks

Concerning a Mother's Duty to Her Young Daughter. Together with a Chat with Miss Marie Johnson.

The balance wheel of a woman's life is menstruation. On the proper performance of this function depends her health.

Irregularity lays the foundation of many diseases, and is in itself symptom of disease. It is of the greatest importance that regularity be accomplished as soon as possible after the flow is an established fact.

Disturbance of the menstrual function poisons the blood. In young girls suppression develops latent inherited tendencies to scrofula or consumption, and no time must be lost in restoring regularity. Many a young girl goes to her grave because this difficulty has been thought lightly of, and mother has said, "Time will bring about a cure; she is young, I don't worry about her."

Mother, when you see your daughter languid and indifferent to things that usually interest a young girl, when you note that flush on her cheek, that glassy appearance in her eyes; when your daughter tells you that even the weight of her dress waist oppresses her, and that she has terrible pains in her stomach shortly after eating, don't ignore these signs! If you do, you will be following your daughter to the grave, for she will die!

This is gospel truth—she is developing consumption of the bowels!

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest regulator known to medicine. Make haste to use it on the first appearance of the tell-tale symptoms; it will restore all the female organs to their normal condition. Miss Marie Johnson's letter to Mrs. Pinkham, which follows, should interest all mothers and young ladies. She says:

"My health became so poor that I had to leave school. I was tired all the time, and had dreadful pains in my side and back. I would have the headache so badly that everything would appear black before my eyes, and I could not go on with my studies. I was also troubled with irregularity of menses. I was very weak, and lost so much flesh that my friends became alarmed. My mother, who is a firm believer in your remedies from experience, thought perhaps they might benefit me, advised me to write you for advice. I followed the advice you gave, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills as you directed, and am now as well as I ever was. I have gained flesh and have a good color. I am completely cured of irregularity. Words cannot express my gratitude, and I cannot thank you enough for your kind advice and medicine."—MISS MARIE F. JOHNSON, Centralia, Pa.

—Read ihe notice of teachers spring examinations in another column.

—Epworth League Sunday evening at 6:45, at the M. E. Church. Mrs. Wilder Leader.

—Martin Bruggeman the St. Paul brewer, died this week. Mr. B. owned property and was known in our village.

—If all the buildings now in contemplation materialize next summer Delano will see such a building boom as has not been for seyeral years. Let 'er boom.

—People stop at Wittman's and wonder what time it is until they investigate awhile, when they are astonished to learn that it is not what time but how cold it is they are looking at.

—Several life insurance men were in town this week. Between the itinerants and local agents they pester the people so that most everybody takes out a little insurance just to have an excuse to keep off agents.

—The Old Settlers Society have decided to hold their meeting at Buffalo on Thursday, June 17, the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill. This is a good time of year for this meeting as was shown last summer.

—James Nelson has been appointed fire inspector for the Great Northern. His business we understand is to inspect all the buildings on the right of way, including elevators and see that they are in a safe condition as far as danger from fire is concerned.

—The last regular meeting of the City Council occurs next Monday night Feb. 15. If you have any bills to present or any other unfinished business with the village then is your opportunity to transact it. It is best for each council to settle up as far as possible for the year for which it was elected.

--Be out to help nominate a winning ticket for village officers. A ticket that is worthy of election. Don't put up a single man who is unfit for the position to which he is nominated. Our village is now in need of economical administration. Every thing should count. No more extravagancies should be gone into until some of our debts are paid.

—The spring election will occur next month. A new set of village officers will be to elect. Be sure and attend the primary elections and aid in choosing candidates for the different places, that will suit you. Don't stay away and then on election day vote for the lesser of two evils. But try to get men nominated on the board that you can concienciously vote for because they are good men for the place.

—It would be much better for the road overseers to level up the roads leading into town for a mile or so out in every direction than to have the terrible "chuck holes" now existing. The big loads of wood lately hauled have cut holes where the show was drifted until it is necessary to allow a team to walk where it should be able to trot right along, taking up time enough in a day to level up all the holes. People like to drive over good smooth roads.

—A meeting of the Washington's Birthday Association committies was called for last Monday evening. Three committies reported, that on instrumental music, vocal music and securing the hall. All report that everything is favorable to a good entertainment. Let all committies report at the same place next Monday night as nearly as possible what part they will take so that the programme Committee can arrange the programme to the best advantage.

—Unless more care is taken on fair days with the dispensing of liquors to men already too full for their own or anybodyelse's good there will be another murder trial on hand. Last Saturday fighting was freely indulged in and it was more to good luck than anything else that someone was not killed or seriously injured. Should things be repeated as on last Saturday it would tend to create such a reversion of feeling against the entire business as to call for a closing up of all saloons. If people pay $500 for a license to do business and so openly violate their contract they will sooner or later find themselves without a license. This thing has gone far enough and must be stopped.

—Some people when sober would advocate the closing up of saloons; when drunk they commit deeds, and even crimes they would not stoop to when sober. Some advocate allowing the majority to rule; and aid in getting men drunk and voting then for license claiming that you must not interfere with a man's personal liberty, yet if he, in a drunken fit of anger knocks a man down he is arrested and placed in jail, his "personal liberty" taken from him. If he don't do this he goes home, drives his wife and childred out in the bitter cold and snow without food or clothes that the money spent for liquor would, and should have bought them; that was justly theirs. Their "personal liberty" is not considered. When would be the proper time for this poor drunkard to exercise his personal liberty as to how the laws should be, when he votes drunk or when he is sober?

—Provision should be made on Fair Day for protecting the lives and limbs of people on the streets from the teams driven by drunken drivers at a run away gait. The best protection would be the revoking of a few licenses where liquors are openly sold to drunken men.

—Kerosine took a tumble Wednesday rolled over in the snow out on the Montrose road; Mr. Cooper came back to town and secured help and finally the tank was successfully righted and moved on the even tenor of its way. 'Taint kerosene gits all men down.

—Last Saturday's fair was fairly well attended. Milk cows were most in demand; one fine animal with her calf was offered for $45. Several brought good prices. Small pigs were offered for $1.50. Prices are tollerably good, but considering the winter is well over it is not so very high after all.

—Miss Jones, of Minneapolis, a trained nurse is visiting friends in town and looking over the field with a view of locating here. There are times when an experienced nurse would be warmly welcome to the homes of some of our citizens. On several occasions nurses have been secured from abroad. Many times a great deal depends on the nursing a patient gets, if praperly taken care of health will be restored much sooner. Friends may be kind but without experience often make poor nurses. It seems as if a trained nurse ought to find employment here most of the time.

School Notes.

Mr. Rob Kemmer visited the High School four times this week, and said that he would have visited more but the teacher gave him a book which he couldn't read.

Miss Arnold the assistant principal is wearing glasses because her pupils are so bright that they hurt her eyes.

Quite a crowd assembled at the High School Thursday afternoon, among those present were Mesdames Hawker, Green, Misses Dunn, Bauman and Davis.

One of the scholars said yesterday afternoon in the literary society that he couldn't act as president for he couldn't be there every meeting. Probably because he has to go to Lyndale occassionally.

It is a good thing that we have got a pretty organ as about all it is used for is an ornament.

Prof. Hawker went to the city Thursday afternoon.

County Cullings.

There is good grazing about Monticello, whats the matter with the late Dairy Inspector Bertram setting up a dairy office of his own there?

The Senates share of the joint committee on re appointments of Legislative districts has been appointed. It is to be hoped that Wright will be rearranged.

Among names of jurors drawn to attend the District Court, at Minneapolis beginning March 2, appears; H. Tanner, Waverly, petit jury: W. W. Washburne, Buffalo, grand jury.

Complaints have been made that the mails are too long getting from the county seat to neighboring towns and vice versa. The railroad accommodations along this part of the Soo Line seems to be very unsatisfactory.

Of course Monticello couldn't hold down two fat offices at the expense of the State so as Mr. French's star seems in the ascendency Andy Bertrams goes down behind the horizon, politically speaking, And Mr. Sanborn supersedes him in the dairy office.

Local option will doubtless catch the votes of most of Wright County's delegation in the Legislature. Anybody that goes for license is apt to do so for votes rather than from a belief that whiskey is of any benefit to the county or to the people in it.

The House voted on Representative Stockwell's bill to abolish capital punishment, last Tuesday. None of the 38th Legislative district delegates names appeared in the list of ayes. So Wright and Sherburne counties are in favor of hanging when necessary.

We understand that a prominent newspaper man visited Annandale this week for the purpose of purchasing the "Post". Mr. Rank has made the Post keep in the ranks of the republican party, nevertheless he has given his readers a clean and conciencious paper usually.

Several of our cotemporaries are devoting considerable "space" to the discussion of county printing. It is a very small matter to quarrel over, brethren: Especially at four cents per folio; and nothing for the "space". The county should pay legal rates, and if legal rates are not right they should be made right. There is no use of printers running each other and themselves out of business. 'Tain't right.

For some reason the Board of County Commisioners as at present constituted don't suit everybody. A move was made to keep Mr. Johnson out, that failed. Now apout 40 signers have been secured to a petition asking that the 4th district commissionership be declared vacant. This is represented by John Buckman, it claimed that he is not a resident of the 4th district. There will probably be quite a time over this matter.

Senator W. E. Culkin has been chosen Chairman of the joint committee of the House and Senate to look into the locating of a Fourth Hospital for Insane. If the committee should decide that Delano is a better place than either of the others for the Hospital, Senator Culkin may have some influence in the selecting of the latter place. Wright county certainly deserves to be recognized, at least enough for the entire committee to visit it before deciding to give it to Anoka or Hastings. If the state has bought a site at Anoka it is not supposed it would pay more for it than it was worth; so could dispose of it without loss and buy one more suitable, and more conveniently located at Delano.

In changing the time of its meetings from Feb. 22 to June 17 the Old Settlers Society did a wise thing. Unless they desire to reduce their numbers, by exposing those who attend to the stormiest and most disagreeable weather of the year there can be no reason for holding meetings in February, when June can be had. The experimment of last summer seems to have been a success and a big crowd of genuine old settlers was present. It is to be hoped now that when meetings occur at a time of year when old settlers can be out that the younger people will attend to listen to the stories of old settlers, and that the genuine old settlers will be given the places on the program. When people go many miles to the Old Settlers meeting they like to return home satisfied that they have actually seen and listened to the genuine article; and not had their time and attention taken up by politicians and political speeches. Let the Old Settlers hold a meeting of there own and let everybody attend.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.
When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?
But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?
And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?
And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?
Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.
At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.
This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.
The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.
That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.
The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.
And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.
Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."
My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.
I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.
I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.
I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.
To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

LONG AGO.

FROM THE METHODIST HERALD.

I once knew all the birds that came
And nested in our orchard trees,
For every flower I had a name—
My friends were woodchucks, toads and bees;
I know what thrived in yonder glen,
What plants would soothe a stonebruised toe—
Oh, I was very learned then—
But that was very long ago.

I knew the spot upon the hill
Where checkerberries could be found—
I knew the rushes near the mill
Where pickerel lay that weighed a pound!
I knew the wood—the very tree
Where lived the poaching saucy crow
And all the woods and crows knew me—
But that was very long ago.

And pining for the joys of youth,
I tread the old familiar spot
Only to learn this solemn truth;
I have forgotten, am forgot.
Yet here's this youngster at my knee
Knows all the things I used to know;
To think I once was as wise as he!—
But that was very long ago.

I know 'tis folly to complain
Of whatsoe'er the fates decree,
Yet, were not wishes all in vain,
I tell you what my wish would be:
I'd wish to be a boy again,
Back with the friends that I used to know,
For I was, oh, a happy then—
But that was very long ago!

—Eugene Field.

THE country will soon learn whether the financial system of the U. S. is to go by the road or the narrow Gauge.

WE hasten to embrace the first opportunity to apoligize to the State of Colorado for making the mistake last week of attributing to it the passing of a law to allow prize fighting. It was Nevada.

FROM present indications Mark Hanna will not succeed John Sherman in the U. S. Senate; and as a retaliatory measure Mr. S. may remain in the Senate to prevent Ohio's Governor from appointing himself or someone else to fill his shoes.

IN Nevada where prize fightnig was recently legalized woman suffrage was voted down, The prize fighters are to pay $1000 to fight. Perhaps had the women offered to pay to vote their bill would have carried. It is the money that is wanted.

OF course Mr. McKinley being a Methodist will not be expected to be present at the inaugural ball. If his admirers have much respect for him they will excuse him from attending. There is no call for a man simply because he has been elected President to depart from the established rules of his life in such a manner.

DISPATCHES from Washington say that the Supreme Court has affirmed the dicission of the Circuit Court in the cases of the United States and the Winona and St. Peter railroad against the Winona and St. Peter Land Co. thereby confirming the titles of bona-fide settlers who have purchesed lands from railroad companies. The Litchfield citizens are then intitled to their homes.

THE rural mail delivery being tried near Farmington is said to be liked by the country people. Merchants think it keeps people away from town, and their sales are lighter. People generally need about so much to eat and wear, and in course of time are bound to buy it. As for drinking a great many men would be far better off if they staid to home closer, when they come to town they get something to drink; the more they get the more they want; they forget to go home when they should, and consequently they spend money they should have for their own fun, while the family suffers and the merchant sells less goods.

COMPLAINTS are long, loud and numerous about the inequality of charges for freight on railroads through the state. The St. Peter Herald says: "The business men of St. Peter ought to arise in their wrath and find out whether Minnesota has a railroad commission or not. The fact that St. Peter has to pay freight rates from Chicago which are double those from Chicago to Mankato is cause enough for the righteous indignation." The Herald says, Evenson Bros. of St. Peter had a carload of nails and wire shipped to Mankato, only twelve miles away at a saving of $27. They hired drays to bring them to St. Peter and saved money. This is discrimination with a vengeance. Where is the R. R. Commission?

The Swift County Monitor complains of rates on coal at Benson. Coal should be hauled as reasonable as possible and the rates regulated along the line or as evenly as can be done. In cold weather in this country no advantage should be taken of poor people out of coal.

Union of Churches.

At St. Cloud a movement is on foot to consolidate the congregations of Baptists, Congregational, Presbyterian Methedists and Unitarian churches. A committee has the matter in hand. The creed proposed is "We believe in the Fatherhead of God, the brotherhood of man, and in the life, teachings and character of Jesus Christ". To most people it looks as if all are traveling the road to heaven and should not object to traveling in company. In many of the smaller towns and communities where two or three or half a dozen churches are strugeling for an existance it looks as if they could unite a more powerful influence for good could be exerted.

In other affairs combination seems to be the fashion great trusts are formed to carry on business in the different phases. Political parties form unions to accomplish their ends. Managers of corporations form associations, their employers join unions. If religious people come to see that there is but one way to heaven and they all conclude to travel it, is it out of fashion? Isn't it but keeping up with the times? "He that is not for me is against me."

Congressman Towne Heard From.

The House committee on Coinage has been having a lively time lately over the Senate bill for an international monetary conferance. Fears are intertained that the bill is to be talked to death, and the free silver people who favor passing the bill, are already accusing the republicans with trifling with the people and with trying to get out of keeping their promises in the matter.

Reports are that Mr. Towne asked Mr Fowler, of New Jersey, of the banking committee, did not beleave that the republican party had made a pledge to the American people to use its best efforts to secure international bimetallism. To this Mr. Fowler replied that he did not know what bimetallism ment. Mr. Towne asked that as the word bimetalism did not appear in the platform, if it pledged the party to secure international free coinage of silver.

There was much parrying on this point, Mr. Fowler declaring that bimetallism was an absurdity, and Mr. Fowler declaring that bimetallism was an absurdity, and Mr. Towne declaring that if the people through the party did not intend to carry out the platform pledge, they would sweep the party off the earth for such "infamous deciet."

The committee concluded to take a vote on the bill tomorrow, Saturday.

Ought to be Settled.

Brainerd is having a big time over the case of an unfortunate man named Jacob Manbyla, who while working on the N. P. Ry. received an injury, breaking this back and paralyzing his lower limbs. The injury was received in Montana and about a year and a half ago the crippled man was brought from Miles City by the Railroad company to their Sanitarium at Brainerd for treatment. His case turns out to be incurable and the Brainerd Journal claims the Railroad is trying to shift the responsibility of his keeping longer to the county of Crow Wing. The county officials refuse to take him and the man is turned out to the mercies of charity. Attorney General Childs has rendered a decision that the county is not responsible for the man's keeping. The question appears to be between the County and the Sanitarium; to established a precedent for future use. If the railroad is allowed to bring its cripples there and turn them over to the county to take care of, it may not be long until they have more than they can care for. At the same time it looks cruel to turn the man out this cold weather to shift for himself. It seems the Railroad shipped him first, by paving a weeks board with a man in East Brainerd, when this was out the man was taken to the Court House, but the county didn't propose to establish that mode of doing business and refused to accept him.

This is an important question though it seams to us to have but one side; that people cannot be hauled into a place for treatment and a residence claimed and become a public charge. If that plan were followed out every patient from the country in a city hospital would expect to remain free; after they had been there ten days or long enough to become a voter in the county.

Rev. A. H. Kerr was the Chaplain of the 9th Regiment, Minn., Vol. Inf. He was an old settler at St. Peter where he was pastor of the Presbyterian Church for years. He was a man well known and respected by all For many years he was our nearest neighbor, and we always found him a good man.

Grand Jury Needed.

And now there are a lot of ignorant men and a good many knaves that wish to do away with the grand jury system. Nothing would more tend to the final destruction of personal liberty and the enthronement of wrong and oppression than the abolition of the grand jury system. It is the palladium of our liberties; the protection of the weak against the oppressions of the strong; the friend of the masses and the foe of wealth-power and corporate oppression. The struggle of the English people against the power and oppressions of the rich (so-called) nobility, which resulted in the establishment of the grand jury and trial jury systems should be read by every lover of equal rights before he favors the abolition of juries.—Waseca Herald.

Womens Rights.

At Richmond, Ind. the young ladies of the town have organized a club for the purpose of promoting the welfare and happiness of its members. This club will take up music, drawing, painting, cooking, sewing and all the accomplishments so neccessary to essential home comfort. Each member to instruct the others in whatever they lack. For instance, if some of the members are deficient in music, another teaches her, and so on through the entire course. It is a splendid thing to think of and its usefulness is beyond description. This does not bar anyone from membership. A working girl can belong as well as any other element. The highest object of this club is charity and union among its members. No one need fear a slight or snub, as any violation of that kind will be properly punished by ejection. How delightful it would be for each town to have a club of this kind, so as to strengthen the churches, the work of women, and bring out the real meaning of union and charity.—St. Peter Journal.

Farmer, His Wife and Two Sons Meet Death in a Potato Hole.

North Branch, Minn., Feb. 10.—Mr. and Mrs. John Bonniman and two grown sons, living near here, were suffocated in a potato hole. The hole was a well constructed affair, and furnished with a trap door. Bonniman had built a fire in the hole to keep out the frost, and the next morning he, with his oldest son went to straighten up the place. Together they lifted the heavy trap door, and the father, a stawlart man of nearly fifty years of age, let himself down into the pit. No sooner had he done so than he dropped dead, or at least unconsious. The young man gave a cry, and went to the rescue of his farther. He, too, became instantly a corpse, but his scream brought his brother, a boy of eighteen, from the barn, and a moment later his mother came running from the house, followed by the youngest son, a lad of fourteen years. The second son arrived first and dropped into the the death trap, thinking to help his father and brother, but the dreadful fire damp had done its work on him, too, when the mother arrived. In her terror, she, too, jumped into the pit, she was immediatly overpowered by the gasses, which were not now so strong, and left her just strength to tell her remaining son not to come into the cellar, but to get help. When help arrived all were dead.—Pioneer Press.

Litchfield Independent: The papers announce that a 30 cent tariff on barley and 25 cents on wheat is slated for adoption by congress as soon as the extra session can get arorund to the passage of a tariff bill. High duties on grain will do the farmers a heap of good. If McKinley's cangress wants to protect the farmer let it provide a 15 cent bounty on wheat. Even at this figure he would have as much protection as is proposed to give the manufacturers.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12, 1897.

The country is indebted to the democrats in Congress for their promptness in frightening the republicans from carrying out a scheme which might have upset the country and made no end of trouble had it once been started This scheme was the contemplated objection to the counting of the vote of S. C., when Congress assembled in joint convention to count the electoral votes, by the negro member of the House from that state. Just as soon as the intention to make this objection was known, the democrats in Congress informed the republicans that if the objection was made and sustained by either branch of Congress they might as well abandon all idea of inaugurating McKinley, and that the count of the electoral votes would not be allowed to proceed As soon as the republican leaders ascertained that the democrats were in dead earnest they repudiated the scheme, and put all the responsibility upon that "fool-nigger", who was made to announce that he had changed his mind about objecting to the counting of the vote of S. C. Congress had counted the votes all right and there was no trouble, but had not the democrats been prompt in showing their resentment the vote of S. C. would have been protested and thrown out—not to help McKinley, but as the first step towards turning the state over to negroes and others who thrived under the notorious Chamberlain-Moses regime.

Senator Hill and Turple were the only Senators present who did not take part in the joint session to count the electoral vote. When the Senate, headed by Vice-President Stevenson, marched over to the House chamber these two gentelmen remained at their desks writing letters. They escaped a very dull three-quarters of an hour thereby.

The latest es-timate is that the number of gold democratic postmasters whose nominations will be left unacted upon by the Senate will exceed 200. Some of these were recess appointments and are now filling the offices to which they were nominated, but they will have to step out as soon as McKinley nominates their successors and the senate confirms them, and the silver Senators will do their part towards preventing delay in such cases.

The Governor of Arkansas evidently looses no oportunity to let the world know where that state stands on the financial question. The Credentials of Senator Jones for his new term beginning March 4th, this week presented to the Senate, have the name of the State conspiciously printed across the top in silver letters and the great seal of the state is also silver. And Senator Jones is proud of his connection with a state which is so thoroughly devoted to silver, just as the state has shown its pride in keeping such a champion in the Senate.

An unexpected opposition to the monetary conference bill has sprung up in the House, under the leadership of Representatives Hill, of Conn., and Brewster, of N. Y., both of whom are uncompromising republicans, and supporters of the single gold standard idea and both of whom have publicly stated their belief that the bill is the result of a scheme concocted by Senator Chandler and other anti McKinley republicans to get McKinley in trouble. Whether the opposition prove sserious will depend altogether upon whether Speker Reed wishes the bill to pass, and the indications that he does.

Secretary Herbert's idea of fixing the limit of the price to be paid by the government for armor plate at $400 a ton has been adopted by the Senate Naval Committee, and a clause to that effect will be added to the Naval Appropriation bill by the Senate It is probable also—the committee has recommended it—that the Secretary of the Navy will be authorized to call any bluff that Carnegie and the Bethlehem Steel Co. may attempt to put up by refusing to make a contract to furnish the armor plate at the price named, by establishing a governmant plant for the making of armor plate.

President Cleveland ought to be getting used to having his vetoes overruled by Congress by this time. The bill making changes in the Eastern Judicial district of Texas, which had the support of the entire Texas delegation in Congress, is now a law notwithstanding a veto, and the House this week passed two private pension bills over vetoes. It is not suprising that Mr. Cleveland should have remarked that he had no influence with Congress.

A delegation of Michigan lumbermen who think their interests will best be "protected" by not increasing the duty on white pine lumber are in Washington to protest against the increase which the republicans of the Ways and Means Committee have decided to make. These gentlemen do not hesitate to state their reasons for opposing an increase of duty on white pine lumber. They own extensive stumping privileges in Canada and fear that if the duty is increased that, in addition to their having to pay the duty, the Canadians may as a retaliation for the increase of duty impose a crown tax on stumpage privileges. Another proof that the whole principle of "protection" is based upon individual self-interest without regard to general good.

Edison's latest discovery, by which he can illuminate the interior of man, will be apt to throw "that tired feeling" into a panic.

According to the secretary of war Uncle Sam has now at his call 1,115,637 men, and there are 10,139,184 men able for military service.

The hope of the nation is in education, more than in its wealth and numbers. During 1896 $16,600,000 was given to various American colleges.

American bicycles are finding their way even into Arabia. When the Arab accepts a substitute for his barb the old traditions are getting shaky.

A bill requiring saloon doors to be inscribed "dangerous" received a majority in the Minnesota senate, but not the two-thirds required to make it a law.

An Ohio man puts up the pitiful plea that both he and a son are under the influence of a pretty girl of 19. They are not the only men who are in the same trouble.

Among the contributions for the poor recently received in an Ohio town were two pairs of skates, one pie, and 23 invisible hairpins, all from the same kind-hearted individual.

A citizen of the United States has secured the contract for the construction of $3,000,000 worth of sewers in the City of Mexico. It takes a Yankee to find out the good things.

Only six of the 45 states of the union indulge in the extravagance of annual sessions of the legislature, to wit: Georgia, Massachusetts, New York, Rhode Island and South Carolina, all belonging to the original 13.

A late estimate of the famine in India is that it will involve as large a population as that of the United States before running its course. The $5,000,000 raised in England will only make a beginning in the work of relief.

Germany also is slow with census returns, having just announced that the enumeration at the close of 1895 foots up 52,279,901, or 2,851,431 more than in 1890. As the empire receives few immigrants, the increase in population of one per cent. a year is exceptionally large.

The efficiency of the postal service, not only in the United States but of the whole world, was exemplified recently in a funny way. A gentleman living in New York addressed a letter to "Mark Twain, God Knows Where," and the epistle was in due time delivered to the famous humorist at his lodgings in London.

Remarkable reports are current about a new kind of steel invented by Samuel Maxim at his experimental laboratory at Wayne, Me. The inventor believes it to be identical with the ancient steel of India, which is alleged to have been far superior to any steel known to metallurgists in modern times. It is said that a small blade made from the Maxim steel possesses the power of cutting glass with as much ease as if it were chalk.

According to the records of the Railroad Gazette, of the 95 train accidents which occurred during the month of December 60 were due to derailments. The winter season is always one of danger on the railroads, for it is then that rails break and tracks spread. No amount of care and prudence will succeed in entirely avoiding these dangers, and the only hope lies in improved construction. The inventor who places upon the market a rail which frost will not affect will be one of the greatest of public benefactors.

A token of world-wide esteem should be presented to the man who it is alleged has invented a device for opening soft-boiled eggs in such a way that the contents can be transferred to a cup without burning the fingers and dropping the shell with its contents. A soft-boiled egg is always too hot to handle without breaking several Scriptural mandates, and it insists on escaping from the fingers at the critical moment when its fall means a liberal application of the egg on the outside of the shell. The only way known to open one of these eggs successfully has been to have some one else do it.

At a recent civil service examination for a $1,500 clerkship in the war department the only one that passed successfully was a woman, Miss Maud Stalker, of Washington. The examination required that the applicant should be able to translate into English military works in French, German, Italian and Spanish; to do typewriting in all these languages; to prepare manuscript for the press; to be familiar with library methods, cataloguing, indexing, etc.; also to be tested in the use of the English language and literary composition. She passed the examination with honor, and yet was refused the appointment.

Thomas A. Edison is to startle the world with another wonderful discovery. Not content with giving to mortals the incandescent lamp, the graphophone, the kinetoscope and the fluoroscope, he now proposes to make the human body transparent. In a word, it will be possible literally to "see through a man." Heretofore post-mortem examination has been necessary in order to understand the make-up of some people. If Mr. Edison's expectations are realized, however, the same result can be reached by an ante-mortem diagnosis, and the secrets of the human "prison house" disclosed before death.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

The Proceedings of the Second Session.

The United States senate spent the greater part of the day on the 11th in executive session debating the Anglo-American arbitration treaty. The diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was passed and Wednesday, February 17, at four p. m., was fixed as the time for a final vote on the immigration conference report. The house passed the fortifications appropriation bill and made some headway with the post office appropriation bill, but the major portion of the day was consumed in a political debate on the financial question.

In the United States senate on the 12th the Anglo-American arbitration treaty was further discussed, and a resolution was adopted requesting Secretary Olney to use every effort toward bettering the condition of Sylvester Scovel, the newspaper correspondent imprisoned in Cuba. In the house the post office appropriation bill ($96,435,714) was passed and the sundry civil appropriation bill was taken up and its first reading begun.

The time was occupied in the United States senate on the 13th in discussing the arbitration treaty in executive session. In the house resolutions were introduced for information concerning insults to American ladies by Spaniards on board the United States mail steamer Olivette in the harbor of Havana, and concerning the electoral vote in South Carolina. AN ACT OF WAR.

Greece Lands Troops on the Island of Crete.

Immediate Surrender of the Turks Demanded—Attitude Assumed by the Great Powers in the Emergency.

London, Feb. 16.—Foreign soldiers are now in control in Crete. In one town a Greek army corps is in possession. In Canea forces from the war ships are guarding the excited city. Heraklion and Retimo are also occupied by naval soldiers of the signatory powers. The clash between the Athens government and the other European nations has come in a startling manner and no one knows what the outcome will be.

Occupation of Canea.

Amid the crash of cannon and the rattle of musketry the forces of the fleets Monday afternoon occupied Canea. The fighting between the Turks and the Christians was going on in a desultory fashion when the imperative orders to land troops came to the various admirals, and in a short time blue-jackets in the various uniforms of their nations, with glittering carbines shouldered, were marching jauntily in the direction of the several consulates. Thus the Turk has won the first point in the game of war with Greece, and the powers have shown that they do not consider the time opportune to abet plans that may lead to a general war over a partition of the sultan's domain.

An Act of Open War.

But if the powers have acted promptly in the pressing emergency, Greece has been as sensationally prompt in forcing them to show their hands. Only Monday afternoon a Greek army corps was landed at Platania, a town near

GREECE AND CRETE.
[Map showing relations of Crete to Greece and Turkey.]

Canea. This defiance to the sultan and to Europe is fraught with grim possibilities.

Still more exasperating is the act of the commanders of the invaders, Col. Vassos, who, upon planting the Greek colors upon the Turkish soil of Crete, at once issued a proclamation praising the patriotism of the Cretans and sternly demanding the immediate surrender of all the Turks in the neighborhood.

Canea Wildly Excited.

The news of this daring exploit, when it reached Canea, caused the wildest excitement there. The Christians, who glowered and sulked at the appearance of the marines of the powers, feeling that their presence in the town meant only a continuance of the detested Moslem rule, shrieked and shouted their joy over the landing of the Greeks. Headgear and other wearing apparel were enthusiastically thrown into the air, hands were shaken, embraces exchanged.

Authorized by the King.

Greece has shown her hand in a manner that admits of no scintilla of doubt. She wants war with Turkey; she desires union with Crete. The man who Monday afternoon issued the startling proclamation to the Christians and Turks at Platania is an aid-de-camp to King George. He went fully authorized by his king to engage in a breach of the peace of nations, and how well he has performed his mission can be understood when it is known that his wild exploit is being discussed in the cabinets of Europe. The fact is that Greece has secured, in defiance of Europe, an armed foothold in Crete.

Replying to the collective note of the powers, the Grecian government has declared that its intervention in affairs in Crete is justified by the massacres there, and that it is not due to a desire to disturb the island. The Greek government announces that it is determined to continue to dispatch troops for the purpose of restoring order. The reserves of 1872-3 have been called upon in order to join their colors within 48 hours.

A MINE HORROR.

Pillar in a Shaft at Talcville, N. Y., Collapses.

Gouveneur, N. Y., Feb. 15.—A terrible accident occurred late Saturday afternoon in the Freeman mine at Talcville, leased by the United States Talc company. Eight men were in a new section of the mine, 160 feet underground. A blast had been fired, and the men were engaged in scaling off the loose pieces. A pillar of talc 30 feet square had been left standing on a support to the roof of the shaft. Six of the men were working under this. Without a warning of any kind the huge mass, comprising about 600 tons of rock, slipped from its position and collapsed, burying the workmen. Five of the men were jammed against the wall and terribly crushed. The sixth, William Dawley, was thrown up in some manner, and but three pieces of the rock lay on him. He lived until 1:30 Sunday afternoon. W. R. Jones, treasurer and manager of the company, personally superintended the search and remained at his post for 20 hours. The company carried an insurance on their men for a small amount. The mine was inspected two weeks ago.

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY.

The Anniversary Appropriately Celebrated in Various Places.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Abraham Lincoln would have been 88 years old had he lived till Friday, and Chicago took the occasion for a holiday. All over the city companies of men and women and of children met with the single purpose of paying homage to Abraham Lincoln. The banks were closed. The exchanges were silent. Schools varied their exercises and sang his praises. Eminent citizens met at banquets and made him their theme.

The memory of Abraham Lincoln was honored at night by the Marquette club at its banquet in the Auditorium hotel. Over 500 guests sat down to the tables. The occasion was notable because of the presence of the governors of Michigan, Rhode Island, Iowa, West Virginia and Indiana. Gov. Tanner, of Illinois, was unable to be present, and was represented by Lieut. Gov. Northcote. Gov. Hastings was expected to be present and speak for Pennsylvania to the toast: "The Duties of Citizenship," but on account of the destruction of the state house he was compelled to send his regrets. This was the quadrennial entertainment of republican governors of the United States. President De Witt, of the Marquette club, presided at Friday night's banquet. The toasts and speakers were as follows:

"Welcome to Illinois," Lieut. Gov. Northcote; "Welcome to Chicago," Mayor George B. Swift; "Abraham Lincoln," A. J. Beveridge, of Indiana; "The Grand Old Party," Gov. Lippitt, of Rhode Island; "Iowa—They Said She Was Doubtful," Gov. F. M. Drake, of Iowa; "The New Old Dominion," Gov. Atkinson, of West Virginia; "The Farmer In Politics," Gov. Mount, of Indiana; "Illinois," William E. Mason, senator-elect; "Municipal Reform," Gov. Hazen S. Pingree, of Michigan; "The Great Northwest," F. A. Briggs, of North Dakota.

New York, Feb. 13.—Over all the public buildings, schools and hundreds of houses in the city Friday the stars and stripes floated in honor of Lincoln. Most of the stores were closed, and business was almost entirely suspended, and the snow came to add to the general holiday air. The republican club gave a dinner at the Waldorf Friday night.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 13.—Friday being the anniversary of the birth of Lincoln, the banks of the city and the state department were closed. Appropriate exercises were held at the public schools and the sarcophagus at the tomb of the great emancipator was decorated with flowers sent in by citizens.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 13.—Lincoln's birthday was commemorated in this city by a banquet given at the West hotel by the Minnesota commandery, order of the Loyal Legion. There were 300 guests in attendance. The principal addresses were delivered by Gen. John C. Black, of Chicago, commander of the Illinois commandery, on "Abraham Lincoln," and by Archbishop John Ireland.

DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE.

Effect of the Steel War—Prices Still Tend Downward.

New York, Feb. 13.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"No other event of the week approaches in importance the disruption of the steel rail pool. In two days after a greater tonnage of rails was probably purchased than the entire production last year, reported at 800,000 tons, and instead of $28 in December and $25 in January, $17 is now the price at which works east and west are seeking orders, the Carnegie company even selling at $17, Chicago delivery. The sales will employ many thousand hands, with an important increase in the cost of track laying or renewals of railroads. In the near future, also, is the struggle between the two great companies producing Mesaba iron ore, one allied with the Illinois Steel and the other with the Carnegie company, which is expected to bring about lower prices for ore, and to push many mines to their utmost capacity. But in the war of rival interests wages are already reduced by some large concerns.

"Another event of influence is the purchase of 750,000 pieces of print cloths by M. C. D. Borden at 2.56 cents, which has already caused an advance to 2.69 cents, with a stronger tone for prints and other cotton goods. As the contract to shut down part time many mills producing print cloths is going into effect, the productive capacity and wages of operatives will be for a time reduced, but if a demand of traders to replenish their stocks is started, the effect may be altogther beneficial. Speculation in products has hardly been more active than of late, and prices generally tend downward.

"Wheat rose a cent Tuesday, but has since declined 2.37 cents. The money market continues easy, with money accumulating here rapidly. Rates are not materially changed, but commercial offerings are unusually light. Failures for the past week have been 267 in the United States, against 321 last year, and 61 in Canada, against 67 last year."

Spain Opens Cuba to Miss Barton.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Knowing from authentic sources of the destitution existing in Cuba, the American National Red Cross offered its services as an organization. Some international flaw presenting itself, Miss Barton immediately offered herself and her officers for individual service in Cuba, provided Spain acceded, and the American people desired to place their contributions of money or materials in the hands of Miss Barton and her officers. She has received from Minister De Lome a letter in which she is informed that the king of Spain accepts her benevolent offer.

ST. JOHN DEAD.

New York Banker and Politician Expires Suddenly.

New York, Jan. 16.—William P. St. John, the former president of the Mercantile national bank and one of the principal champions in the east of the cause of free silver, died at eight o'clock at his residence here of a complication of kidney and stomach troubles.

[Mr. St. John was born at Mobile, Ala., February 19, 1849. He began his schooling in that city, continuing it in Germany and England and finally in Massachusetts, but never went to college. New York first claimed him as a resident in 1867. Here he was employed in six different businesses before he turned his attention to banking, the last being that of credit clerk for Havemeyer & Elder, the sugar refiners. He was also a democrat, but the foundation of his views on silver was laid in 1884, when he was elected a member of the financial committee of the chamber of commerce. At the instance of the chairman of that committee he began a study of the silver question with the purpose of collating the facts of history upon the subject, intending and expecting to use them to refute the advocates of silver money. At the end of five years' research he declared, in a minority report to the committee, that he had become a silverite. As in the case with nearly all the advocates of free silver coinage, the real basis of his faith was a belief in the redeemable flat dollar. His views were for years a cause of great discomfort to the directors of the bank, all of whom, like all the bank presidents in the city, were firm believers in sound money on a gold basis. This dissatisfaction came to a head last year when the directors of the Mercantile bank accepted Mr. St. John's resignation on learning that he intended going to the Chicago convention as an advocate of free silver coinage.]

GEN. JOSEPH O. SHELBY.

A Famous Character of the Rebellion Passes Away.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 15.—Gen. J. O. Shelby died at his country home, eight miles from Adrian, Mo., at four o'clock Saturday morning.

[Gen. "Jo" Shelby was one of the picturesque characters of the great rebellion. He went from Lexington, Ky., the place of his birth, to Missouri, acquired a plantation, became a slave owner, and naturally sided with the south. He organized a company of cavalry in Missouri and marched to join Price. Price recognized in him an able leader, sent him back to Missouri to recruit a regiment and be made a colonel. He fulfilled the mission, and uniting his regiment with three others, he took command of "Shelby's brigade." After the war Gen. Shelby induced his men to go with him to Mexico and join the forces of Maximilian. On the arrival of Shelby and his troops in Mexico, he offered himself to the emperor, and suggested that an army of 40,000 men be raised. Maximilian did not like the suggestion, and, being suspicious of Shelby and his motives, rejected his tender. Gen. Shelby returned to Missouri in 1867, and lived on his farm until 1893, when he was made United States marshal by President Cleveland. He was 66 years old.]

A Naval Hero Gone.

New York, Feb. 12.—Capt. Philo Norton McGiffin, the young American naval officer who won distinction at the battle of the Yalu, in the Chinese-Japanese war, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head at the Post-Graduate hospital at an early hour in the morning.

Capt. McGiffin was formerly an officer of the United States navy, and subsequently of the Chinese navy. He was in command of the flagship Chen Yuen at the memorable battle of the Yalu river on the afternoon of September 17, 1894. In that engagement he fought his vessel with great skill and daring against the Japanese ships. The terrific strain to which he was subjected during the fight was attributed as the cause of his mental break down. In the battle both of his ear drums were ruptured, his eyes permanently affected, and his head and body filled with splinters of woodwork and steel. He was only 34 years of age and a graduate of Annapolis.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The opinion of the supreme court sustaining the finding of the United States district court of the Northern district of Illinois in the case of Editor Joseph R. Dunlop, of Chicago, convicted of sending obscene matter through the mails, was read by Associate Justice Brown. There was no dissenting opinion. The penalty imposed by Judge Grosscup was for two years' imprisonment and a fine of $2,000.

THE WINTER BATH.

Care Should Be Taken to Have the Temperature Right.

A great many people who are careful enough about the bath in summer become less regular as the cold weather approaches. Mothers often omit the daily bathing of infant children in cold weather, under the mistaken impression that they are in special danger of taking cold on such occasion. Physicians generally agree that the daily bath is a tonic and one that is necessary to an infant of feeble growth. There is more danger of taking cold in winter than in summer, because the changes of temperature between the house and outer air are so much greater. If we could keep our houses properly aired in winter, as well as properly heated, it is not likely that we would suffer so much from colds. It is because the system is weakened by close, vitiated air that we are unable to resist the shock of the change when we go outdoors. The daily bath is a power to help us resist cold. It is not necessary to perfect cleanliness — a sponge bath answers—but the daily plunge gives health and strength, even to a feeble person, if it is taken at the proper temperature. Only a strong man or woman can take a cold bath daily. Such a bath as an athlete may enjoy in icy cold water might cost a delicate woman her life. There should be an end of the absurd advice, so frequently given to all persons without discrimination, in favor of cold baths. Where a person suffers weakness of the heart or an enfeebled system a cold bath is a dangerous experiment. Such a bath should always be taken in the morning, and followed by vigorous exercise.

The tepid or warm bath, taken at night before retiring, is best adapted to the majority of people. It should be at from 90 to 95 degrees in temperature. The best authorities say that five minutes is long enough to remain in the bath. A cupful of rock salt dissolved in a bathtub of water is a wholesome addition. The bath may be perfumed with a bag of lavender flowers, or of orris root, or by adding a teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin. The proper temperature for an infant's bath is 95 degrees Fahrenheit.—N. Y. Tribune.

Cleaning Marble.

It is often the case that handsome marble becomes almost hopelessly soiled and stained and there is a demand for a simple and practical recipe for restoring it. The following from an excellent authority is highly commended: Take equal parts of ox gall, powdered soap and pipe clay and add a little turpentine. Apply a coating to the marble, and when thoroughly dry rub it off and wash with warm soft water. This will cleause without destroying the polish. If the marble is badly stained a second application may be necessary.—N. Y. Ledger.

A LETTER TO WOMEN

From Mrs. James Corrigan.

For seventeen years I have suffered. Periods were so very painful that I would have to go to the doctor every month.

He said that I had an enlargement of the womb, and told my husband that I must undergo an operation, as I had tumors in the womb, and it was a case of life or death.

I was operated upon twice, but it did not seem to do me any good, it made me very weak. I was troubled with the leucorrhœa a great deal.

I also suffered with the sick headache, vomiting spells, backache all the time, terrible pain in my left side, chills, loss of appetite, and could not sleep nights. After taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, some Liver Pills, and using your Sanative Wash, I recovered.

I can eat well, and every one that sees me tells me I am a different person. I can do all my own work, sleep well and feel well. I am growing stronger every day, and am able to go out and enjoy a walk and not feel all tired out when I return, as I used to. I doctored for sixteen years, and in all those years I did not feel as well as I do at the present time. I wish that every woman that is troubled as I was, would try that medicine. Oh! it is so good to feel well, and it is all owing to Mrs. Pinkham's kind advice and medicine. —Mrs. James Corrigan, 284 Center St., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

LEASE, Dan'pa, will 'oo tell me," asked a small, but thoughtful youth, "Why is a little hatchet called a symbol of the truth?"

"Why, don't you know?" said Grandpa. Little Bobby shook his head;
"I tooly don't," he answered. "Then you ought to," Grandpa said.

"All ready," he continued, taking Bobby on his knee,
"It's going to be a story, and you're wide awake, I see.
Once on a time a little boy of just about your lift
Received a little hatchet from his father for a gift—"

"Oh, what a funny present," thoughtful Bobby cried. "Suppose
That boy had chopped his fingers off and bloodied all his clothes;
I dess his foolish papa then would cry a lot. I say!
Why didn't that boy's mamma take the hatchet right away?"

"Perhaps she didn't know it," Grandpa laughed; "at any rate
Next morning bright and early rose that little boy elate
To try his little hatchet; in his father's garden he Displayed his skill by cutting down a favorite cherry tree."

"A cherry tree?" cried Bobby. "Weren't any woods around?
Why, cherries are the goodest things to eat I ever found;
I dess that little fellow wasn't smart a bit, like me—
Say, Dan'pa! Do you fink I'd kill a lovely cherry tree?"

"Of course you wouldn't, Bobby; you're too fond of things to eat;
But, just for fun, suppose you did, and then had chanced to meet
Your father in the garden, and he sternly asked you who Cut down his favorite cherry tree. Now, tell me what you'd do."

"Well, Dan'pa! let me fink. If I cut down his cherry tree
And papa came and caught me with the hatchet, wouldn't he Know certain sure I did it? If I told a story, why
He'd whip me twice as hard, you know, for telling him a lie.

"But if I looked real sorry and I didn't skip, and said:
'Dear pop! forgive poor Bobby, who cut down your tree;' instead
Of getting any whipping wouldn't papa say: 'My son!
Because you didn't tell a lie, no whipping will be done?'"

"Ahem!" said Grandpa, startled by the wisdom of the tot,
"That's just the thing that happened in the story. Now you trot
Away to bed, and say your prayers before you close your eyes,
And dream about the whippings bad boys get for telling lies."
—H. C. Dodge, in Detroit Free Press.

WINTER evening in the year of our Lord 1809, at my grandfather's house on the Muskingum river, the major told this story:

"It happened this way," he began. "I was sent to Washington on a foraging expedition. It was before the battle of Yorktown." The major's eagle eye scanned the faces of his attentive listeners.

Every one of the company had been officers in Gen. Washington's army. Together they had fought in every battle from Bunker Hill to the capture of Cornwallis at Yorktown. I can see them now—strong of feature, brave of bearing, their snow-white cues falling on velvet collars, white ruffles at their wrists, knee breeches, leggings, and the quaint buckle shoes of colonial times.

There was bluff old Rufus Putnam, whose engineering skill on Dorchester Heights enabled Washington to drive the British from Boston; brave little Commodore Whipple, who gave birth to the American navy by offering the first defiance to England on the sea, and the commanding figure of Robert Oliver, who erected the first saw and grist mill in Ohio, together with Jonathan Devol, one of the first ship builders in the western country.

But how did all these famous warriors find their way to the beautiful Ohio valley, you may ask? Peace restored, their country had no more use for fighting soldiers, war had robbed them of their fortunes. But they were undaunted, and together they boarded the Mayflower—a floating barge—and made their way into the Ohio valley. There they laid out farms at Beepre, Waterford and Amestown, the earliest settlement in the vicinity of Marietta. At eventide they were wont to float down the calm bosom of the river, and at the peril of the lurking red man's tomahawk, moor their skiffs at my grandfather's door. Once in the glow of the pine knots heaped high on the open hearth, these scarred veterans revived in story their country's struggle for independence.

Striking, even in this distinguished gathering, was the major. He was a lineal descendant of Gov. Bradford, of colonial Massachusetts. He stood high in Washington's esteem, and shared the friendship of Lafayette. He never failed to hold his audience, and he had it now.

"We were reconnoitering in Westmoreland county, Va," he continued. "I chanced upon a fine team of horses hitched to a plow; they were driven by a burly slave. Finer animals I have never seen. When my eyes had feasted on their beauty, I cried to the driver: 'Hello! good fellow, I must have your horses. They are the very animals I have been looking for.' The black man showed his teeth and rolled up the whites of his eyes while he put the lash to the horses' flanks and turned up another furrow of rich soil. I waited until he had finished the row, then I threw back my cavalier cloak.

"The ensign of my rank was not lost upon the slave.

" 'Better see missis, better see missis,' he cried, waving his hand to the south, where beyond cedar growth rose the towers of a fine old Virginia mansion. I turned up the carriage road, and soon my hand was on the brass knocker. Instantly the door was swung back on its ponderous hinges and the majestic form of a woman filled the empty space.

" 'Madam,' said I, dropping my hat, and visibly overcome by her dignity, 'I have come to claim your horses in the name of the government.'

" 'My horses?' She bent upon me eyes born to command. 'Sir, you cannot have them; my crops are out and I need the horses in the field.'

" 'I am sorry,' said I, 'but such are the orders of my chief.'

" 'Your chief—who is your chief?' she demanded, with restrained warmth.

" 'The commander in chief of the American army—Gen. George Washington.' It was now my turn to be grandiose. I squared my shoulders while a smile of triumph softened the sternness of her handsome face. 'Tell George Washington,' said she, 'that his mother said he could not have her horses.'

"Humbled to the dust," laughed the major, "I turned away convinced that I had discovered the source of my chief's decision and self command."

"Did you report to Washington?" asked a hero of Brandywine.

"Yes," said the major.

"What did he say?"

"With one of his rare smiles the Father of His Country reverently bowed his head."—Lida Rose McCabe, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

"TELL GEORGE WASHINGTON THAT HIS MOTHER SAID HE COULD NOT HAVE HER HORSES."

A PRACTICAL STATESMAN.

George Washington as a Model Man of Business, Order and Law—Truthful, Just, Humane.

Washington was eminently a practical statesman. His mind was of the solid, practical order. In the Old South church in Boston I have seen, in his own bold and clear handwriting, the expense accounts which he kept in the revolution, down to the shillings and the pence. He was no theorist, the author of no new idea or system in government. He left to Jefferson to enunciate the great ideas of liberty in the Declaration of Independence and to Hamilton to inaugurate our great system of finance. But when it came to practical administration and executive duty he was a model of business, of order and law. Here his great rule and guide was the conscientious performance of public duty. Naturally conservative in his ideas, the supremacy and authority of law and government were ever uppermost in his mind and purpose. When in his second term that whisky insurrection broke out in Pennsylvania and the misguided malcontents, after fair warning by his proclamation, continued to resist the collection of the tax and to resort to mob law and violence, he promptly called out 15,000 militia from the neighboring states and repaired to the scene of action, ready to take command and crush the incipient rebellion with a strong hand. But this show of power and purpose, with Washington behind it, was enough, and the lawless elements retired abashed, as they always will, when confronted by a leader who dares to shoot and to kill.

But Washington not only recognized his obligation to the people and to the law, but he was ever mindful of the still higher obligation to the principles of justice and humanity. To be truthful, to be just, to be humane—these were the bright jewels in his crown of character. It is a fact most interesting and impressive now to recall, after all our great troubles and conflict over the slavery question, that he left his solemn testimony against that institution in words which ought to have been heeded by his countrymen. As early as 1786, just after the revolution, he wrote: "There is no man living who wishes more sincerely than I do to see a plan adopted for the abolition of slavery. But there is but one proper and effectual mode by which it can be accomplished and that is by legislative authority, and this, so far as my suffrage will go, will never be wanting."

And these noble words he put into practical effect by the emancipation of his own slaves by will, humanely providing for the support of the aged and infirm among them, and giving the most explicit and peremptory directions that those too young to support themselves should "be taught to read and write and brought up to some useful occupation"—and this to be a charge upon his estate.—Hon. Charles S. May, in Detroit Free Press.

WASHINGTON'S BOYHOOD.

Something of His Early Training, His Acquirements and His Love of Mastery.

A boy who was much at Mount Vernon and at Mr. Fairfax's seat, Belvoir, might expect to see not a little that was worth seeing of the life of the colony. George was kept at school until he was close upon 16; but there was ample vacation time for visiting. Mrs. Washington did not keep him at her apron strings. He even lived, when it was necessary, with his brother Augustine, at the old home on Bridges creek, in order to be near the best school that was accessible, while the mother was far away on the farm that lay upon the Rappahannock. Mrs. Washington saw to it, nevertheless, that she should not lose sight of him altogether. When he was 14 it was proposed that he should be sent to sea, as so many lads were, no doubt, from that maritime province; but the prudent mother preferred he should not leave Virginia, and the schooling went on as before — the schooling of books and manly sports. Every lad learned to ride—to ride colt or horse, regardless of training, gait or temper—in that country, where no one went afoot except to catch his mount in the pasture. Every lad, black or white, bond or free, knew where to find and how to take the roving game in the forests. And young Washington, robust boy that he was, not to be daunted while that strong spirit sat in him which he got from his father and mother alike, took his apprenticeship on horseback and in the tangled woods with characteristic zest and ardor.

He was above all things else a capable executive boy. He loved mastery, and he relished acquiring the most effective means of mastery in all practical affairs. His very exercise books used at school gave proof of it. They were filled, not only with the rules, formulae, diagrams and exercises of surveying, which he was taking special pains to learn, at the advice of his friends, but also with careful copies of legal and mercantile papers, bills of exchange, bills of sale, bonds, indentures, land warrants, leases, deeds and wills, as if he meant to be a lawyer's or a merchant's clerk. It would seem that, passionate and full of blood as he was, he conned these things as he studied the use and structure of his fowling-piece, the bridle he used for his colts, his saddle-girth, and the best ways of mounting. He copied these forms of business as he might have copied Beverley's account of the way fox or 'possum or beaver was to be taken or the wild turkey trapped. The men he most admired, his elder brothers, Mr. Fairfax, and the gentlemen planters who were so much at their houses, were most of them sound men of business, who valued good surveying as much as they admired good horsemanship and skill in sport. They were their own merchants, and looked upon forms of business paper as quite as useful as plows and hogsheads. Careful exercise in such matters might well enough accompany practice in the equally formal minuet in Virginia. And so this boy learned to show in almost everything he did the careful precision of the perfect marksman.—Woodrow Wilson, in Harper's Magazine.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

A Noble Example, Which Should Be Constantly Held Up Before Young and Old.

In thinking of Washington and the celebration of his birthday, we wondered how many of our boys and girls, how many of our young men and women, indeed how many of our older men and women appreciate the greatness of our first president, or value as they should his nobility of character.

We are forced to believe that we do not celebrate his birthday with half the enthusiasm we ought to manifest, that we do not talk of him to our children as much as we should; that we do not see to it that they know his life well; that we do not often discuss his leading characteristics which to-day are those which win the highest success, and elicit the truest admiration.

Suppose for a moment there was some great crisis in our country, and that we were involved in war, and that among us there was a young man 43 years old, who, by his wisdom, his large influence, his moral greatness, his bravery and his "transcendent dignity of character," should, by the general consent of the leaders of the nation, be selected as the one above all others to receive the appointment of general-in-chief of our armies, and after the war, be elected president of the republic. How frequently would his name be spoken in our homes, how every incident in his public career would be noticed, and everything connected with his history and his home life be eagerly discussed!

What young man is there among us, who, although he might be able to lead an army, or might be possessed of the precocious wisdom of an Alexander Hamilton, or might have the moral greatness of Washington, would combine all the virtues and the noble characteristics which he whom we celebrate to-day possessed in such marked degree?

When we ask ourselves these questions, and then direct our thoughts to the young men we know personally, or to those who represent th country in its senate chambers, we confess it would be a difficult matter, if indeed it would be possible, to find a young man to whom with perfect confidence the people of all sections would turn, as the people of all sections did turn to Washington, as a leader.

Was it not remarkable that when there was a company of older men of acknowledged ability in the convention which met in Philadelphia in May, 1787, to frame a constitution for the United States, that Washington, the young general, should be unanimously elected president of the United States? Historians state, in referring to Washington's influence, that "the constitution was far from being warmly or generally welcomed, and it is doubtful whether it would have been ratified but for the popularity of Washington, who was instinctively marked out by public expectation as the first president."

The age in which Washington lived was not yet engrossed in business and pleasure. People had time to ponder on what is profound and lofty, for the age was more contemplative and more impressible by grand sentiments.

Washington has been called the Ulysses of the war, brave in battle, wise in council. His transcendent dignity was perhaps one of his most striking characteristics. There are some men whose mere presence inspires the greatest respect and reverence. People turn around on the street to look at them as they pass with reverential regard, with a feeling plainly discernible on their countenances that they estimate such men as living far above the great majority who throng our thoroughfares. When such men rise to address assemblies, people listen with interest to every word which falls from their lips. Some such men we have known, but the number of them is not large.

As we recall the characteristics of Washington, his nobility, his single-mindedness, his pure patriotism, his moral greatness and the "transcendent dignity of his character," how ought we to celebrate his memory and hold him up as an example to our children.

Great pains are taken abroad, not only to inculcate love of country, but also love of one's country's heroes and great men. Are we not somewhat lacking in that respect? Every Englishman is familiar with "God save the Queen." Let every American know and sing his national airs, stimulate in himself and others his love of country, praise the heroes of the past, emulate their pure patriotism, glory in the stars and stripes, and love and revere the immortal name of Washington! — Chicago Standard.

A TALE OF WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

Again he read the story of the hatchet and the tree,
And said: "I'll do some chopping and a president will be."

So he got his little hatchet and hastened to the place,
When he found his daddy waiting with a set, determined face,

Who led him to the woodpile, and in a voice of law,
Said: "If you want to chop, sir, chop some firewood for your maw!"
—Golden Days.

Washington's Birthday.

Thrilling bugle, throbbing drum-beat, banners waving in the air,
Pomp and pageant and rejoicing, joy of people everywhere,

In the waning of the winter, lift of chorus, flash of wing,
And the keeping of a birthday, in the forecast of the spring,

All our hearts new knit together as the cannon's thunders pour
Jubilant salutings over river, fortess, hill, and shore,

While our thought goes back to kindle at the cradle where there lies
Just a simple new-born baby, dear in mother's loving eyes.
—Harper's Bazar

A TRIP TO FLORIDA.

Not Complete Without Also Visiting Asheville, N. C., "The Land of the Sky."

The cold wave has struck the North, but it has not struck Florida; nor does it ever strike "The Land of the Sky" located around Asheville and Hot Springs in Western North Carolina.

A great deal has been written about Florida, but not so much about this "Wonderful Land of the Sky." People who visit Florida have, within the past few years, begun to appreciate the worth of Western North Carolina as a resort, both as to health and pleasure, and a trip to Florida is now hardly worth the making unless, either on going, or on the return trip, or, in fact, both, be made via Asheville. The Southern railway grants stop-over privileges on all Tourists' Tickets at Asheville and Hot Springs, and an opportunity is offered to see the beautiful new Vanderbilt mansion at that point, and also to enjoy the magnificent scenery. Asheville is not only a place blessed with beautiful mountain scenery but is also provided with the best hotels to be found anywhere; they are modern in every particular. The travel to Florida this season has been good and the Southern Railway with its three routes (via the Illinois Central through Holly Springs; via its line from Louisville and via the Queen & Crescent route from Cincinnati) has done a large passenger business. Through Pullman cars are run, and there is very little trouble to make the trip these times, since the Southern Railway has arranged a schedule almost to a point of perfection. The Southern Railway Passenger Department in the section of the country is represented by Mr. J. C. Beam, N. W. P. A., at 111 Adams Street, Chicago, and by Mr. W. H. Tayloe, A. G. P. A., 216 Fourth Ave., Louisville.

All ticket agents throughout the country have through tickets via the Southern Railway. Either of the above gentlemen will be glad to answer any inquiries concerning their road, and the Southern country, or send, upon application, to any address, a copy of the handsomely illustrated pamphlet "Land of the Sky and Beyond."

"Do you rectify mistakes here?" asked a gentleman, as he stepped into a chemist's. "Yes, sir, we do, if the patient is still alive," replied the urbane clerk.—Glasgow Times.

—Next Monday and Tuesday evenings the pupils of the St. Peter's school will give entertainments at the City Hall.

—Saturday morning opened up quite blizzardy: but as the thermomter indicated just about the freezing point it was not so disagreeable to be out in as when it is colder.

—Epworth League meetings are growing more interesting. There is a fair sized audience out and more participate in the exercise than heretofore at 6:45 every Sunday evening.

—When a concert troupe arrived in town one day this week and one member was pointing out to the rest where the hall was, he said: "There up stairs, where the windows have pine boards in them". Come to look at the hall from the street it does look that way.

—The Great Round World and what is going on in it"a 26 page weekly magazine for boys and girls would be a fine reading book for schools. It is neatly gotten up and full of intersting news to date, and contains no trash. Write to No. 3 and 5 West 18th St. New York City and get a sample.

—Elecutionary Entertainment by J. Frank Fouche of Oberlin College, in the City Hall Friday Evening Feb. 19. Given under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the M. E. Church.

Elecution, wit and humor interspersed with good music.

Admission 25 cts. Children 15 cts.

—The Masquerade ball under the auspecies of the M. W. A. held last Friday evening at the City Hall was attended bd a large crowd of people considering the stormy weather. A little flurry of snow seems to have no terrors for the hardy Woodman and he came out and brought along his sweetheart and enjoyed the fun. Cafferillas made the music.

—The Shakespeare Club met this week at the residence of Dr. Soper. About twenty were present. Mrs. C. A. Dickey, of Minneapolis, was a visitor and took part in the reading. The Merchant of Venice will be completed at the next meeting. Richard the Third was decided upon as the next play to be read. Meeting in two weeks at the home of C. J. Buckley.

—Charles Buckman of Hanover, had the misfotune to have his leg broken on Wednesday evening. The fracture a compound one, below the knee and war received while engaged in a saloon scuffle. It would be better to regulate the dispensing of intoxicating lipuors a little closer, before the whole community gets crippled, The laws should be enforced. Dr. Soper dressed the fracture.

—The masquerade ball given by the M. W. A. at the City Hall last Friday evening was a grand success, socially and financially. A very large crowd was present and enjoyed themselves until an early hour the next morning. Miss Mable Young in gipsy costume was awarded first ladies rize. Mr. Erickson of Long Lake, first gent's prize and Mr. J. E. Borsch the booby prize. Supper was served at the Meister hotel.

—On Monday about 4 p. m. Mrs. Moors and her son drove over to see Mrs. Harry Marshall, who is 80 years old, and lives alone on the bank of Fountain Lake. They found her on her back under the cook stove, with feet out on one side and her head the other way. The fire was out and Mrs. M. was almost frozen. She said she had got up in the night and got down there and could not get up. She is very eccentric and has lived alone since the death of her husband several years ago. She is too feeble to try to keep house alone longer especially in cold weather.

—Washington's birthday will be observed in the City Hall on the 22nd inst. next Monday. A program has been arranged, music, singing, speaking and dianer will be in order. Every body welcome. Bring a little more dinner than you need so that if visitors are present who have none there will enough for all. The committee are expected to report to the programme committee at the hall on Monday early enough to allow of the proper arranging of the program of the day. President Geo. P. Schaffer will call the meeting to order, and give an address of welcome.

—We are creditably informed that a laboring man of our village went home drunk a few days ago and proceeded to smash up what little furniture and things he could find about the house. His wife complained to some of the saloon keepers. If saloon keepers are going to sell liquors to men, get them drunk so that they go home and smash property, turn their families out in the cold, and all against the law, and the village authorities allow their peace officers to see it and not try to stop it, it is about time to vote a change. There is a law, there are officer to enforce the law: but somebody violates the law. The village Marshall and Constables should have strict orders to report any deviation from the contract made and the village council should revoke the licenses of all saloon keepers who break the contract made when they receive their license.

Prof. C. S. Hawker visited the Cities over Sunday.

A. F. Corey, made his weekly visit with his family ever Sunday.

Miss Hattie Rousch, of Howard Lake, visited Delano friends last Saturday.

Rev. Anderson, of Rockford, was a visitor at the M. E. Manse Saturday.

Miss Maud Goodrick, came home from Minneapolis Friday evening and returned Monday.

County Cullings.

"The early bird gets the worm". According to this the Maple Lake Messenger gets up first of all the Wright County papers. Wm. Worm adding his name to the subscription list last Saturday a week ago.

The Maple Lake Messenger of last week publishes a short interview with R. H. Broat, formerly a Wright County man: but now of Minneapolis, and who has lately returned from Mexico where he went a few months ago in the interests of an eastern company who are interested in sending a colony there. People desiring to try Mexico for a home could probably get some information from Mr. B. by writing him at Minneapolis.

INDEPENDENCE INCICENTS.

Since the great blizzard the country people have been almost snow bound. We have more snow now than we can make use of. Yes we have snow to let. The roads in places are badly drifted.

I. How, of Minneapolis, is visiting with Mr. Earl Hoslington.

J. N. Potter has moved up near Little Falls.

Many Long Lake people were in independence last Friday.

The Old Settler's dinner at the School house hall, Maple Plain, last Friday, 12th present month (Lincon's birthday) was largely attended and everybody seamed to have a good time Long Lake was largely represented. The Long Lake brass band was also present, which helped out on the program wonderfully. Many thanks to the band boys of Long Lake.

All the folks who went from here South send back favorable reports. They say it is a very large country with plenty of Sunshine and sweet music from the birds of the native forest, all is lovely and the goose hangs high. They say the blood is good but the delect is poor.

It keeps the Independence people busy most of the time attending to their creamerys, and looking for confidence.

Last fall there was a good deal of oratory thrown to the wind in talking about the nations honor. Most of this kind of talk came from men of small caliber and was looking for their aggrandizement only, it was not the nation's honor there were looking after so much as it was the filthy lucure they were so anxious to get. But the money Lords and money changers by mistake or ignorance dealt out the wrong Medicine and the Patient is no better than six months ago. Now the disease has become chronic, and it will take more than the Dingley bill or tariff tinkering to even get the patient on its feet. It is thought by a good many that the inaugural of Major McKinley will prove an appitizer and give the nation a little strength. We hope this may prave true, for it would be a great calamity to see a nation like this, great in strength and power, standing as a jiant above any other nation in the world, go down to oblivian and leave nothing on the surface but a mere bubble.

Our forefathers in their wisdom when they formed their constitution declared we should have tariff for revenue only. Who does a high protective tariff benefit? It benefits a class the manufacturer and not the poor man. Who does the single gold standard benefit? The band holder. Who does gold, silver, greenbacks, etc. benefit? The people at large? Then let us have the greatest good to the greater number. John Sherman the premire of the incoming administration declares that the McKinley bill was the wisest tariff measure ever devised by the wisdom of man. But Mr. Blain in his life time took a different view of it and said that it would not furnish a market for an aditional pound of pork or a barrel of flower, and Blain's receprocity clauses was the only thing, that saved the McKinley bill from being beheaded before it was.

The pretense that great corporations and associations were earnest and honest in their advocacy of a protective tariff because it would give more constant employment and better wages to labor was a lying pretence. Have not the people found it out.

Flattering words cost but little and should not be swollowed to readily.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

List of Patents

Granted to Minnesota Inventors this week Reported by C. A. Snow & Co., Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, Opp. U. S. Patent office Washington, D. C.

W. P. Butler, Minneapolis, Type-Writer attachment. R. E. Clark, Minneapolis, Telephone transmitter. R. L. Ettenger, Duluth, Hoisting device.

PEOPLE all along the line, in fact all along all the lines appear to be arranging themselves according ao their views on the question of whether we should have single or double standard money.

THE Minneapolis Times has a large ididorial concerniug the digging up of a foot and having it placed in a more comfortable position to the relief of the man who has lost it by amputation after a railroad accident. A few years ago a Wright county man who had lost a foot got the notion in his head that his foot hurt him and that it was not buried comfortably. A friend was to resurrect the missing member and straighten it out. He thought he would experiment a little in the matter and taking a hatchet battered away at the toes to see if his friend would feel it. His friend was satisfied to know that the foot slept comfortably but made no allusion to the battering of the toes.

Abolish the Capitol Saloon.

Daye Hill Senator from New York argued that the Senate should not vote to stop the saloon at the Capitol. He didn't want to admit there was a saloon there. And he didn't believe in taking away the "personal liberty" of the indiyiduals. Can't the entire country see by reports of the actions of men at the capital that liquors are too freely indulged in. Don't individuals vote for men to represent them at the Capitol? To represent them as wide awake men: and not as moudling drunkards? It is a disgrace and a shame to any nation, in this inlightened age to be obligued to admit that liquors are used to freely by its law makers. That poor laws are helped through by its influence. But from reports such is the case. From the fact of the introduction of such a bill into the Senate we have a right to suppose there were some grounds for it. Senator Hill, we are informed does not indulge, and may not be posted in this matter as well as in some others.

As for the "personal liberty" being taken away from a Senator; He is no better than the people who selected, and often times no worse than many of his constituent. But those who voted for what they supposed a man, a man who would keep sober and attend to national affairs fairly and honestly have a right to some "personal liberty" they have a right to pe represented manfully without the aid of the excessive use of stimulants peddled among them in the very capital of our country. If Senators don't know enough and are too frail to control their apitites long enough to wait until they get out of reach of the law making chimbers why they should not have a law restricting them. Intemperance is one of the greatest evils of our land to day, and if men even Senators have no shame, not even common decency enough to reform from drink long enough to debate and vote on important questions before the people, suppress their saloon, and fill their places at the first opportunity with men who neither need nor fear a law suppressing the liquor tropic in the capitol of our country.

WHERE THERE'S A WILL THERE'S A WAY.

"Aut viam Inveniam, aut faciam."
It was a noble Roman,
In Romes' Imperial day,
Who hard a coward croaker,
Before the castle, say:
"They are safe in such a fortress;
There is no way to shake it!"
"On—On!" exclaimed the hero:
"I'll find a way, or make it!"

Is fame your aspiration?
Her path is steep and high;
In vain he seeks her temple,
Content to gaze and sigh;
The shining throne is waiting,
But he alone can take it
Who says with Roman firmness,
"I'll find a way, or make it!"

Is Learning your ambition?
There is no royal road;
Alike the peer and peasant
Must climb to her abode;
Who feels the thirst of knowledge,
In Hellean may slake it,
If he has still the Roman will
"To find a way or make it!"

Are riches worth the getting?
They must be bravely sought;
With wishing and with fretting
The boon canot be bought;
To all the prize is open,
But only he can take it.
Who says, with Roman courage,
"I'll find a way, or make it!"

In Love's impassioned warfare
The tall has ever been,
That victory crowns the valiant,—
The brave are they who win:
Though strong is Beauty's castle,
A lover still may take it,
Who says, with Roman daring,
"I'll find a way, or make it?"

—Duluth Herald.

BISHOP THOMAS GRACE, one of the old settlers of the state, and the second catholic bishop in Minnesota died Tuesday, in St. Paul.

E. B. WOOD of Long Prairie, was elected Department Commander of G. A. R's, at their meeting Wednesday. Charles W. McKay, of Fergus Falls, S. V. D. C.

MCKINLEY is now in the hands of his doctor. His entire cabinet has been selected and it is proposed to keep him quiet so that he might be able to appear at his best at his inauguration on the 4th of March.

MR MCCUTCHEON has been given an office by Gov. Clough. McCafferty had already been sent to the Reform School. Now if Dan Lawler is appointed to something the leaders of the Gold Democracy will all have been rewarded.

GREECE proposes to remain a spot on the map of Europe, even though the Turks fight her and christian nations order her off the Island of Crete. The burning of the palace at Cannea is said ts have destroyed the secret machinery of the Turkish government.

GOV. CLOUGH has signed the bill abolishing the struck jury. The bill is now a thing of the past. It is to be hoped that no nore such laws will be placed on the statue books. John Lind's case will be remembered as the last ever tried by a "struck" jury in Minnesota.

A BIG meeting of the unemployed was held at Market hall, on Tuesday, evening and some warm discussion were engaged in by such eminent men as Rev S. G. Smith. Ignatius Donnelly. Tom Lucas and Ed Paradis. We supdosed these poor fellows were provided with work for the winter.

GEN. LEE is reported as being tired of waiting for the United States authorities to support him in demanding the release of American prisoners in Cuba and to have tendered his regisnation. It seems he desired some war ships and some physical support so that his demands could be forced if necessary.

THE Minnesota Senate in actually showing symptoms of improvement. Senator Hale's bill prohibiting smoking in the senate chamber or committee rooms was passed. Many of our best men and most ladies object to inhaling tobacco fumes. There are plenty of men willing to be Senators and refrain from making a smokehouse out of the Capitol.

WE are of opinion that the Stearns county people are not the only ones taking advantage of the text book law to impress upon the rising generation their particular views, on various subjects, not all religious either. Why not make the investigation general while about it? Perhaps the law can be improved upon. There is considerable of a temptation for politicians to work in party interests, as it is now.

GEN. POPE has established a free silver paper at Mankato. The cause still grows.

CUBA'S President, Salvador Cisneros is reported to have died recently from sickness. They probably have elected a successor before now.

NEVADA'S Indians seem to have been struck by the new chunk of civilization that recently came to that state. But they have not learned to get up wind so long as their white brethern. They went right into the fight without waiting for the usual preliminaries.

WE noticed lately in Minneapolis papers that several Hennepin county men have offered to do the work done by several of the public officers, free. That is without salary. Has it come to pass that the perquesites in that county are sufficient to pay men for the work without the salary?

BANKRUPTCY has a bad sound to it. There should be no occasion in this country for legislation on that subject. Our finances should be fixed to run without throwing any man into bankruptcy, The very word smacks of fraud. It brings to mind that some man has been trying to defraud his creditors or that the creditors have conspired to cheat some poor fellow they have induced to go into debt beyond his ability to pay, out of what he has. "Owe no man anything" is the best way.

A LOT of Michiganders are said to beexhibiting the true inwardness of the tariff legislation; of the selfish greed of its advocates in at least some instances, by their persistent and earnest efforts to have the proposed $2 per thousand tariff cut down to the old McKinley bill of $1 per thuusand. The reason given by knowing ones is that the men from Michigan have purchased a lot of timber lands in Canada and now do not relish having high tariff on lumber as much as they might. It is ever thus.

A BANQUET was given in honor of William J. Bryan, on the 24th inst., at Washington, D. C., by John R. McLean of Cincinnati. Covers were laid for 100 guests. Many of the leading men of the nation were present, W. J. Bryan and John R. McLean sat at the head of the table, Senators Jones and Teller sat at the other end. No speech making was indulged in. But Mr. Bryan is reported as having said that he thought that the organization recently formed by the Silver Republicans was a step in the right derection. He seems confident of success in 1900.

Washington's Birthday Celebration in Delano.

The fourth annual celebration of Washington's Birthday was held in the City Hall on Monday, the 22nd inst. The usual interest was manifested. The program was carried out. A union band of part of the two bands in town furnished excellent music. The speech by Prof. Wharton was pronounced good. The toasts responded by O. L. Billings, J. H. McGary, Rev. Saves and Prof. Hawker were palitable, as was the splendid dinner served in the hall. The singing by Miss Mable Young and by Beth Shrader were highly appreciated. Miss Nellie Sturman volunteered and gave "Berbara Fritchie" in an effective manner.

People were present from all over th country. Many from Rockford, Independence and surrounding towns; some from Minneapolis. The hall is growing too small to accomodate Delano's largest meetings.

After the exercises, officers were elected as follows:

President, J. H. McGary.
Secretary, C. J. Buckley.
Treasurer, William Lewis.

TOWNE SILVER REPUBLICANS.

Washington, Feb. 53.—The silver Republicrns in the senate and house yesterday, Washington's birthday, signed an address to the people, which was made public today, calling a meeting of a "provisional national committee of the Silver Republican party, to meet in Chicago June 8, 1897. for the purpose of calling a national convention of all silver Republicans and those who will co operate with them in political action until the great monetary issue is settled and settled right."

Each state and territory is asked to designate a member of the provisional national committee to represent it in all matters preliminary to the calling of the national convention.

Charles A. Towne, of Minnesota, is named chairman of the committee until a futher organizations effected.

The address declares that the Republican party has abandoned the principles on which it was founded and that the silver Republicans cannot follow "that party into a shameless abandonment of American interests to the tyranny of an alien money system."

It is announced that the address is issued in response 2 numerous inquiries requesting information regarding the party policy. It is signed by Senators Teller, Dubois, Cannon, Pettigrew, Mantle, Jones and Representatives Towne, Hartman, Shafroth, Allen, of Utah, and others.

NOTWITHSTANDING our republican friends were led to believe that bimetallism was all right provided an international agreement could be negotiated for, it seems they have voted down the appointment of a committee for that purpose. Perhaps they wish to wait until the new administration is installed and have all the honors for themselves.

THE so called civil service bill is doomed to be repealed from the present show up in Congress. Notwithstanding McKinleys letter that in the matter of civil service reform he would take no backward step. Congressman Geysner, of Ohio, is said to have started the ball rolling quite vigorously, to repeal it. We always considered the bill a farce. Let it go into oblivion.

Fourth Insane Hospital.

The Anoka-Hastings hospital investigating committee are having a hard time to agree, and it seems a long way off before either of them gets the building. Of course with a foot or two of snow, in some places drifts are of a much greater depth, covering the ground it is impossible for a committee to form much of an opinion about a location, its advantages and disadvantages.

Delano offered a site, a splendid piece of land with as good drainage facilities as could be asked for, with timber, meadow, and plow land, and as fine building spots as the state affords. Delano is, geographically, a much better place than either of those in the quarrel over a site. People living on the G. N. and on the Soo can be better accommodated at Delano, they would have to make no changes of cars. City folks could be as well accommodated at Delano as at either Hastings or Anoka. The whole committee did not pay Delano a visit while hunting for a location. If the new investigating committee do so and look over our offer we think they could soon determin the location of the Fourth Hospital for Insane.

Minnesota Editors and Publishers Association.

The 31st anual meeting of the Minnesota Editors and Publishers Association was held at the rooms of the Commercial Club, St. Paul, on Thursday and Friday last. A large number of editors and a few of their wives attended. It was one of the best meetings the association has had so far. President Alyah Eastman presided with dignity. The exercises and papers and the business part of the meeting all passed off smoothly. Hon. C. E. Hanreau's address "The law of Libel," was highly appreciated by the fraternity. "Newspaper Ethics" by C. F. Hendryx, Sauk Center Herald, was to the point. "Social relations of City and Country Press", by Conde Hamlin, Pioneer Press, and the discusion following by Ed A. Paradis; Midway News; C. S. Mitchell, Alexandria Post News; C. W. Stanton, Appleton Press; H. P. Hall, Cosmopolitan Press; were interesting, and developed a suprising lack of acquaintance between the city and country editors.

The paper "Patronage of home institutions" by W. E. Easton, Stillwater Gazette, brought out some new points among them the ability of the ladies to aid in building up home industries by whosoever possible, buying home made goods. The paper "Uses and abuses of the country press" by W. C. Whiteman, Ortonville Herald-Star pointed out several chances for editors to improve their country papers. J. Adam Bede's "Pi and other things", was up to his grade and went well. Resolutions were passal favoring a change in the Loud postal bill, so that country editors will not be obliged to tie up their mail and sack it seperately. Also favoring a continuance of the pound rate to exchanges, sample copies, etc.

A resolution condemning the practise of type houses of setting up new men on credit to the detriment of regular papers was passed.

It was resolved that the society favor the present law of allowing editors a chance to retract if they desired alleged libilous articles.

Thanks of the association were voted to the officers and the executive committee for excursion to Macinac Island last September; to H. P. Hall for history of society from organization to date: to Commercial Club and to C. P. Stine, for courties extended: to the Managers of the Metropolitan and Grand Opera Houses for courtesies; to Col. WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19, 1897.

Secretary Morton may get another reprimand from Congress to file away with those already received, if it shall be proven that two women were discharged by his orders from the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry at South Omaha, Nebraska, for no other crime than exhibiting pictures of Hon. W. J. Bryan in their windows during the late campaign. Senator Allen's resolution calling upon the Civil Service Commission for a full explanation of the dismissal of those two women was this week adopted by the Senate after Mr. Allen had delivered a few caustic remarks thereon in which he said that the tretament he received from the Civil Service Commission while in search of information about the matter was violating all the decencies and proprieties of official life, and incidently denounced the Civil Service Commission fraud, a delusion and a snare. Senator Allen said he thought the discharge of these two women was aggravated by the fact that six other women in the same establishment had exhibited McKinley's pictures and were not even reprimaned for it.

Congress is just begining to realize that some very lively hustling has got to be done to get the regular appropriation bills through on time, and many are predicting that all of them will not get through. It is quite certain that not much else will get through, and for that some people are thankful.

If, as many suppose, the statement that Cuauncey M. Depew will be appointed Ambassadore to England, which has come from those close to Mr. McKinley, was put out as a feeler to ascertain how the Senate would regard the payment of the debts of the last campaign to the milionair element by giving them honorable positions, it has served its purpose, even if the result isn't altogether satisfactory to either McKinley, Hanna, or the milionair contributors to Hanna's election fund. Senators have made it plain that they would make a fight on the nomination of Mr. Depew, or any other man, whose relations to the Vanderbilts, Pierrepont Morgan and other corporation controlers make it apparent that the nomination is made in payment for campaign contributions. This opposition might not be strong enough to defeat a man whose personal friends are as numerous as those of Mr. Depew, but it will make statements which will stir up public opinion to such an extent that Mr. McKinley will be certain to regret having made the nomination, if he does it.

Republicans would gladly let the money question drop, that is, the leaders of the party would, but it continually crops out in both House and Senate, and everytime it does the monetary chasm in the republican party, which was temporarily bridged by the bimetallic plank of the St. Louis platform, is seen to widen "Little Billee" Chandeler stuck a red flag on top of that plank and shook it meaningly in McKinley's face when he made that bimetallic speech in the Senate, while eastern members of the House Coinage Committee the bill authorizing a monetary conference.

Although the reported row between Speaker Reed and Representative Boutelle, of Me., has been repeatedly denied by others, neither of the principles have said a word. They do not speak to each other when they pass and members of the House are wondering how Boutelle will fair when Reed makes up the committees for the next House. He is now Chairman of the Naval Committee.

It is stated that Senator Frye has abandoned his right to succeed Senator Sherman as Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations and that the place will go to Senator Davis, of Minn., who is now third member of the committee, if the republicans are allowed to fill the committee vacancies that will exist after March 3. There is some interesting gossip in connection with Senator Frye. As second member of the committee he is entitled by all the precedents of the Senate to the chairmanship, but he is said to have abandoned his claim because he was told that a fight would be made in caucus to keep him out of it on account of his Cuban sentiments. The friends of Cuba will be glad to see Senator Davis at the head of the Committee; they have not forgotten the red hot speech for free Cuba he made early in the present session.

The receipt of the post offices of the country are regarded as an indisputable barometer of the condition of business. A statement given out this week by the Postmaster General Wilson shows the gross recepts of 30 post offices in the largest cities for January 1896 and January 1897. Twenty of the offices show a decrease, the greatest in years. Another proof of the delay in the arrival of promised prosperity, and another proof that those who declared buisness began to improve the day after the election were mistaken.

Paradoxical as it seems, hot times may be expected when the new artillery shell charged with frozen dynamite comes into use in the next war.

According to the deductions of a well-known astronomer, we receive as much light from the sun as could be emitted by 680,000 full moons. And yet we are not happy.

At Waxahatchie, Tex., a paper is published called "Wanted, a Man." There is some curiosity to know who the editor is, and whether or not she is young and good-looking.

A statistician has figured out that all the people who have lived in the last 1,000 years could be comfortably housed in Texas. Who said we were in danger of overpopulation?

The New York Biscuit company seems to be cut after the "dough." It made over half a million dollars last year and its stock is still rising. This is no flowery dream, either.

A St. Louis critic says that the most cheerful sign of the times is that the fadazines, the posters, the erotic novels and other emanations from a diseased corner in men's and women's brains are rapidly dying out.

The death of a son of Gen. Meade at the age of 53 serves to remind old soldiers that time is running on. The son left West Point during the war to enlist as a private, and made an honorable army record of his own.

The greatest living authority on Indian statistics calculates that from 20,000,000 to 40,000,000 people scarcely ever lose the sensation of hunger—in fact, do not know the feeling of a full stomach except in the mango season.

A Mexican savant claims to have discovered an effort on the part of the inhabitants of Mars to communicate with this planet by geometrical figures. If they will begin by squaring the circle their superiority will be cheerfully conceded.

More than 400 persons in Massachusetts changed their names by legal process last year, and of course they were foreigners. A native might add a hyphen to his name, but nothing could persuade him to cut loose from his genealogy.

A neat definition of the "new woman" was given not long ago in response to a prize offered by an English newspaper. She was described as "a fresh darn on the original blue stocking." The definition was thought to be so appropriate that the palm was at once given to the author.

Several rich husbands who have lost good wives under the divorce laws of Dakota are now mad about it, and have chipped in $10,000 to test the constitutionality of the law. Some people never appreciate their real treasures until deprived of them. Very few women apply for a divorce without good reason for it.

Brooklyn school children are taught to sing to the tune of "Yankee Doodle:" "Do not spit upon the street, in cars or public places; this is far from being neat, and leaves unwholesome traces." There is another verse, but one is enough to warn expectorators that high hats are not monopolizing public attention.

A novel wedding took place in Missouri the other day. Before Mr. and Mrs. William Irving were pronounced man and wife the latter was made to promise at the altar that she would not wear bloomers and ride a bicycle. The former was made to promise not to stay out late to lodge. The couple explained the peculiar ceremony by saying they expected to live a long while and wanted to guard against the tendency of the times.

The Herresdorf torpedo boat No. 6 is entitled to the distinction of being the naval water flyer of the world. In its trial of speed last week, five runs over a 12-mile course, the little wonder made an average of 28¾ knots, which would have been increased to 29 but for a slight derangement of its machinery. Fast as it is, the two torpedo boats now building by the Bath iron works and Union iron works are guaranteed to make 30 knots. Evidently the fast sailers in American waters are not to be confined to the yachts.

A tragedy is reported from a small village in Hungary that reads like a grim carnival of crime. Eighteen wives in the community, it appears, were desirous of ridding themselves of their husbands and they made a social function out of the affair by simultaneously administering poison. The husbands must have been wholly unsuspicious or complacent, for it appears that all died promptly and without any protest or offer of compromise. It is a radical method for women to resort to when they happen to grow tired of their husbands, but too spectacular to warrant general popularity.

The antipathy felt toward filled cheese in legislative quarters seems to be well founded, although it may be, after all, a revulsion caused by excess of fastidiousness. A good article of filled cheese is made, it is said, by using the very thinnest milk imaginable and adding 30 pounds of pork fat to every 100 pounds of milk, and seasoning to the taste with sugar of lead, bisulphate of lime, boracic acid, orris root, tartaric acid, glycerine, cupric acid, sulphuric acid, butyric ether, caustic potash, castor oil, slippery elm bark, oil from sunflower seeds, and adding a little coloring matter.

A dispatch says that the village of Port Richmond, Staten Island, has been seized by the sheriff of the county for debt. Villages have been known to suffer many varieties of affliction, but it is seldom one becomes so profligate as to fall into the hands of a sheriff. What the sheriff will do with this unfortunate village, now that he has got it, is not stated, nor is its fate in itself a matter of serious import. The real significance of the episode at this time rests chiefly in the revelation that the seizure of a village is within the reasonable limits of a sheriff's ambition, and that it is not impossible cities may fare likewise.

WOULD WELCOME WAR.

National Feeling Among Greeks Grows Intense.

Indignant at the Bombardment by the Powers of the Christian Camp Near Canea—British Fleet Begins Its Demonstration.

Canea, Feb. 22.—A fusillade having continued all of Sunday, despite the warnings of the foreign admirals, the united squadron bombarded the insurgent camp outside of Canea. The foreign admirals have warned Col. Vassos, the commander of the Greek forces on the island of Crete, of their intention to attack his troops with four men-of-war anchored off his camp, Aghioi Theodoroi, should he attempt to advance to the interior of the island. The chief Cretan position was a hamlet on a ridge of hills, 4,000 yards from the flagship.

Bombardment Begins.

At 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon signals were made to the Dryad, Harrier and Revenge, together with one Italian, one German and one Russian ship, to open fire on the Cretan position, where the Greek flag was hoisted some days ago. The British ships fired 40 and the foreign ships 30 shells at the village, and ruined the houses held by the Cretans. The flag was soon lowered, and the order "cease fire" sounded after ten minutes. Thereupon the flag was rehoisted. The rocks around were crowded with Cretans. The Turks, encouraged by the fleet, now opened a lively fusillade, while the Cretans were removing their wounded. The Cretans had not replied during the whole performance.

Indignation at Athens.

Athens, Feb. 23.—The indignation caused by the bombardment of the insurgent position near Canea by the foreign war ships has increased, and the action of the powers is denounced on every hand as a gross outrage and a wanton disregard of the rights of Greece. A very largely attended indignation meeting was held Monday at which strong protests were made against the interference of the powers, who, it was declared, were pitting their might against Greek right. The speakers vehemently asserted that the country was now more firmly resolved than ever to spend its blood and treasure for Crete.

Would Welcome War.

The audience was carried away by the warlike words of the speakers, who were frequently interrupted by cries for war. There is no denying the fact that the whole Hellenic people are in a temper which would make war welcome even against overwhelming odds. They are determined to uphold Greek rights and honor, and will persist in helping the Christians in Crete, not withstanding the attitude of the powers in supporting the Turks. It is reported that Col. Smolentz, minister of war, has resigned. M. Skouzes, minister of foreign affairs, visited the foreign ministers and protested against the bombardment and the consequent encouragement of the Turks. It is stated that several Christians were killed or wounded by the shells fired by the foreign war ships, and that great havoc was done to property.

Britons Are Angry.

London, Feb. 23.—Amid the cries of shame it was admitted by Salisbury's representative in the house of commons Monday night that the British fleet had, under virtual instructions from the British government, bombarded the Christian force which is seeking to throw off the dominion of Turkey in Crete. Under Secretary Curzon hastened to add apologetically that the report that any shots had been fired at the Greeks was a base falsehood.

Combatants Won't Negotiate.

Canea, Feb. 23.—The British, Italian and Russian consuls, who recently went to Selinos to inquire into the situation there, returned Monday, bringing with them 170 Mussulmans who feared to remain in the town. The consuls state that they were unable to negotiate with the combatants, who were resolved to fight to the end. Both sides, Moslems and Christians, refused to be hampered with prisoners, and therefore massacred all their enemies who fell into their hands.

The consuls proceeded to Canado on board ship. The Christians there, although advised of their arrival, fired on the consuls, in spite of the white flag of truce which they carried. The consuls returned to Selinos, where the Christians occupied fresh positions. Here, also, the consuls were fired upon, the shots falling around the ship.

The insurgents have rehoisted their flag at Halepa, but they have not fired on the Turks, who have planted a flag 1,500 yards from the insurgent position.

Over 27,000 Moslems Slain.

London, Feb. 23.—A dispatch to the Central News from Constantinople says that official reports from Crete say that the total number of Moslems, men, women and children, who have been killed during the present troubles in that island is over 27,000, and that 25 Moslem villages have been pillaged and burned.

Task Given to Italy.

Paris, Feb. 23.—The Gaulois says that the powers have decided to intrust to Italy the authority to pacify and administer the affairs of the island of Crete, pending the establishment of constitutional autonomy for the island.

The Mothers' Congress.

Washington, Feb. 20.—The last day of the first session of the national convention of mothers was marked by so many diversified topics to be discussed and such pronounced manifestations of general interest that the congress had to divide itself, as on Thursday, into three or four separate conventions. Resolutions were reported and adopted in favor of excluding evil literature from homes, and using all influence with the press looking to that purpose. No new officers were elected. After the night meeting the delegates attended a banquet at the Arlington hotel.

Encouragement for the Greeks.

Washington, Feb. 22.—The Cretan uprising against Turkey was recognized and encouraged by the senate of the United States Saturday in the unanimous adoption of a resolution offered by Senator Cameron (rep., Pa.) extending sympathy to the government of Greece in its intervention to free the people of Crete "from the tyranny of foreign oppressors, and to restore peace, with the blessing of Christian civilization, to that distressed island."

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

How It Was Observed in Many Large Cities.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Commencing in the morning paeans of patriotism mingled with inspiring eloquence of the orator, whose theme was his country and its deliverer, went up from Chicago in honor of the memory of Washington.

A great lawyer from New York, jurists from our own tribunals, aspiring young collegians from all parts of the land, clergymen and laymen, all lent their aid to make this anniversary of the birth of the Father of his Country memorable to Chicago. Frederick R. Coudert, whose history is part of the history of the nation, was brought here by the Union League club to celebrate the day by a speech on "War and Arbitration." The same organization brought together a small army of collegiate orators to scatter among the schools of the city that the pupils might listen to the recounting of the deeds of Washington, his private life and his character, and have sown in their minds the seeds of patriotism and national honor. The Union League club concluded the Washington birthday celebration at a banquet in the tower room of the clubhouse at night. About 200 guests and members were present.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 23.—The feature of the celebration of Washington's birthday in this city was the banquet of the Michigan club, which was held at the Auditorium Monday evening. About 800 members and friends sat at the tables, and the galleries were filled with spectators. Among the distinguished guests and speakers were Hon. Boise Penrose, of Pennsylvania; Congressman James A. Walker, of Virginia, and A. J. Hopkins, of Illinois; Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston; John A. Logan, Jr., of Washington; G. J. Corey, of Chicago, and Judge Albion W. Tourgee, of New York. Gen. Alger was toastmaster.

New York, Feb. 23.—The one hundred and sixty-fifth anniversary of Washington's birth was generally observed. The national colors fly from all the public buildings and many private residences. According to custom the stars and stripes were raised both at Battery park and the Old Block fort in Central park at sunrise by descendants of the revolutionary soldiers. Banquets and other events were held at night in honor of Washington's birthday.

Boston, Feb. 23.—Washington's birthday was generally observed. There were the usual ringing of bells, salutes and flag display. A feature in the programme was the governor's reception at the state house. The annual celebration of the young people of the Boston Sunday schools was held at the Old South meeting house. President Gates, of Amherst college, delivered the address.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 23. — Washington's birthday was fittingly celebrated here by all classes, from the stately ceremonial of commemoration day at the Johns Hopkins university down to the fantastic festival of the children of the Germania mannerchor, who danced in honor of "Washington's Gaburstag." Among the guests from abroad at the Johns Hopkins university exercises were Rev. Dr. T. J. Conaty, rector of the Catholic university at Washington; Postmaster General Wilson, ex-Secretary J. W. Foster, President Patton, of Princeton university, who delivered the annual address, and Rt. Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, bishop of Washington, who made the opening prayer. Another important event of the day was a mass meeting in favor of arbitration of international disputes.

GARY FOR THE CABINET.

The Latest Accession to Maj. McKinley's Official Family.

Canton, O., Feb. 20.—James A. Gary, of Baltimore, has been offered and has accepted a position in Maj. McKinley's cabinet. It is not yet certain that he will be made postmaster-general.

JAMES A. GARY.

When the final cast of the cabinet is made it may seem well to the president-elect to transfer ex-Gov. Long, whom he has fixed upon for the navy department, to the department of justice, leaving the navy portfolio for a New York man or for Mr. Gary, in case it is decided to give New York the post office department.

Floods in Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 23. — Thirty-six hours of steady rain has caused nearly every stream in the state to overflow its banks and sweep away live stock and fences. Kentucky river is carrying off thousands of logs. Immense damage is reported from Harlan, Perry, Leslie and Letcher counties. At Pineville the Cumberland river has reached the doors of the courthouse. At Frankfort 20 houses are under water and the gas works threatened. The lower portion of Catlettsburg is under water. At Richmond the reservoir of the water works overflowed and drove 100 people from their homes. At Middlesboro a cloudburst Sunday night deluged the locality, drowning James Charwell, wife and four children.

Damages for Speaking Harshly.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—After being out all night a jury in Judge Goggin's court returned a verdict Friday against Rev. Thomas Craven, a retired missionary living in Evanston, awarding to Mrs. Emma Braun $9,000 damages for causing her to be frightened and become a victim of St. Vitus' dance. A year ago Mrs. Braun, who is an elderly woman, lived with her sister in an Evanston house owned by the minister. While they were moving out the landlord came with a constable and attached the goods. It was alleged that the missionary spoke in a harsh and threatening manner to the plaintiff, who sued for $50,000.

THE NEXT U. S. SENATE.

Three New Senators Yet to Be Chosen.

There may be three vacant seats in the senate after March 4. The terms of Senators Blackburn, of Kentucky; Call, of Florida, and Mitchell, of Oregon, expire on that date and their successors have not been elected.

In Kentucky the legislature adjourned without agreeing on anyone. The Florida legislature does not meet until April. The Oregon legislature is split hopelessly, it seems, and Senator Mitchell's seat will remain vacant probably for at least a time.

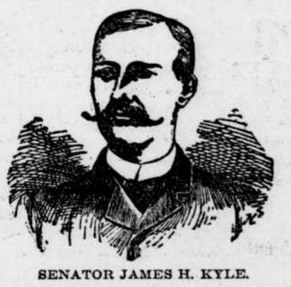
Kyle Elected Senator.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 19.—Kyle was elected United States senator by the solid republican vote and a few populists who stayed by him. Most of the populists deserted him, but enough remained to give him the required number to elect.



SENATOR JAMES H. KYLE.

A Family of Six Slain.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 19.—The horrible discovery of the murder of six persons was made Tuesday near Winona, on the Missouri river, about 30 miles below Bismarck. The wholesale slaughter occurred at the farmhouse of Thomas Spicer. The affair is shrouded in mystery. It is believed that Indians may have been the murderers, although there is nothing to substantiate the theory other than that a number of them are said to have been seen loitering about the neighborhood. It is said they were decked with war paint, which is considered proof that they were out for mischief. The dead are: Mrs. William Waldron, Mrs. William Rouse, twin baby boys, sons of Mrs. Rouse; Rev. Thomas Spicer, Mrs. Thomas Spicer.

Death of the Famous Blondin.

London, Feb. 23.—Blondin, the celebrated tight-rope walker, who was the first person to cross Niagara falls on a tight rope, which feat he performed on August 17, 1859, died from diabetes Monday at Ealing, a suburb of London.

Congratulations Are Due.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 22.—A daughter was born to Gen. and Mrs. Harrison Sunday. The young miss arrived at five o'clock a. m., and weighs 8½ pounds.

—A lady on entering the kitchin early one morning saw a plate and knife and fork, the former of which had evidently contained rabbit pie. The lady stornly suspected a certain policeman of having supped off it, and the following conversation took place between her and the cook: Mistress—"Jane, what's become of the cold rabbit pie that was left?" Jane—"Oh, I didn't think it was wanted, mum so I gave it to the dog." Mistress (sarcastically)—"Does a dog use a knife and fork, then?" Jane (unabashed)—"Not very well yet, mum; but I,m teaching him to."—Tit-Bits.

THE GAME GRAY SQUIRREL.

Timid and Wary. It Can Fight in Its Own Defense.

The gray squirrel is no doubt the gamiest quadruped that inhabits the Pennsylvania forests. To lure the gray squirrel from its haunts, or get within range of the animal, is a task that requires the skill of an experienced hunter. There is as much difference in the nature of the gray squirrels of the forests and the gray squirrels of the parks as there is between the fierce wild cats of the Rockies and the household tabbies of New York. A gray squirrel is rarely seen on the ground. When it wishes to change its position to a neighboring tree it will hang to the trunk within five feet of the ground, then, surveying the surroundings, will dart like lightning to the next tree and soon be lost in the labyrinth of branches.

Although the gray squirrel is seemingly the wildest and most timid of game animals, it displays great courage when its home is invaded by an enemy.

A New Yorker who had been hunting in the Nippenoss valley, Lycoming county, Pa., relates an interesting combat between a gray squirrel and a black snake. "My attention," he said, "was drawn to a rumpus of some sort in a nearby oak tree. On making an investigation I found a huge black snake and gray squirrel in deadly combat. The snake was making an attempt to gain access to the squirrel's nest, but he had evidently undertaken a more difficult task than he had bargained for. So ferociously and effectually did the courageous little animal attack the snake that the long, lithe body relaxed its hold on the limb and dropped to the ground. All the fight was knocked out of the snake by his dizzy fall, but the squirrel was just getting warmed up to his best fighting heat. He darted down the tree and took after his unwelcome intruder. He then made another onslaught on the snake by clawing and biting it with his sharp claws and teeth. The squirrel cleverly avoided the wicked strikes of his antagonist. The combatants approached to a few feet of me before they observed my presence, then they disappeared as quick as lightning. Had not the fight been interrupted, there would no doubt have been one less reptile in Lycoming county."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

EGGS OF THE EPIORNIS.

Museums That Have Specimens of the Eggs of This Extinct Bird.

In the British museum, London, the museum of the Academy of Science at Paris and the National museum in Vienna, and in the several institutions for the advancement of science, there may be seen specimens of birds' eggs which are almost as large as a two-gallon jug.

These eggs are laid by the epiornis, an extinct and gigantic bird of Madagascar. The cubic bulk of these eggs is eight times that of the egg of "the silly bird of the Sahara," which means that each of them is equal in point of capacity to 150 hens' eggs.

The first discovery of these interesting relics of past times was made by the captain of a merchant vessel, which had stopped at a port on the northeastern coast of Madagascar to trade with the natives. During the stay at this point mentioned the curious vessels used by the natives for water vases attracted the attention of the captain.

Upon investigation it was found that these odd utensils were in reality gigantic egg shells cut in halves. Upon questioning the water carriers in regard to the bird that laid the eggs and the place where they were procured, the captain was given to understand that the bird itself was unknown, but that the eggs were discovered in a large sand bank some distance away in the up-country, and could not be found elsewhere, to the knowledge of the natives.

An offer to purchase all that could be procured soon resulted in the discovery of several fine specimens, all of which fell into the hands of Isadore G. St. Hilare, the French naturalist. These curiosities were afterward distributed among the largest museums. —Hartford Times.

Princess Henry of Pless has sent an appeal to every Englishwoman married to a German in the German empire. The princess wishes to collect from her fellow countrywomen a sum of money to buy a handsome present to give Queen Victoria on the occasion of the close of the sixtieth year of her reign. Hundreds of Englishwomen have responded to the appeal, and the sum collected is likely to be a large one. More Englishwomen are married to Germans than to members of any other nation.

THE HIGHWAY.

The highway lies, all bare and brown,
A naked line across the down,
Worn by a hundred hurrying feet.
The tide of life along it flows,
And busy commerce comes and goes.
Where once the grass grew green and sweet,
The world's fierce pulses beat.

Well for the highway that it lies
The passageway of great emprise!
Yet from its dust what voices cry—
Voices of soft green growing things
Trampled and torn from earth which clings
Too closely, unperceiving why
Its darling bairns must die!

My heart's a highway, trodden down
By many a traveler of renown—
Grave thought, and burden-bearing deeds.
And strong achievement's envoy fares,
With laughing joys and crowning cares,
Along the road that worldward leads—
Once rank with foolish weeds.

Glad is my heart to hear them pass;
Yet sometimes breathes a low alas!
The tender springing things that grew—
The nursling hopes their feet destroyed,
Sweet ignorant dreams that youth enjoyed—
And blossomed there the long year through—
Would I could have them too!

—Louise Betts Edwards, in Harper's Magazine.

"DOC'S" STORY.

The "lush" was in his best humor when he joined the evening group at the Alfalfa European hotel. He had enough of morning penitence left in him to make him grave and even dignified. At the same time he had started in upon an evening accumulation, and had already become warmed into that friendly mood which helps one to realize that all men are brothers.

"Good evening, gentlemen," said the "lush," and he said it as if it were the preliminary to an oration.

"Good evening, sir; good evening," responded "Doc" Horne, with a slight inclination of the head.

"Sit down and make yourself miserable," said the lightning dentist, who could be entertaining at times.

"Come join the feast of reason and the flow of soul," added the book agent, who could be original, if not entertaining.

"Sure, that's right," added the bicycle salesman.

The "lush" seated himself and asked: "Well, gentlemen, what is the subject under discussion?"

"We were just talking about the cold weather, and saying that it must be pretty tough on some people," said the lightning dentist.

"There's nothing personal in this, is there?" asked the "lush."

"Certainly not," said the lightning dentist, laughing. "Doc" Horne chuckled, and the large book agent smiled in a conservative manner, as if he feared to compromise his professional dignity.

The bicycle young man was puzzled. He did not see why the laugh came in, so he settled back in his chair and tried to think it out. The task was long and difficult, for he said but a few words during the remainder of the evening.

"I don't think there is so much suffering, now that the weather has moderated," said the "lush."

"I hope not," said "Doc" Horne. "It's a terrible thing to be cold and hungry for days at a time. I can tell you that. If any of you gentlemen ever go through what I did you'll appreciate that fact, too."

"How's that, 'Doc?'" asked the "lush."

"I thought I had told you of my experience in the winter of '67 and '68, when I was moose hunting with Gen. Foster up in Canada. No? Well, we had a party of gentlemen from New York and Philadelphia with us. The weather was bitterly cold, but we were living in the general's hunting lodge and we managed to keep comfortable. One day I was out with a party, and we were up on the Sessikoochee river—"

"W'at's the name, 'Doc?'" asked the lightning dentist.

"The Sessikoochee—Indian name, you know. It means 'lofty pines.' I had two New York gentlemen with me, and we were tracking a moose—had been on the trail for several hours. I crossed the river on the ice to take up what seemed to be a new trail, and I got separated from my two friends. I suppose I was intent on following this trail, and that's why I paid so little attention to the weather. The first thing I knew the snow began to fall, and I discovered that the sky was overcast, with every indication of a blizzard. I started back along the trail, but in ten minutes the air was filled with blinding snow and the wind was blowing a perfect hurricane among the trees. Of course it was impossible to see very far in any direction, but I kept on, and thought I was going toward the river. I knew if I struck the river I could find the house all right. Darkness came on—I had no idea it was so late—and the wind came from the northwest and cut me to the very bone. I walked and walked and walked, but I didn't come to the river, and then I realized that probably I had been walking away from it all the time. Of course my inclination was to sit down and rest, but I knew I didn't dare to do that or I'd freeze to death."

"It must have been awful," said the bicycle young man.

"Well, it wasn't any pleasure excursion. Fortunately I found a hollow tree where I could coil myself. I got in there and wrapped my fur coat around me, and managed to keep fairly warm until morning. By that time the wind had gone down and the cold was something intense. If I hadn't been so hardy and athletic I suppose I never would have lived through it. I got out, took my bearings from the sun and started out on a run to find the river. I had to run to keep from freezing. Of course I still carried my rifle, and I also had a hunting knife, but I didn't have any matches to start a fire with. About ten o'clock that morning I shot a rabbit, but of course I couldn't cook it, so I had to content myself with drinking a little of the blood."

The bicycle young man gasped and shivered, which led "Doc" to say: "You would have been glad to get it."

"I should think it would be hard work to run in the snow," said the lightning dentist.

"Not if you had snowshoes," said "Doc," with an amused smile.

"Oh, I didn't know you had snowshoes."

"I didn't have any when I started, but I made a rough pair out of some long twigs knotted together with a kind of wiry grass that grows up there. With this pair of shoes I could make four miles an hour across the snow. I kept at it nearly all day, only stopped to rest twice, if I remember correctly, but I was off in my calculations, for I didn't find the river. It might have been a mile or it might have been 15 miles away—I didn't know. When it began to get dark again I'll admit that I was a little frightened. The only thing that had kept me warm all day was my running, and, of course, by this time, I was more or less tired. Well, sir, it was a funny thing. I had cut through a little ravine and was starting up the other side, when I saw an Indian trapper, in a fur suit, jump behind a tree about 100 feet ahead of me. I stopped short and yelled to him: 'Kerly mahoo!' That means in the Indian language, 'Come out.'"

"Can you talk Indian, too, 'Doc?'" asked the "lush."

"I knew a few words belonging to this Canadian tribe of Maxeboshas, but I never gave a thorough study to any Indian language except that of the Sioux."

"Lo, the poor Indian," observed the book agent. "What did this man behind the tree say to you?"

"Well, he waited a few minutes, and then he came out," said "Doc." "I saw that he had a fresh haunch of venison slung over his shoulder, and I decided to have some of it. I went up to him and asked him the way to the river and the camp. He pretended not to understand, but I knew better. He shook his head and started to go away and I dropped my rifle and grabbed him. Of course I could have taken a drop on him, but I didn't want to have any shooting. I didn't want a dead Indian. I wanted a live one, who could show me the way back to Gen. Foster's hunting lodge. First, I wrenched the gun out of his hands, and then we went at it. He was a giant in stature and very strong, and I was weak from lack of food and all that hard travel, but I got a hold on him that I had learned in wrestling, and I landed him in the snow. I fell on top of him, and, drawing my knife, I pointed it at his throat and said: 'Now, will you obey me?' He nodded that he would, and so I let him up. I knew that these Indians always carried matches or flints, because they were in the habit of cooking food out in the forest. I kept this fellow covered with my rifle and made him build a fire and cook me some venison, which I ate with some enjoyment, you may be sure. By this time the moon was up. I emptied his gun and gave it back to him, and then I told him to lead me to the camp. He struck off through the forest and I followed him. Well, sir, we traveled all night and about nine o'clock next morning reached the lodge. They had given me up for lost. Yes, sir, all the eastern papers had me dead, but that was one time I fooled 'em. I learned after I got back that the thermometer had registered 40 below."

"What became of the two men who started out with you?" asked the lightning dentist.

"Oh, they got back all right by following the river. A funny thing about that experience. The Indian remained at our lodge a couple of days and became very much attached to me. Afterward, when I went up there, he acted as guide for our party."

"Doc" ceased talking and the "lush" gave one look at the lightning dentist, as if to indicate that he was helpless with admiration.

"The doctor appears to be a man who has had remarkable experiences," said the book agent, later in the evening when "Doc" had gone to his room.

"You don't half know him yet," said the "lush." "He's been a capitalist, a government scout, a circus tumbler and a steamboat pilot."

"And an actor," added the lightning dentist.

"And an opera singer."

"And a stage driver."

"And an author."

A DOG TO BE PROUD OF.

Could Swim Under Water and Turn "Flip-Flaps" in the Air.

It was a way the trappers had to spin a yarn or two and get old Si Limick started, for he was easily the most fluent and imaginative liar that ever struck a trail.

"Speakin' 'bout dogs," broke in Si, with his slow look and honest drawl, "I owned the curi'stest canine 'bout ten year back that ever wagged a tail. He was a ugly little runt an' no good fer b'ars, but when it kum ter small game an' fish he war p'isen."

"What er yar given' us 'bout a dog-fish, Si?"

"Lots o' things in the worl' you uns never heerd on. That there dog uster run roun th' bottom o' a river same's 'twar dry lan'. I seed him swim fer half mile onct un'er th' ice an bring out a fish bigger'n hisself. Th' critter could do 'ithout breathin' from 15 ter 20 minutes, 'cordin ter how he war feelin'. I rigged up a regalar bellyban' with a blowed up bladder 'tached by a rope. That thar doggone pup uster git inter th' mersheen on his own hook an' go sailin."

"But how would he sail back ag'in th' win', Si?"

"He'd jist haul in th' bladder, jam it atween his forrard legs fer a life persarver an' paddle in. He never turned out in th' mornin' 'ithout seein' jist how th' win' war.

"But what beat me 'bout that dog war his 'gility. You uns orter seen him workin a rabbit in a brush heap. He'd be a yelpin one side, an the rabbit would start fer ter run outen t'other side. He'd make 'bout th' orfules' jump you ever see. When he'd be half way over, the rabbit'd whirl, an right thar in th' air that thar dog'd turn a rare en flip-flap an' lan' whar he started at time ter catch th' rabbit. Never heard o' no other dog could do it."—Detroit Free Press.

How It Happened.

"And so you are engaged to Cholly Chubbins," said one girl.

"Yes," was the reply.

"How did he ever persuade you to marry him?"

"Oh, he hasn't persuaded me to marry him. You know that lovely solitaire ring he had?"

"Yes."

"Well, I wanted it to wear to a progressive eucher party."—Indianapolis Journal.

Paralysis, Diabetes and Dropsy.

Something from South Dakota.

Stephen T. Seymour, of Tyndall, Bon Homme County, Gives His Experience and Asks Advice.

From the Journal, Detroit, Mich.

The following communication was received by Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

TYNDALL, SOUTH DAKOTA.
September 10th, 1896.

Dr. Williams' Med. Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

"GENTLEMEN:—I wish to state that in 1888 I began to suffer with diabetes, and for four years, or until 1892, was under the care of a physician, who declared I was cured. Early in 1894 I began to bloat a good deal, my kidneys were feverish and did not do their work, urination was painful, my heart's action was impaired, and I had a general sense of suffocation and chronic constipation. My digestion was so bad that I could only sleep a few minutes and I would wake with my limbs numb, and feel as though I were goingto die.

"I was of course unable to do any work; for though not confined to my bed, labor was impossible, and so I continued until July, 1895, when I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I had not used half the first box before I began to get relief, and after taking five boxes considered myself cured, though as I still have twinges in my back, I am continuing the use of the pills.

"I shall always feel grateful for the good Dr Williams' Pink Pills have done me, and though my means are limited, I shall certainly take them when necessary."

Yours, very truly,
STEPHEN T. SEYMOUR,

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

"Isee," he observed, musingly, "that a yellow whitewash has just been invented." The editor of the New Journalism leaped excitedly from his chair. "Great Scott!" he exclaimed, "who did it? We must secure him at any price as an artist for our colored supplement!"—N. Y. Press.

No other line affords such opportunities for the home seeker or investor to see and enjoy Texas. Cheap lands for all. Low rate Home Seekers' Excursion Tickets on sale at all points in Texas and Louisiana February 16th, March 2nd and 16th, April 6th and 20th, May 4th and 18th.

A WOMAN'S BODY.

What Its Neglect Leads to. Mrs. Chas. King's Experience.

A woman's body is the repository of the most delicate mechanism in the whole realm of creation, and yet most women will let it get out of order and keep out of order, just as if it were of no consequence. Their backs ache and heads throb and burn; they have wandering pains, now here and now there. They experience extreme lassitude, that don't-care and want-to-be-left-alone feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness and the blues, yet they will go about their work until they can scarcely stand on their poor swollen feet, and do nothing to help themselves. These are the positive fore-runners of serious womb complications, and unless given immediate attention will result in untold misery, if not death.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will, beyond the question of a doubt, relieve all this trouble before it becomes serious, and it has cured many after their troubles had become chronic.

The Compound should be taken immediately upon the appearance of any of these symptoms above enumerated. It is a vegetable tonic which invigorates and stimulates the entire female organism, and will produce the same beneficial results in the case of any sick woman as it did with MRS. CHAS. KING, 1815 Rosewood St., Philadelphia, Pa., whose letter we attach:

"I write these few lines, thanking you for restoring my health. For twelve years I suffered with pains impossible to describe. I had bearing-down feelings, backache, burning sensation in my stomach, chills, headache, and always had black specks before my eyes. I was afraid to stay alone, for I sometimes had four and five fainting spells a day. I had several doctors and tried many patent medicines. Two years ago I was so bad that I had to go to bed and have a trained nurse. Through her, I commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I never had anything give me the relief that it has. I have taken eight bottles, and am now enjoying the best of health again. I can truthfully say it has cured me."

But a little cough has taken many a man away from his coffers. The "slight cough" is somewhat like the small pebble that lies on the mountain side, and appears utterly insignificant. But any cough, taken in time, can be cured by the use of —Simon Weldele is receiving brick for his new building to be put up early in the spring.

—Justice Frazee and a jury spent a couple of days this week finding out the proper settlement of a threshing bill.

—Eagle readers claim that "Mother Grundy" didn't have near all the scandals; and is not apt to publish them all.

—F. H. Lindsley has purchased the elegant home of John Coolen, on Third Street and intends to occuyy it about the 1st of May.

—Several Minneapolitans while in our village lately took advantage of our cheaper markets to stock up with butter and eggs for a season.

—Owing to a bronchial attack we were unable to be present at the celebration on the 22nd; but understand that things passed off pleasantly as usual.

—The graduating class of the Delano High School is studying with renewed diligence since holidays. They intend to keep up the reputation of the school at last.

—Another dog scrape has struck town. Fred Lindsley shot Hi Dyer's dog. Hi didn't want him shot, so now demands pay for the animal. It may result in a law suit.

—John Deem received a fracture below the knee on Friday. He was riding a horse and driving several others, when one of the loose ones kicked him with the above results. Dr. Shrader set the broken bone.

—Some of the boys who attended the masquerade a short time ago complain that one of the maskers overstepped the mark of propriety and then slopped clear over by apologizing and saying after the ball that he thought his masked partner was Mrs. ——.

—The Trustees of the Presbyterian Church and the mempers of the Ladies Aid society are requested to meet at the Post Office promptly at four o'clock Saturday afternoon. Object of meeting; a talk on business of the Church.

MRS. ANNA LENDSLEY.
Sec. P. S. S.

—Quite an excitement occurred at the Post Office building on Monday evening about closing up time. The back windows were smashed in and two boys, Emil Weise and Jesse Cashian appeared in the presence of Mr. O'Hair, young Weise with a revolver drawn on the Post Master. No blood was shed; but it is possible that in the future there will be less cause for talk than has been the case for several years. Such things are apt to have tragic endings and it is well to be warned before it is to late.

—We were surprised this week to receive a letter from our old friend Wm. Gent, of Greenwood, dated at Finney's Siding, Va. We didn't know he had gone. He wants his GAZETTE sent there for the present. Mr. G. says his rheumatism is better he gives mineral water the credit. So long as 'tain't "Moonshine" ill do. He says he is in the great coal belt of Virginia; no end to it. Lots of logs are being exported from that region. Why don't they saw them when they have plenty of coal to make steam? He thinks it payed him about 200 per cent to vote for Bryan, as he finds all his Virginia relatives, save one are Bryan men. Don't let your rheumatism get worse William, when you read in the GAZETTE that it was 16 below zero here, last Tuesday.

—Our village and school district officers seem rather indifferent regarding the peoples rights to be represented on their respective boards by a full board. The village board should consist of a President, Recorder and three Trustees; Several months ago the president tendered his resignation; but no successor has been appointed, and the board has been doing business minus a member. This is not right and we are not sure that it is legal to continue to do business so. The school board should, according to law, have six members. Mr. Vorse, a member, moved to Buffalo; but the board continues to do business without him. Five members is not, under all circumstances considered a legil board. These boards should fill vaciencies. Do they think themselves the only men in the village or the district fit to be members of their honorable bodies?

—Ladies Aid met at 3 p. m. Wednesday. Owing to illness and the place of meeting we were present. Why didn't Mrs. B. come? She got tirid because nobody came. She never came here. Mrs. S couldn't come, the baby had 11 spasms Sunday, hooping cough, parezoric, ipecac, wheels for pillow shams, train was four hours late. (The society here had got so far ahead of the reporter that we had to desist from further report). Two new arrivals gave us an opportunity to start in again. It's not so cold. Where have you been? Gittin' about. (By this time we made up our mind that Mother Grandy wasn't coming; so laid aside our writing utensils, and concluded we couldn't get a very big yarn out of the L. A. S. notwithstanding the common report that such societies usually engague in running down their neighbors. They didn't do it.

The Superintendant of School in Stearns County is defending himself in the trial that about 90 schools in the county used German Catholic Histories of the Bible as readers among other things charged.

Messrs Lampson Culkin and Dare of this district mingled with the Newspaper boys awhile Thursday night at the Windsor Hotel. We presume the balance of our representatives were too busy making Laws for an hour or two visit with editors.

Township and village elections will be held at an early day. Help place in nomination, and to elect the best men for the places. All the best men are not in one party in every place. Have good, honest, sober, reliable officers and then you will have town and village affairs in that line.

When roads for weeks, are in the condition that they now are, and have been, some provision should be made to level down a few drifts and do away with the back breaking, and sled breaking holes. People can't make time over such roads, and it would not require very much labor to fix them.

The local option petitions appear to be longer, stronger and more than ever persistant this year. The bill for county option will, doubtless, receive the support of the solid delegation from the 3th Legislative district. Our men are all known as for temperance, and at least one of them as an ardent worker in the cause.

Ida Grove Era, Iowa: The Sheldon Mail mentions a mother in that city who says that after her girls "finish" in college, she intends to give them a course in bakeology, roastology, stitchology and mendology.

New York Dispatch: A Minnesota father of triplets went to Washington to learn that the United States Government does not pension triple expansion populators after all. This country really offers few inducements to positive genius.

The Broad Axe: A daily paper says: "There is now in the banks of New York alone, over $548,000,000, or about one third the total currency in circulation." How money locked up in banks can at the same time be in circulation is not explained.

St. Paul Dispatch: The cause of free silver has lost one of its most powerful advocates in the sudden death of William St. John, late president of the Mercantile National Bank of New York and treasurer of the democratic national committee.

The Toledo Blade is now waging a great fight against trusts and monopoly; but it would have more sympathy ane command greater confidence if it had "stood by its guns" in the campaign of '96. LONG AGO.

FROM THE METHODIST HERALD.

once knew all the birds that came
And nested in our orchard trees,
For every flower I had a name—
My friends were woodchucks, toads and bees;
I know what thrived in every garden,
What plants would die or be nourished too.
Oh, I am very learned now—
But that was very long ago!

I know its folly to complain
Of whatsoever fate may decree,
Yet, were not wishes all in vain,
I tell you what my wish would be:
I'd wish to be a boy again,
Back with the friends that I used to know,
For I was, oh, s happy then—
But that was very long ago!

THE Sherburne County People will doubtless, want A. N. Dare's term of office continued: as it not only gives them a first class representative; but their Star News is even better than before.

THE Immigration bill that was vetoed by Cleveland was passed over his head. So, now, if you can't bring your relatives or friends over from the old country don't blame Grover; but the Republican Congress.

BROTHER H. I. Peterson, of Litchfield Independent who went as a delegate to the National Editoral Association meeting at Galveston, Texas, writes home to his paper that he thinks things pretty moist at that place.

ZENE C. BOHREN, a St. Paul man, and known through the State as a live traveling salesman for years, died at his home on Dayton Avenue, on Friday, Feb. 26th. Acker Post, of which he was a charter member, took charge of the funeral. Zene will be missed.

QUEEN OLGA, of Greece, is said to be a Russian princess, and was an honorary admiral in the Russian fleet. She returned her insignia of office to Russia saying she could not hold office in a fleet that has fired upon the Greeks. She has gained the confidence of her people by this act of patriotism.

REPRESENTATIVE Poetz of Scott county has a bill before the Legislature to submit to the people at the next election. A constitutional amendment providing that no person shall be eligible to be elected to the same county office except Judge of Probate, for more than two consecutive terms." Why except any office? The "boss" would then arrange matters to have that office for life regardless of who held the others.

GROVER CLEVELAND vetoed the proposed amendment to the immigration bill. We think from reading his message on the subject he did the proper thing. It don't appear to have been very carefully drawn to aid in peopling our country with desirable citizens, and excluding many who would be good citizens while the most undesirable might come in under its workings. There is plenty of land in this country yet. Why stop it being occupied by people who become citizens of the United States?

Takes Both Sides.

The St. Peter Herald says: "While we felt that Mr. Lind was grossly misused by the Dispatch in the late campaign, we also felt that nothing would be gained in a suit to disprove the statements" and "As a disagreement resulted, it would be wise now to drop the suit, which, we understand is to be renewed."

Under the head "Its a Fact" the same paper says: "That the jury in the Lind libel suit failed to agree and a new trial will result. Even that is better than a verdict for a dollar."

Perhaps the Herald had not yet got through with the "social relations with the social press."

THE New York World publishes a number of answers to the question sent out by them "If the National Convention meet tomorrow would William J. Bryan again be chosen as the democratic candidate for President?" The World says; "The result is an extraordinary consensus of opinion, showing, with hardly an exception, that the Democratic organizations everywhere, as well as the Democratic National Committee, are as devoted to Mr. Bryan as ever. A majority of them believe that he will not only be nominated but elected in 1900.

From Minnesota comes:

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 27.

Mr. Bryan not only reanimated the democratic party; he reorganized it and today it is distinctly the champion of popular rights. At a convention held now he would be named for President with practical unanimity.

T. D. O'BRIEN.
Minnesota Democratic National Committeeman.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 27.

William Jennings Bryan would be named to head the ticket with scarcely a dissenting voice.

THOMAS J. MCDERMOTT.
Democratic State Committeeman.

A Specimen of City Journalism.

The Editors and Publishers of the state at their recent meeting were treated to a specimen of country journalism by Mr. Hendryx in his speech. We clip the following from the Minneapolis Times, which will show that the city press is affected much after the same manner:

"If the St. Paul "Globe" will insist upon rushing to the defense of Jim Hill whenever The Times finds it necessery to criticise that gentleman, or to direct public attention to his dangerous schemes, it must expect to have its feelings hurt. The Times wants no advice, and certainly will not tolerate interference from a rickety old concern, that is simply ligerous superfluous on the bounuy of one or two corporations it is able to delude into the notion that there are people with whom it still has some influence. There was never a more transparent fraud in journalism than the St. Paul "Globe". The Times feels that it owes the public an apolgy for having condescended to kick the poor old thing even though it did snarl and get in the way."

Goverment Makes Money.

Although the leaders of the republican party are agreed that a further agitation of disturbing propositions indulged in during the recent campaign only tends to delay the revival of business activity and have wisely concluded to give the people a much needed rest and President-elect McKinley a chance to carry out the promises made in St. Louis, the professional bonds mongrels and an accommodating press are still at it to annoy the public with their everlasting lamentations over the direful consequences sure to befal the American people lest they rid themselves of groenbacks and treasury notes and entrust certain individuals with the profitable function of controlling the output of paper currency. Tradition and the honor of the republican party will hardly permit the execution of this so neatly arranged scheme; however, prudence suggests the necessity of constant watchfulness and past experience the danger of complete subjugation by daring and unscrupulous speculators. Let it be borne in mind that it is much easier to defend than to conquer. The function to issue money has always been held to be the privilege of the government. Once relinquished and it is likely to remain so forever.

Among our Exchanges.

Penny Press: This is the way the Irishman puts it: "If Bryan had been elected it would have been 16 to 1; but now McKinley is elected its nothing to ate!"

Ida Grove, (Iowa) Era: Woman suffrage got the black eye in Nevada.

St Cloud Times: Indications are that, aside from the tariff, the policies of the Cleveland and McKinley administrations will not widely differ.

Ida Grove Era (Iowa) A jury in the district court at Ottumwa has returned a verdict for $232 52 against the Western Union Telegraph compay because of a delayed message.

Ida Grove (Iowa) Era: The Holstein well has been completed. It is over 2000 feet deep and water comes to about 280 feet from the top. The necessary machinery has been sent for and the people up there expect to be using water from their new well before long.

Weeping Water (Neb) Republican: A miller, who has tested the experiment says that ten per cent, of corn mixed with wheat and ground, makes a flour that no one can tell from pure wheat product. Since this flour is more wholesome and healty, it would seem advisable for the people to adopt it now that corn is so cheap and wheat is scarce and high.

Prison Mirror: "Why not employ the convicts on the roads of Minnesota?" asks the Anoka Union. There are hundreds of good reasons why it should not be done, and the most convincing argument, that would appeal strongly to taxpayers, is that at the present low wage of labor the work could be done more cheaply by free labor than by the convicts.

Waseca Herala: Another demo-rep gold man is provided for by our gold bug Governor, Clough. F. W. M. Catcheon, a rabid railroad and gold democrat, of St. Paul, has been given the place of C. H. Pettit, the Minneapolis republican, in the management of the State reform school. How much longer will it take the people to find out that the gold bondocracy have entire control of the McKinley and Clough republicans as well as of the Grover Cleveland democrats, and that they train in two parties simply to fool and plunder the masses? The people ought to open their eyes and ears and receive more light.

New York World: It is reported that Lexow committeemen think "no drastic legislation coucerning the trust will be necessary. Perhaps not, if we only had a "drastic" Attorney-General to enforce laws already on the statue books.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26, 1897.

Senator Hill's resolution calling upon Sectetary Olney for copies of all communications to and from Consul General Lee, which was addopted by the Senate without a desenting voice, is intended to solve the mystery as to the truth of the sensational statements saying that General Lee had either actually tendered his resignation as Council General to Cuba, or threatened to do so, unless the administration gave him better backing than it has been giving him in his fight to secure justice for Americans arrested in Cuba. It is also believed that it was intended as an affront to President Cleveland. It is customary in such resolutions to request the President to furnish the desired information, if in his opinion it is compatable with public interests. Senator Hill ignored the President entirely, and his resolution askes Secretary Olney for the information. Congress feels very ugly towards the administration on account of its Cuban policy, but there is no time left to do anything now, except to pass the appropriation bills.

Mr. Bryan was in Washington two days this week, and was the recipient of much attention. He was also the central figure in several important politicial conferences.

Representative Baily, of Texas, gave the republicans a good-natured raking over in a speech which did not overlook the assistant republicans, about their embarrassment in distributing 60,000 offices among 350,000 applicants, and made the prediction that every one of the fifty Congressional districts which the republicans carried last November by majorities of less than 1,000 would go democratic at the next election. "Four years ago", said Mr. Baily, "you laughed at our embarrassment; now we laugh at yours. You have no more chance of escaping the wrath of the office-seekers at the next Congressional elections than we had of escaping the disapproval of the people for the maladministration of the administration about to retire from power."

That a majority in the House would like to see the civil service law thrown overboard was shown by the hearty applause with which they received the assertion of Delegate Flynn, of Oklahoma, that if he had his way he would wipe out the civil service law and fill every office with a republican within twenty four hours after McKinley's inauguration. Representative Grosvenor, of Ohio, also jumped all over the civil service law and declared his belief that it would be repealed. Representative Baily in reply to a direct question as to what he thought of the law promptly said: "I think it is a humbug", and when asked why the democratic party didn't repeal it when they had the power he said: "We didn't have sence enough then, but we shall know better here after." Representative Brosius, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Committee on Civil Service Reform, defended the law and accused Grosvenor of haying by his talk against it "fleshed a sword in the heart of the President elect", whatever that may mean. Whatever Mr. McKinley may do there is little doubt that Grosvenor will have a numerous support if he wishes to lead a fight against the law in the next House, and it will not be surprising if he does it.

The Senate Committee on Public Lands has this week been trying to get at all the bottom facts connected with the recent issue of a Florida land patent for 23,000 acres to Mr. Perrine.

Mrs. Cleveland's step-father. Senator Tillman, who is a member of the committee, was especially active in cross-examining the witnesses who have appeared before the Committee. The Committee has not yet reached a conclusion as to the regularity and legality of the patent.

Notwithstanding the protest of fruit importers, who claim that foreign fruits do not compete to any material extent with American products, in as much as they are mostly put on sale at a different season of the year, the republicans of the Ways and Means Committee have decided to place a duty upon tropical fruits which importers declare will be practically prohibitory.

There is trouble and a heap of it, ahead of Mark Hanna. The publications of interviews, in which he states that his first work upon entering the Senate will be to undertake the job to boss the passage of the tariff bill, has aroused the ire of a number of republican Senators and Mr. Hanna may start his Senatorial career by getting himself mercilessly snubbed. It is very saf eto say that he will not be a Senator long before he will regret announcing his intention to boss the body. Bossing the Senate is a very difficult job, as Mr. Hanna may learn if he will inquire of Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland, both of whom made failures in their several attempts to assume the role which he seems to think is as easy as buying impecunious delegates to a republican convention.

The Reform Parties are the Peoples Friends.

BUFFALO GAZETTE:

Dear Friend:—We are well aware of your attitud toward reform parties and the glorious stand you made maintained though-out the late stuggle is a full warrant to your many friends of your devotion to a grand principle. And tis very refreshing to us when assailed on all hands as reformers sometimes are to fesl that we have so able a defender as the "GAZETTE" and one ever willing to help us defend our cause. We appreciate these favors, and hope you will always be found in the thickest of the fight for the cause of the "People". We are asked many times to outline our reforms. For our opponents seem to think that under the present gold standard and backed up by the proposed protection of McKinley. We will be living and enjoying the best form of government ever given to the world of man. There is one thing that is painfully evidenced by the last election and that is, that the most ungodly frauds, deceptions coercion and terrorism was practiced and allowed, that ever in our history as a nation, stained the pages of any record of political campaigns,—on America's (?) Free Soil. How in the name of reason a political party can hope for a continuance in power, when every action is simply against the masses, and selfish greed is the most gloring object for which the party is strugling.

During the campaign there was a continual lovefeast between the money powers, the trusts and corporations. And these in turn controled the press and the voting hanger-on of all the cities and comunities everywhere. debtors were threatened. And many a poor devil was made to tremble under the fear of a loss of work, and prospective suffering. Assurances of immediate prosperity, raise of wages. Starting up the whels of commerce all along the lines. And perminent implyment, with a good healthy demand for all American products were all promised if McKinley would "Get There".—While ruin devastation, death and destruction, was the bloody crass that hung over the thousand of doubting, trembling voters if—Mr. Bryan was elected. Confidence was the gain, and the poor dupes whose hearts were filled with despare took a big chaw of confidence and voted—as it has turned out in many a case—to their own doom, suffering and death in many instances.

Any party, or body, of business men with brains, should know the remedy for these miserable times, is soely and simply more money, not confidence, nor promises, these all fade away. When the sterner realities of cash, hard cash, and plenty of it, are the imperative demands of the times. A decision of the U. S. Suprem court, covers all these grounds and comes down to business in a handsome sensible manner, in substance as follows:—"There are times, when the exigencies of the state rightly absorb all subordinate considerations of private interest, convenience, or feelings and at such times the temporary though compulsory acceptance by a private individual, of the government credit, in lieu of the debtors obligation to pay, is one of the slightest forms in which the necessary burdens of society can be sustained.

When the currency disappears, as it often does in the time of war, when business begins to stragnate and general bankruptcy is imminent, then the government must have power at the same time to renovate its own resources, and to revive the drooping energies of the Nation, by supplying it with a circulating medium. "What that medium shall be, what its character and qualities will depend upon the greatness of the exigency and the degree of promptitude which it demands.

"These are Legislative Institutions the heart of the native must not be crushed out. The people must be added to pay their debts and meet their obligations, the debtor interest of the county represents its bone and sinew and must be encouraged to persue its avocations. If relief were not afforded, universal bankruptcy would ensue, and industry would stop, and government would be paralyzised in the paralysis of the people".

The above is the power of the goverment to increase the currency when it is needed. The great and mighty question every individual man must answer, when he runs his hand into a long empty pocket is "Has that time come?" Does not the condition of things demand a larger volumn of money? Where if the power is with us and the times and the business interests of every son of man demands it, why feed us any longer on promises, confidence and waiting to see what J. B. is willing to do about it,—Oh, for the conrage of Lincoln, or the manhood of Bryan, who always places man and his conditions as far superior to parties or institutions. Then we would not languish and die, and while dying be twitted of being an American sovereign. A prince, belonging to a nation with the greatest resounces of any nation under the sun.

In the time of "war our government has a right to increase its volumn of money. In Gods Holy name, when in a time of absolute peace with the world, and peace enjoined on us for 5 years to come, by J. B. we are suffering many of the horrors of war, does it look the part of wisdom, for the officers of the people to fold their hands and let the people suffer, when the remedy is in their hands? But I am told that would be "Fiat" money, and "that's jnst awful don't-yer-know". But don't every man of us have to take 52 cents worth of "Fiat" and add it to 48 cents worth of silver, before we can buy a dollar's worth of sugar, or any manner of exchange be consumated? Now reviewing the many evils, through which we are trying to grub our way. It seems as though most any man and especially a farmer, might define why he was or is a reformer.

The Reform Party, stands for the true interests of the wealth producers. After thirty years of popular government, we have a debt of $35,000,000,000 we have 8,000,000 mortaged homes, 4,000,000 people out of employment, 1,625,000 tenant farmers, and 2,000,000 tramps. During the last 25 years the popular parties haye donated the rich railroad corperations land enough to give us all a farm. In 1890 the farmers and wage workers owned 75 per cent. In the last ten years the toilers of this glorious heme of the free, have increased our national welth to $22,000,000,000 and every dollar has gone into the hands of plutocracy. Both of the popular parties are controlled by Wall Street, and Wall Street by Rothschild. And neither of the old parties, it seems, can extricate themselves out of despond, and blue ruin in which they are at this time wallowing.

Does history show a case of an old party reforming itself?

The new party. The Peoples Party. Bryans Party! Advocates Government ownership of R. R. Telegraphs, telephones, express lines, mines and all national monopolies. A currency safe, sound and flexible issued by the government only. Postal savings Banks, for the safe keeping of the peoples earnings. Free coinage of both gold and silver at 16 to 1.

Graduated income tax, that the school age be raised, and child labor prohibited.

That the hours of labor be reduced to keep apace with inproved machinery. Not exact as much out of men, women and children as is taken out of a machine.

We demand the initative and referendum system. U. S. Senators and President elect by a direct vote of the people.

Municipal ownership of natural monopolies, such as water works, Street R. R., gass and electric lighting etc. Public lands should be reserved fou actual settlers, abolition of gold interest bearing bonds. Interest of any kind should be payable only in such funds as the people do business with.

A government by the people based on the Declaration of Independence.

But if we cannot have these benefits guaranteed to us, may be we should be thankful for the privilege of being born into a life of servitude, to a condition wherein your best suit will be blue over-alls that on a damp day one can smell for miles, there are many other things to be thankful for, but I think the following prayer covers the ground:

THE GOLD BUG'S PRAYER.

Our Father, who art in England, Rothschild be thy name. Thy kingdom come to America; Thy will be done in the United States as it is done in England Give is this day our batch of bonds, that are payable in gold, but not in silver; retire our greenbacks soon, and make silver money of no avail, make all our own obligations payable only in yellow money of Shylock: that we may more truly realize your boundless love, and the mighty sacraficies you have made for us. O Rothschild, give us the votes of the laboring men so to perpetuate monopolies. We know that we have sinned against thee. We have robbed the honest poor and protected the dishonest rich. Help us to pull the wool over common voter's eyes, that at the last moment they may get befogged and cast their vote for us. Lead us not into temptation to help the common people, the farmers and the wage workers. There sence of feelings are blunted by their continual war with proverty. And O Mighty Farther, Rothschild, help us and deliver us from the 16 to 1 craze that has taken possession of the dear people. And above all we beseach thee to help us dazzle the eyes of our people, with the bounties of our tarriff. Make them fight fiercely for us that our coffers may be filled, so that when your servants retire from their labors they may be above to enter into their rest. Thus we shall have the kingdom and the power. Gold bonds and interest and gold as the only recognized standard of money. For ever, and for thy glory. World without end.—Amen.

P. S.—While misery holds high carnival, immense efforts are being made to make the gold bug inaugural the bigest thing of the century. The car of Juggernaut, overlaid with gold will be out and many a wild devotee will feel like going to heaven from under the wheels of that great car. It will be the greatest 'bawl' of the age. $10,000 dresses will be worn. While the poor freeze and starve.

A proposed baby show in New York was declared by Judge Andrews to be illegal, and he further declared that officials had the right to interfere and prevent such exhibitions.

As still further exemplifying the truth of the proverb that there is nothing new under the sun, it is pointed out that there was a horseless wagon as early as 1861. The horse ran away.

A London newspaper man who has written a book on this country describes a visit to some of our war ships, and says that the United States will soon obtain the command of the sea against the whole world.

One of the most shocking occurrences in sporting circles is the discovery that electric saddles are used to stimulate horses on racing tracks. The jockey presses a button, and confidently relies on the old nag to do the rest.

A Boston lawyer who has engaged in agriculture is called a "book farmer" because he has erected an electric windmill. He seems to be ahead of the books, and his neighbors should not be too sure that they will not themselves have to come to electricity and compressed air.

The Chinese scatter rice and provide choice cuts of roast pig over the graves of their dead. The Indian kills the pony of the dead and leaves his bow and arrow at the grave for handy use of the departed. But the Kentuckian who asked to swim in Bourbon whisky while in his coffin tops them all.

A ripple of amusement ran over the country in noting the fact that several eloquent spinisters took an active part in "the congress of mothers" recently in session at Washington. But that was all right. A congress of bright, wide-awake old maids knows more in a minute than the same number of old bachelors would know all day.

The work of excavation going on in the ancient defenses of Jerusalem on the south has brought to light many important specimens of masonry, mosaics, pottery, lamps, inscriptions and coins. This is about the only way Americans are willing to interfere in the affairs of the old world, and they manage to keep at the head of the business of digging up history.

The recent naval maneuvers off Charleston, S. C., were of great importance as demonstrating that modern science enables a war fleet of to-day to maintain a blockade that is practically impassable, except when extraordinary fog conditions prevail. The electric searchlight would disclose the whereabouts of any intending blockade-runner in case of actual war.

The leading members, known as "the royal academicians" in England, recently refused to elect a woman artist to membership. There were four candidates—eminent in art—but "they were only women" and did not receive a single vote to membership in the academy. If these gallant English artists live a few years longer they will hear something drop with a dull, heavy thud.

One of the lions of a little New Jersey town is an old man who has recently completed his ninetieth year. He remembers when the woods were burned and is a perfect storehouse of meteorological information, the exact dates of all the big snowstorms and the cold spells being at his finger ends, ready for use at a moment's notice. Contrary to the custom of most nonogenarians, this old man has used tobacco for three-quarters of a century and has drank strong coffee since he was six years old.

The tongue is a little member, but is full of deadly poison. If that is true of the plain, everyday tongue, how much more of pickled tongue? The young women students at Chicago university revolted against the pickled tongue. The girls say that after eating the tongue they have been ill with symptoms of poisoning. The housekeeper says that the girls have been eating too much molasses candy. Certainly the girls' tongues are not yet in pickle. But candy or pickles, it should not require a university course to teach that the average girl does not need much additional sweetness or—tongue.

The crumbling of trusts is a renewed proof of the natural law that no dynasty, in politics or business, is safe from the struggle of competition. The larger the field of operations the more certain is it that some opponent will arise to restrict the excesses of greed and prevent the exactions of a monopoly. The window glass trust is the latest that is shivering in its sash. The breaking of the steel rail trust, the smashing of the window glass combination and the fall of the lead aggregation, even if sugar remains undissolved and rubber unstretched, will revive the old proverb: "No trust, no bust."

Rhode Island is agitated from center to circumference over the recent crushing expose of a weather prophet whose fame had grown to be a matter of state pride. He was especially great in forecasting cold and snowy winters and backward springs and generally hit the nail on the head every time. In fact, so accurate were his predictions that almanacs soon went into disuse all over the state. Now it has transpired that this human barometer had a tame groundhog, and he consulted Arctys monax before going on record. The glory has departed, but the groundhog still shines with refulgent luster.

RUSSIA AND GREECE.

Break Off Diplomatic Relations with Each Other.

A Hitch in the Concert of the Powers Occurs—The British Policy Announced—Popular Indignation in Athens.

London, March 2.—A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople says that all relations between the courts of St. Petersburg and Athens have been broken off. The Athens papers state that King George will shortly proceed to Thessaly to maneuver 25,000 men on the Pharsalia plains; 3,000 troops who were in garrison at Janina have been dispatched to the frontier. It is alleged that they pillaged Christian villages while en route.

Russia Issues an Ultimatum.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 26. — Russia, through the Russian minister at Athens, M. K. Onou, has called upon Greece to withdraw all of her troops and the fleet from Crete within three days. The foregoing semiofficial announcement was accompanied by a long and involved statement of the motives actuating Russia, namely: That, to prevent the extension of the revolution to other portions of the Turkish empire imperiling the peace of Europe, a stop must be put to the action of Greece, which is in opposition to international law. Before negotiations for a future Cretan constitution can be entered upon, it is asserted, Russia has resolved to restore order in Crete. Then, after the Greek evacuation, under the protection of the powers, an autonomous government would be installed under the suzerainty of the sultan. In this policy, it is claimed, Russia is supported by France, Germany and Austria.

Great Britain's Policy.

London, Feb. 26.—In the house of lords Lord Salisbury announced that a telegram had been sent to the British representative at the capital of each of the combined European powers, the phraseology of which was as follows:

Inform the government to which you are accredited that her majesty's government propose to make the following declaration of the policy they intend to pursue, which they believe to be in accordance with that of their allies:

"First, That the establishment of administrative autonomy in Crete is necessary to the termination of international occupation of that island.

"Second, That subject to such system of administrative autonomy Crete ought to remain a portion of the Turkish empire.

"Third, That the governments of Turkey and Greece ought to be informed of this resolution.

"Fouth, That if either Turkey or Greece should persist in a refusal when required to withdraw her naval and military forces from the island, the powers should impose their decision by force."

Greece Remains Firm.

London, Feb. 27.—The Athens correspondent of the Times telegraphs that Prime Minister Delyannis has informed him that Greece's decision to maintain her army in Crete is irrevocable, but that the troops will abstain from the offensive. They will only protect the Christians. Greece will not declare war against Turkey unless the Turks invade Thessaly or the powers render the position of the Greek troops in Crete unbearable.

Indignation Against the Powers.

Athens, Feb. 27. — The popular indignation against the great powers shows no signs of waning and if the people had their way they would fight with arms in their hands against the combined forces of Europe in defense of their right to protect the Christians in Crete. It is not alone among the people that this feeling prevails. Parliamentary and official opinion strongly favors resistance to the demands of the powers.

Concert of the Powers Broken.

London, March 2.—The Daily Chronicle says there is little doubt that the serious hitch in the concert of the powers is due, first, to the lack of wisdom on the part of the government, and, secondly, to the wrath of Emperor William, who, the Chronicle says, deeply resents the form of Lord Salisbury's announcement of the policy of Great Britain toward Crete, especially the suggestion that Great Britain has taken the lead in the concert.

Many Mills Resume.

The Greene & Daniel yarn mills at Central Falls began on a 60-hours-a-week schedule Monday, after being on a 40-hour schedule since last summer. The company employs over 1,000 persons. The mill of the Farwell Worsted company, employing 500 hands, resumed operations Monday, after a long period of curtailment.

Hartford, Conn., March 2.—The E. N. Welsh Manufacturing company of Bristol will start up the manufacture of clocks again about April 1. The factory has been idle for about two years.

Mardi Gras Opens.

New Orleans, March 2.—Rex arrived on the government lighthouse tender Joseph Henry, accompanied by a large fleet of boats. The pageant of entry was gorgeous, and besides about 1,500 state troops there were two companies of marines and two companies of blue jackets from the Maine and Texas. Capts. Glass and Crowninshield rode in carriages with the king's suite. The French and American war ships fired salutes, and the fleet in the harbor blew whistles and made elaborate displays.

Bank Crash in Missouri.

St. Louis, March 1.—State Bank Examiner C. O. Austin on Saturday closed the Mullanphy savings bank, a state institution, which has been in operation here for more than 25 years. Assistant Attorney-General Jeffries applied to Judge Valiant for the appointment of a receiver for the Mullanphy savings bank. He placed the bank's total liabilities at $807,630 and the available assets at $567,114.

An Old Firm Goes Under.

Chicago, March 1. — The big retail clothing and men's furnishing house of Willoughby, Hill & Co., Madison and Clark streets, was closed by the sheriff. Judgment by confession was entered by the firm in favor of the Fort Dearborn national bank for $81,611. The firm was organized in 1870 by C. L. Willoughby and D. K. Hill.

M'KINLEY LEAVES CANTON.

Starts on His Trip to Washington to Be Inaugurated.

Canton, O., March 2.—Maj. McKinley's home city was once more ablaze Monday evening with illuminants and fireworks, and the sounds of bands of music, drum corps and marching men strongly reminded all of the stirring incidents preceding and following the 3d of November. The citizens, together with business men, had arranged for a public demonstration to bid farewell to their honored and beloved citizen and neighbor.

Just before the train pulled out of the depot Maj. McKinley consented to make a short address from the platform of the coach:

"My Neighbors and Friends and Fellow-Citizens: On the eve of departure to the seat of government, soon to assume the duties of an arduous responsibility, as great as can devolve upon any man, nothing could give me greater pleasure than this farewell greeting—this evidence of your friendship and sympathy, your good will, and, I am sure, the prayers of all the people with whom I have lived so long, and whose confidence and esteem are dearer to me than any other earthly honors. To all of us the future is as a sealed book, but if I can, by official act, or administration, or utterance in any degree add to the prosperity of our beloved country, and the comfort and well-being of our splendid citizenship, I will devote the best and most unselfish efforts of my life. [Loud and continuous applause and cries of 'We know you will, major.'] The assumption of the chief magistracy is of such grave importance that partisanship cannot blind the judgment or accept any other considerations, but for the public good of all, to every party and every section. With this thought uppermost in my mind, I reluctantly take leave of my friends and my neighbors, cherishing in my heart the sweetest memories and the tenderest thoughts of my old home—my home now, and I trust my home hereafter, so long as I live. I thank you and bid you all good-by." [Tremendous applause.]

Canton, O., March 1.—Saturday morning a splendid oil painting of Mother McKinley was sent to the major, accompanied by a modest note asking him to accept the portrait as a slight token of the esteem in which he is held by his Canton friends. It was presented by a dozen or fifteen old and close friends, who arranged the sitting of the aged lady without her son's knowledge for an artist who came here to paint the major's picture.

A FAMOUS MONASTERY.

Hospice of St. Bernard Buried in Snow and Debris.

Paris, March 2.—An avalanche of great volume and almost irresistible power swept down upon the buildings of the famous monastery of St. Bernard Sunday night. A portion of the avalanche demolished the left wing of the monastery and buried the hospice deep in snow and debris from the mountain side.

Immediately the avalanche had passed the monks began to dig a tunnel and soon made their exit. They prepared quarters in the Hotel de St. Louis, a smaller building, containing the storehouse for food and lodgings for poor wayfarers. That the good monks, whose lives are devoted to ecclesiastical duties and benevolence, are in no imminent need of the succor that they have so many times extended to snow-blinded travelers is assured by every dispatch sent here.

Every school pupil in the land recalls stories about this hospice, its keepers and the wonderful tales of travelers rescued from death by the dogs, who carry casks of cordials and even packages of food strapped to their bodies. The monastery was founded in 962 A. D., by St. Bernard de Menthon, and for these many years this brotherhood of Augustinian monks has administered gratuitously to the sufferings of travelers.

THE BICYCLE RACE.

Schinneer Wins in the Trial of Endurance at Chicago.

Chicago, March 1.—Fred Schinneer, the Bohemian, and a resident of this city, won the six days' bicycle race at Tattersall's, which ended Saturday night at 10:05 o'clock. The final contestants and the distance they covered were as follows: Schinneer, 1,788 miles, 4 laps; Miller, of Chicago, 1,764 miles, 1 lap; Ashinger, 1,727 miles; Lawson, the "Terrible Swede," 1,707 miles, 1 lap; Hansen, 1,603 miles, 3 laps; Iliff, the legless rider, 461 miles.

Waters of the Ohio Recede.

Cincinnati, Feb. 27.—At eight o'clock Friday night the glad news was given out at the water works that the gauge there showed by the slightest margin, scarcely a quarter of an inch, a receding tide. Up to that hour, from eight a. m., the river has been stubbornly at a standstill of 61 feet 2 inches. Besides driving hundreds of families from their homes, the high waters have imprisoned hundreds of families in their homes, many being without means of making known their distress. The most careful, painstaking explorations and investigations are necessary on the part of the relief expeditions or many isolated victims may die of exposure or starvation before discovered. The cold wave has added to the perils and miseries. Thousands of men are either out of work because of shops shutting down or are unable to travel to and from work.

Scores of Lives Lost.

City of Mexico, March 1.—The latest news from the mine disaster at Zacatecas shows the calamity fully as bad as first reported. Fire broke out in Sanamoro mine, one of the properties of the Sombrerete companies, and communicated to the San Francisco mine. The principal shaft in the former is 3,000 feet deep, and a rescuing party went down to the bottom, but were nearly suffocated by smoke. There is no longer doubt that 170 miners perished.

To Change Her Divorce Laws.

Bismarck, N. D., March 1.—The house has passed, years, 44, nays, 5, the bill introduced by Speaker Williams extending the period of residence from three months to one year before action for divorce can begin. The bill carries an emergency clause declaring that the state and its judiciary is scandalized and the moral standing of the state degraded by the conduct of those who come to this state for divorce purposes only.

Can Be Governor and Mayor.

Detroit, Mich., March 1.—Hazen S. Pingree is still mayor of Detroit and governor of the state of Michigan, according to an opinion handed down by the full bench of the Wayne circuit court.

For Mayor of Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—The republican city convention nominated Judge N. C. Sears for mayor on the first ballot.

THE FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

Resume of Its Work—Over 10,000 Bills Introduced.

Washington, March 2. — The Fifty-fourth congress will be held remarkable, principally for what it has failed to accomplish. In one respect—in the number of bills and resolutions introduced—it was a record-breaker. In the house alone over 10,400 bills and 3,100 resolutions were introduced and referred to various committees. Only a fraction of these passed the house and fewer still became laws.

The principal business of the congress, aside from the passage of the appropriation bills, was limited to the first session, the net results of which were the enactment into law of the bills creating the commission to determine the true divisional line between Venezuela and British Guiana; prohibiting prize fighting in the territories; permitting appointments in the army and navy of former United States officers who served in the rebellion; making one year's residence in a territory necessary for a divorce; incorporating the National Society of the Daughters of the Revolution; defining the penalty for interference with railway trains and persons riding thereon and substituting salaries for fees to United States marshals and district attorneys.

Aside from the foregoing measures, the remaining bills (excepting the immigration bill and the joint resolution for an international monetary conference, passed at the second session) were of no general interest. Included in these were 700 private pension bills—an unprecedented number.

In another respect the Fifty-fourth congress was remarkable. This was its failure to pass a single bill providing for public buildings. The house calendar contained 100 bills of this class, including the senate bill for a custom house in New York city. Speaker Reed, however, in his determination to reduce the expenditures to the lowest limit consistent with the necessities of the government, set his face sternly against all legislation of this character. Notwithstanding this circumstance the present congress is the third in American history in which the appropriations have exceeded $1,000,000,000.

A number of important measures which were reported to the house last session and were expected to receive favorable consideration during the present session were either defeated or were left on the calendar. The bill to settle the indebtedness of the bond-aided railways to the govern ment, which was a legacy from the last session, suffered a crushing defeat in January last. The substitute measure prepared by Mr. Harrison, of Alabama, to adjust these claims through the medium of a cabinet commission was not permitted by the committee on rules to come before the house, thus leaving it an open question between the supporters and the opponents of the measure what its fate would have been. In the preceding session upwards of 50 resolutions bearing upon the Cuban insurrection were introduced, although but one passed the house. During the present session the Cuban resolutions introduced have been few in number.

No effort was made at the present session to call up the bills admitting Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma to statehood. The "sound money" men in the house were a practical unit against the admission of any territories which are likely to send advocates of free silver to the senate. Among the bills which passed the house but have not been acted upon in the senate are the Morse bill to prevent the selling of liquor in the capitol; the Brosius bill permitting the establishment of national banks with a capital of $20,000 in towns of 4,000 inhabitants, and the Loud bill to reclassify second-class mail matter.

Much of the time of the senate has been consumed in the discussion of questions relating to our foreign relations, and while no positive action of any kind has been taken, many columns of the Congressional Record have been filled with speeches on these topics. Cuban resolutions have been introduced and pressed for action by the score, but, beyond precipitating debate, nothing has been accomplished. A treaty with Japan has been ratified, putting into immediate operation the clause of the treaty of commerce and navigation negotiated two years ago. The general treaty of arbitration with Great Britain, after being fruitlessly considered for two weeks, went over until the next session. The Alaskan boundary treaty with Great Britain has not even been considered in committee. The Nicaraguan canal bill, which was debated for several weeks, was on the point of final passage with a comfortable majority in front of it when the protest of the minister representing the Greater Central American Republic was received.

ASKED FOR WARSHIPS.

Confirmation of Reported Request of Gen. Lee.

New York, March 2.—A special from Washington to the Herald says that public confirmation of the Havana dispatches printed concerning Gen. Lee's demand for war ships, his threat to resign, and the difference existing between him and the secretary of state is officially given by President Cleveland in a message which he sent to the senate on Monday.

The distinct points made were that Consul General Lee "would not stand another Ruiz murder;" that he demanded the use of war ships for the protection of American citizens, and that he would resign in case he was not supported by the administration. These three points are forcibly brought out in Consul General Lee's cablegrams regarding the case of Charles Scott, a native American citizen, agent of a gas company in Havana.

Whether Consul General Lee was supported in his demands is not known, as none of the communications from the state department in the Scott case is given, but it is shown by two dispatches that Scott was released from solitary confinement on the same day that Gen. Lee threatened to resign.

Mine Caves In.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 2.—Shortly after five o'clock Monday afternoon the residents of Wyoming, six miles northeast of this city, were startled by a report which resembled an earthquake. It was speedily discovered that the surface over the Mount Lookout mine was caving in. When the crash came the post office building, on one of the main streets of the town, was the first to go down. It sank a distance of 25 feet and is a complete wreck. John Derbyshire's house adjoining is also a wreck, the foundation being carried down fully 30 feet, the inmates having a narrow escape with their lives. At the time the cave-in took place there were many miners in the pit who had to wade through water and quicksand up to their necks in order to escape with their lives.

Gold Reserve, $148,582,565.

New York, March 2.—At the beginning of business Monday the gold reserve of the United States treasury amounted to $148,582,565, representing a gain of $264,000 on Saturday. President McKinley goes into office with the gold reserve larger than at any time since the administration of President Harrison. At the end of February, 1891, the gold reserve stood at $149,712,000.

Adopts Gold Standard.

Yokohama, March 2.—The Japanese government has decided to adopt a gold standard of currency upon a ratio of thirty-two and one-third to one. The silver yen or dollar will be gradually withdrawn from circulation and the smaller gold piece will be of the value of five yen. The new standard will go into operation in October next.

Mending Cloth.

The art of mending cloth so that the darned thread is practically invisible is one to be cultivated. When the cloth is sufficiently heavy, this is not difficult to do. Select fine sewing silk, as near the color of the cloth as possible. Insert the needle about half an inch one side of the tear, and run it beneath the surface of the cloth, and continue the thread to half an inch on the other side. Repeat the process in parallel stitches. Draw the edges closely together, but do not lap them. It is better to darn the cloth on the wrong side, but it can be done on the right side if more convenient. Where it is possible lay a wet piece of cotton over the darn on the wrong side. Press a hot iron over it for an instant to allow the steam to pass through the cloth. Then remove the cotton and press the iron against the cloth. Take the care to match the grain of the cloth and the figure and stripe, if there is any.—N. Y. Tribune.

Apples as Ornaments.

At Boston dinner tables the apple is one of the accepted forms of decaration, and several small cut-glass dishes of rosy-cheeked health-producers are used to offset the mound of flowers in the center, and with it form the only spectacular adjuncts to the feast. Very pretty, too, they look, carrying back the fancy of the satiated diner-out to the time when an apple, fragrant, juicy, probably purloined from a forbidden orchard, formed the summum bonum of his existence.—Washington Star.

Taking All the Risks.

"Now, mother," said the bad Boston boy, "before you get down to business let us reason together. You only spoil your slipper, and do me not any good."

"I'll take the risks on this proceeding, George, my son," said the wise Boston mother, as she took a firm grip on the slipper.—Detroit Free Press.

THE OLD CHURCH SOCIABLE.

Come, Nancy, old horse, and keep movin',
I want to get to my tea;
You've been loafin' a little—improvin'
The chance of my dreamin', I see.
'T was the cold and the moonlight, I fancy,
And the snow on the pine and the birch,
But they've sent me back forty year, Nancy,
To the sociable down to the church.

I remember so plain, when I ast her
If I might see her home, and she said:
"Yes, Caleb." By Jinks! if I'd daster,
I'd a sartinly stood on my head.
And when we walked out there together
Right by my old rival, Ike Murch,
My heart was as light as a feather
At the sociable down to the church.

'T was a night of the Lord's own designin'—
Too good for us mortals below:
All still, with the moonlight a-shinin',
And the world fast asleep in the snow.
And she—well, God bless her!—she fitted
The scene like an angel whose perch
Up in Heaven had somehow been quitted
For a sociable down to the church.

Ah, hum! I dunno how I said it,
But somehow I told her, you see,
What would seem mighty flat if you read it,
But means all creation to me.
And there's more in that simple old story
Than in ages of study and search,
For my life's been lit up by the glory
From the sociable down to the church.

Well, Nance, I've been settin' here, dreamin',
And our journey is pretty nigh through.
There's her lamp in the window, a-beamin'—
She knows how I watch for it, too.
The chief of God's blessin's, I'm summin',
Is that I wasn't left in the lurch
When I ast her to marry me, comin'
From the sociable down to the church.

REWARD OF A WOMAN.

"'Oh, gemini, is this a beau? Let me see him again. Ha! I find a beau is no such ugly thing, neither.'—Sheridan."

The girl leaned both her hands on the little rickety, hand-painted lodging-house table, and looked up with laughter and mock admiration in her eyes at her lover, who came and stood before her. But the man looked down at her in eager pleading.

"Ursula, darling, how can you talk in that way—now?"

"How can I? Why, with a pretty grace, I hope."

"Ursula," cried the man, "don't have that mood! It hurts me. It maddens me to waste our minutes so. Oh, my darling, have you no sentiment in you?"

"Sentiment," she began, lightly; but she stopped suddenly and her word trailed off into a sob. "Bertie—"

The man caught her hands quickly.

"What, darling?"

She dropped her head on his breast and her breath came fast.

"You have thought me unsentimental, matter-of-fact, even hard—yes, just a little bit hard—ever since you first knew me; while you were so—so—otherwise."

He held her tightly to him and waited.

"But"—and it was she who spoke passionately now—"I was only acting, Bertie; only showing you a surface heart. And now—now you are going away, and for so long, I will give up acting. I am sentimental—sillily sentimental, if only you knew. I did not show it—I don't know—I was shy, I suppose. I thought you would not care for it—that you would laugh at me."

"Oh, Ursula, Ursula!" he exclaimed. "I believe you would laugh now if you only knew how ridiculous I am—how much I love you. And now I have broken down—you have made me break down. I can never unsay my confession. I have humbled myself—I have laid bare my heart—"

"Ursula, my own! why did you never confess before? I laugh at you! Oh, my darling. I have hungered to hear you say such words."

The eyes of the girl were love-steeped, and her lashes wet, and she raised her head and looked up at the man.

"All this past year you have made me happier than I ever dared hope to be," she whispered, trembling—"the happiest woman in the whole world, I think."

And the man bent and pressed his lips to hers. "But I want to make you still happier," he said, passionately. "I want to take you from all the care and drudgery; to have you all to myself; to guard you, to cherish you—never to part. Oh, if only I had money! This waiting, waiting is awful; and the hope so small, the reward so slow."

"Am I really small—and slow?" she asked, softly.

He laughed back at her. "Not you, dearest, but the getting on, and the pittance; it all seems so endless. Even now I am holding you only to part from you—to go back to the grind. And worse than all is the knowledge that you are also drudging, and I cannot prevent it."

"As there must be waiting, dear, I am glad of the work to fill my time. And," with a soft blush, "I shall be saving for my trousseau."

"Don't Ursula—don't go hoarding your shillings and denying yourself. Some day I will make my pile, and you shall walk in silk attire; and we'll leave the work, and the trouble, and the care, and go off a-wandering in Italy and Greece and Algiers, and every place we've ever set our hearts on."

The hollow-sounding clock upon the painted marble mantelpiece struck five metallic strokes.

"Five o'clock already! This is awful! For a whole year, or longer. Say it again, Ursula—that you love me."

"I love you, Bertie," she said, slowly, and quite solemnly. "I love you. I think I would die for you quite willingly."

"Darling, darling, for a long year—" He caught her up to him in a passionate embrace, his lips met hers again and again; then he turned quickly, and went toward the door.

"There will be the letters," she said, in a voice which strove to be steady and cheerful, for his white, hopeless face hurt her heart. And then he was gone.

Three hours later the man sat at a cheery little dinner in London, a little farewell meal with a few old college friends. After which he went on board his steamer and walked the deck in the starlight, with a pipe for consolation as he thought of the poor and lonely girl he had left, and longed for money to bring him his desire. And so absorbing were these thoughts that the pipe went out, and still he paced to and fro, unheeding, until at last, his elbow being jogged accidentally, he came back to the near present again, and, taking the cold pipe from his lips, tapped it out on the rail. Then, while the ashes were yet floating down to the waters, he went below to his berth and slept soundly.

And the girl Ursula sewed and sewed all the evening by the light of the cheap oil lamp, and smiled stiffly with her lips, and tried not to depress her mother. And then she went to her room and packed her box to go a-governessing on the morrow. And after awhile she went to bed, and there she lay with wide eyes and watched the moonlight on the window; and her heart felt widowed, hopeless, and would not be cheered.

"Your letters are so friendly, dearest, so abominably friendly; they verily starve my heart. Oh, why am I not rich enough to throw up this drudgery and come home to you and hold you in my arms again, and make you say you love me? I have to go over our parting again and again to make myself believe that all you said then is really true. Write me a real love letter next time, darling, to help me bear up."

The girl's cheeks were flushed and her eyes held happiness as she sat by the schoolroom table, with the piled-up work basket neglected before her, and read the words again and again.

And the days and the weeks and the months and the years passed on, and the pile of love letters which came to the girl grew in bulk. Sometimes they were despondent, sometimes cheerful, sometimes hurried, sometimes tender and sometimes the treasured space was overfull of descriptions of new friends or strange places. But the letters never failed to come, and the man never failed to long for the riches which could bring him to the girl's side and make life happy for them.

And the girl longed and longed that she might meet her lover, if only for a day; that they might look into each other's face, and, renewing hope, might start afresh. Some cynic told her that love was fleeting, a question merely of propinquity; but that cynic had not really meant to bruise the girl's endearing heart. Besides, the cynicism was not always true, for this girl's love was strong as ever—stronger. Why should not the man's be the same? He was better equipped for fighting doubts and fears. But the waiting was bitterly long.

At last, when endurance was becoming a habit, there came a shock—a shock of joy. Just a business matter, just money, just repentance to the amount of five hundred a year out of an erstwhile unforgiving uncle. But £500 a year to a little governess, to a waiting lover! It was ecstasy.

The schoolroom was as paradise that morning; the voices of the children as angels' songs. For the waiting, the drudgery, the anxiety were over. Bliss lay within a blue envelope; joy was inscribed in straight lines of copper-plate caligraphy. But the girl uttered no word of happiness; it seemed too wonderful, and she wanted to realize it, and think.

A deed of gift. An anonymous deed of gift—that would be the thing, the girl decided. She would not keep one penny of it back. There seemed something calculating and mercenary in setting aside part for herself; besides, it would be all the same in the end. A deed of gift of £500 a year to Bertie! It was worth all the waiting and the pain and the work. This was her reward.

So the girl carried out her secret plans with a light heart and a happy brow, and the joyful message went across the sea to the man, in the copper-plate caligraphy of the lawyer's clerk; while the girl herself—in the willfulness of near bliss—sent over the sea also just a scrappy little letter, the most matter-of-fact she had ever sent, cheerful and friendly, telling of outside pleasures and daily trifles, of a little picnic in the wood and a village concert—a little letter which would bring back a loving remonstrance in the midst of the tale of good fortune, and which would be a joke against her afterward when the happy secret was known to the full. And she smiled as she sealed and sent it on its way. And then she waited.

There were four and twenty days of the waiting, and the girl never forgot them—never quite lived down the strain of the painful joy, the rapturous anguish, as she pictured her lover's pleasure and endured all the minutes which were bound to pass before she would receive a sign.

"What will he say? Will it be wonder? Will it be only happiness? Will it be—himself?"

At last it came—the first sign of her sacrifice. It was a letter, rather short, because written in a hurry by a busy man; and the girl was able to read it in the ten minutes which were hers before morning lessons:

"Dearest Ursula: This letter will be only a scrap, I'm afraid, but I know that you will forgive that, and I will make it up next time. Truth to tell, I am dreadfully pressed for time. I've had a little windfall left me in rather an odd way, and I've accepted it. Some one has taken a fancy to me, I suppose. (You can understand that, can't you?) So I am going off on a good, long tour, to see all the places I've wanted so long to see—Italy, Greece, and I don't know where else. It's jolly to have a little money at last. Rather a large party of us are going—the Gleesons, the mother and daughter I've written about sometimes—and some friends of theirs I know fairly well; so I expect we shall enjoy ourselves. So glad you are having such a good time, my dear. Picnics and concerts are pleasures which seldom come my way. I will write again as soon as I can, but am uncertain when and where we halt. Yours, in haste, BERTIE."

"A little windfall!" "And I have accepted it!"

The woman's limbs shook and her face became awful as she read. Then she shivered; and then the children came in to lessons.

One more letter crossed the sea from the woman to the man on his wanderings. The word "good-by" was written across a bare sheet of paper, and the man considered that he had been uncivilly treated, and he felt very sorry for himself; but he never looked on the woman's face again.

The silly tale leaked out in time, and the world laughed at the comedy of it. But the woman failed to see the humor, and it was the tragedy which lay at the back of her eyes in all the long years till she died.—The Sketch.

LEGISLATIVE ROUTINE.

Briefly Showing Bills Introduced and Business Finished.

St. Paul, Feb. 24.—The Senate yesterday passed the following bills:

A bill for an act to amend section 452, chapter 6 of the statutes of 1894, relating to Illuminating oils, except cities of 100,000 or over.

A bill for an act to repeal an act authorising the village of Excelsior to establish a water works department, to raise funds therefore etc.

Causes Excitement.

The finding of the charred remains of a child in the ruins of a barn recently burned at Joe Smith's sawmill on Dogget Brook, Crow Wing county, has caused much excitement there. The boy is about nine years of age and is the son of a widower employed at the mill. A woman has been living at the widower's home since the death of his wife, and it is said she abused the boy quite frequently. It is supposed that the boy was killed and flung in or near the barn, which was then set on fire to cover up the crime.

IT is asserted by typographical authorities that the first Bible printed in America was "John Elliott's Indian Bible," in 1663. The language into which this Bible was translated is extinct, and it is said only one or two persons are able to read it.

SOME surprising things were found in the booty captured from the Dervishes by the British at Dongola. Among them were a few coats of mail and helmets which evidently date from the days of the Crusaders. A sword which was found had an inscription in old French. Another sword bore the motto: "Honi soit qui mal y pense."

TREE-TOP FISHERY.

Pleasant Place from Which to Fish on a Midsummer Day.

"John! John!" shouted the rosy little wife of my host in central Florida, from the honeysuckle porch. "John, if you're going to have fish for supper its time to go up the tree."

Well, now, I've fished for all sorts of fish and in some odd places, but thus far I never climbed into a tree to get them, but I didn't ask any foolish questions. John simply replied over his shoulder: "All right!" and we continued our walk through the frost-blackened orange trees, which were just beginning to recover, those that were alive at all, from the havoc of the preceding winter.

We passed beyond the plantation and through the cool shadows of a "hammock," where cypress and palmetto trees were matted together and a winding creek was bridged with a single log. Somewhere along the path John picked ap his rod and a can of bait. Then we came out upon the edge of the bayou. Lazy aligators floated at a little distance or stuck their noses out from their mud beds in the rushes, and having satisfied themselves that neither John nor the stranger had a gun they went on dozing serenely. A heron flapped away and rested himself in a convenient tree. A moccisin snake rolled from a dry log into the water. None of these incidents disturbed my friend, who led the way serenely to the foot of a big tree overhanging the still waters of the bayou. Up this tree we walked by a regular series of board steps, and at the top we crept upon a well-fastened platform, thoroughly shaded by the thick drapery of moss pendant from the framework branches; and, thus ensconced, John proceeded to business, and in half an hour we had the finny wherewithal for a delicious supper.

John enjoyed, and I suppose still enjoys, a practical monopoly of fishing in that lake, for no one thereabouts owns a boat, and, anyhow, the aligators don't approve of boats, the shores are too sedgy and water too shallow for casting, and fishing trees are not found in any considerable number thereabouts. So I borrowed John's primative tackle and thus earned the right to boast that I had fished, among other methods piscatorial, from a tree-top.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

On to the Kootenai.

The call of 1897 is "On to the Kootenai," the wonderfully rich mining country of Montana, Idaho and British Columbia, where so many mines of gold, silver, copper, lead, iron, etc., have been discovered during the last year or two and new towns and industries established. The town of Rossland grew from 300 people to 6,000 in twenty months. Maps and descriptive matter of the entire territory sent free by F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. One who has never seen the improved White French Artichoke grow, can scarcely believe the quantity that can be grown on an acre. Those who have given them a thorough trial the past year report a yield of from 350 bu. to 1,500 bu. per acre. The Artichoke is growing rapidly in favor as a stock food.

A Wonderful Statement

From Mrs. McGillas to Mrs. Pinkham.

I think it my duty, dear Mrs. Pinkham, to tell you what your wonderful Compound has done for me.

I was dreadfully ill—the doctors said they could cure me but failed to do so.

I gave up in despair and took to my bed. I had dreadful pains in my heart, fainting-spells, sparks before my eyes—and sometimes I would get so blind, I could not see for several minutes.

I could not stand very long without feeling sick and vomiting. I could not breathe a long breath without screaming, my heart pained so.

I also had female weakness, inflammation of ovaries, painful menstruation, displacement of the womb, itching of the external parts, and ulceration of the womb. I have had all these complaints.

The pains I had to stand were something dreadful. My husband told me to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine, which I did, and after taking it for a while, was cured. No other kind of medicine for me as long as you make Compound. I hope every woman who suffers will take your Compound and be cured.—MRS. J. S. MCGILLAS, 113 Kilburn avenue, Rockford, Ill.

Over the Precipice

Hosts of invalids tumble to destruction simply because they will exercise no discretion in the matters of eating, drinking and the avoidance of exciting causes, and, above all, in the item of medication. They persist in dosing themselves in season and out of season with drastic and violent remedies, opiates and mineral poisons. During March

Colds and chills are prevalent, and unless the system is strong enough to throw them off, serious illness, often ending in pneumonia and death results.

The Cause Of colds, chills and attendant dangers is found in the blood, poisoned by uric acid, which should be expelled by the kidneys.

The Effect of this kidney-poisoned blood is far-reaching. Health and strength are impossible while it exists. The system is being continually weakened, leaving it open to the ravages of colds, chills, pneumonia and fevers.

The Cure for such a diseased condition is found in Warner's Safe Cure which will restore the kidneys to health and enable them to properly perform their functions. There is no doubt about this. The record of the past is —We hear that a number of boys and girls in the grammar department are determined to pass at the spring examinations. That's right. Don't get left again. You can pass if you work.

—Arrangements are being completed for the school entertainment, on Friday evening, Feby. 12th. This is said to be one of the best entertainments yet, and the little folks hope to raise enough to pay for their organ.

—Any of our readers desiring a package of garden seeds, a treatise on onion culture; or on some insects injurious to stored grain, can have the same by calling at our office while they last. Congressman Towne has supplied us with a lot for distribution.

—The dramatic recital by Mr. J. Frank Fouche, at City Hall, last week, is said by those present, to have been about the average, and deserving of a large audience. The short notice and inefficient advertisement this time was some to blame for a small crowd.

—The school board, we now understand, have appointed Charles M. Conzent to fill the vacancy caused by the removed of Mr. Vorse to Buffalo, Charley can do it; he has already been over and visited school and will do what he can to aid in making the school the best in the county.

—Revs. Farber and Anderson have been conducting the series of meetings at the M. E. Church during the past two weeks. The audience could be larger, and possibly will be if continued long enough. It seems to take time to arouse people to a realization of their condition now-a-days.

By a special arrangement with the publishers ws are enabled to offer Farm. Stock and Home, a semi-monthly, 19 to 24 page paper with a regular subscription price of 50 cents per year, in connection with the GAZETTE for $1.30

Late Literary News.

The most intensely interesting people of the world just at this moment are the millions of famine and plague stricken India. But little is known of this region by the people of the United States. Such reports as come to us are the things seen through British glasses. What has been the effect of British rule in India? Why these terrible famines? Why plagues? Julian Hawthorne has been sent by THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE to India to obtain answers to these questions at first hand and depict the situation as it appears to an American. The March COSMOPOLITAN contains the first of what is probably the most important series of articles ever presented in this magazine. Nothing has been published which gives an adequate idea of the larger operations of business—at least nothing by the class of men fitted for such work by thorough familiarity with the subjects of which they write. The article in the March COSMOPOLITAN on "The Methods of Banking," by the President of one of the largest banks of New York—a man of widest business experience—former Postmaster-General James—is one which every person, howevdr humble his clerkship or high his place in the financial world, will find interesting and instructive. This series will constitute a very complete course of business training, and every young man just entering business life and every old man will alike find it of immense value.

BALLAD OF NELLIE HANKS.

Minneapolis Times.

Daylight when I got to town; roused the doctor out;
Told him Nellie Hanks was worse; wanted he should go;
Watched my smokin' horses snort clouds of steam about,
After seven miles of ice, seven miles of snow.

Seen an engine with a car sizzin' creakin' past,
An' a brakeman froze to death, wavin' signalin'.
Got the doctor bundled up on the seat at last;
Pulled the lines up tight, and whang off we went again.

Past the stores an' op'rec house, past a church an' school;
'Crost the river where the black steamin' water flowed;
Sun most risin' in the east, mornin' sharp an' cool—
Past the court house an' the jail, struck the county road.

Hosses wild to go ahead, an' I let 'um scoot;
Struck a swift and stiddy trot, tried to hold 'um so;
'Crost the bridges an' the pikes, ruts an' holes to boot—
Seven miles of icey road, seven miles of snow.

But I know my jumper'd stood more 'un that before;
Horses flingin' cannon balls past the doctor's car;
How we flopped an' banged about; how we ripped an' tore;
How the doctor clung to me like a droundin' steer.

"Man" said he, "for heaven's sake, all my teeth are jes'
Droppin out; an' all my tools will be lost; an' where Will my cussed bottles be?" "Can't help that," I says,
"Nellie Hanks is sick, an' I'll try an' get you there."

Down the hills an' 'cross the flats, on through Jones' Gap;
Neighbors rushin' out the doors, wild so see us go.
Lost a blanket an' a quilt; doctor lost his cap—
Seven miles of ice an' ruts, seven miles of snow.

Up through Hanks' trees we rushed, plungin' 'crost the banks,
'Round the hay stack an' the barn, knocking down a cow;
Landing at the kitchen door, "My" says Missis Hanks,
"Sorry that you've hurried so: Nellie's better now" —Will Dillman.

KING GEORGE, of Greece, don't seem inclined to be bluffed by all the big powers of Europe. He evidently proposes to stand up for his rights as best he can. There is nothing like putting on a bold front.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has issued a proclamation calling an extra session of Congress for Monday, March 15. He evidently intends bringing prosperity if possible, or shifting the responsibility onto the sholders of Congress.

A BILL has been introduced into the Legislature to appoint a commission to locate a Woman's Reformatory. If they don't get along better than the Insane commitsion they had better have a guard appointed over them.

I DONNELLY insists that his bitter life long enemies are still after him, and he can't get a decent law through the House, hardly. Some of them don't appear to show up as they used to. Hold on Mr. D. "All things come to him who waits".

THE Senate committee on railroads would gain more favor with the people if they would listen to some of the complaints of people living on the lines of road, and not as the Times claims they do, shut themselves up with Railroad attorneys and hear one side. Give both sides a fair show on railroad business.

THE new law obliging druggists to furnish customers with a copy of any prescription they may ever had filled in their drugstore, will doubtless, have a tendency to make the doctors carry their medicine with them and quit writing prescriptions. The practice of individuals having some prescription that once helped them, refilled, and taken for every ailment, and the bottle carried all over the neighborhood and the medicine adminstered indiscriminately to their sick friends regardless of the nature of their sickness is bad enough, without making it obligatory on the druggist to give some half crazy old woman deadly drugs to be given to little children and others to kill them. Consciencious druggists can't stand it.

WE take no stock in Jim Hill's scare to his employees that he will reduce wages if his freight rates are meddled with by the legislature. If he does the legislature might fix the prices for wages for him to pay.

Fourth Asylum.

The jangle our law-makers have got into concerning the location of the Fourth Hospital for Insane is, from present appearances, likely to result in no appropriation being made to build at present. In case the Legislature passes a bill, as seems likely, to locate it at Hastings the Governor, it is thought, will veto it.

A movement is on foot to have it at New Brighton, between St. Paul and Minneapolis, but that is no place for an institution of the kind. The surroundings are not quiet enough. Insaue people are not usually kept in the midst of the traffic and noise of great cities. They need rest and quiet. Neither are they always the most agreeable neighbors. They are, at times noisy, occasionally one escapes and is the terror of the neighborhood until captured. It is not likely to enhance the price of valuable city lots for several blocks in every direction by the location of an insane asylum.

The site at Hastings may be a good one. There may be others as good in Wisconsin or on the border of that state nearer St. Paul even than Hastings. What is the use of building this fine institution on one edge of the state requiring people to travel further and to change cars. Besides there are already two in the southern part of the state at Rochester and at St. Peter.

Anoka don't seem to suit hardly anybody but its immediate neighbors and the committee. It is also on the line of road to Furgus Falls. Other roads should be accommodated.

The site at Delano is surely the most favorably situated in every way. The most convenient to the largest number of people who have to change cars to go to any of the present asylums and would have to do so to go to Anoka. It is only 38 miles from St. Paul and 28 from Minneapolis. Is far enough from the turmoil of the city. Is in Minnesota and not almost out of the state. Is as well drained and fine a place for the Fourth Hospital for Insane as the state affords.

It may not be the finest political more to give it to Delano but we believe it would be in the interests of the insane patients themselves and their sorrowing friends, to as great an extent to build at Delano as at any other place in the state.

Cheek. Pure and Unadulterated.

Talk about cheek. For the clear quill one has but to follow the actions of the Great Northern R. R.

In employing men the authorities of the road fix the wages, if the men don't want to work for so much another man can be found. Occasionally the officers get an economical streak and send out word that wages will be cut such a per cent. Men kick, and squirm but take the reduced prices.

If the road wants an advertisement of their road in the newspaper "contracts" to be signed are sent out offering to pay something like half regular rates, for the space, in mileage at regular rates, the tickets to be null and void unless used, by the editor before the time the add was to run expires, tickets non transferable and not to have the time extended. In this way much free advertising has been secured.

If a surgeon is to be employed, the road seeks to have one in most of the important towns along the line, a blank contract with ordinary prices for surgical operations, is furnished, bearing the characteristic proviso, that "If the party injured comes to the surgeons office, and is there treated, one half fee only will be allowed." And the still further outrageous proviso that, "When a surgeon is called to attend a person on account of the Company, he will do what the immediate necessities of the case require, and at once make a full report of the case to the Division Superintendent, and will continue in attendence on the injured person only at written request of the Division Superintendent." This is giving one-half the fees to have the patient brought to the surgeon's office where if he dies the surgeon must get rid of the body as best he can; or if the patient is not considered their charge and is out of means the surgeon must get him along without aid from the company.

Talk about cheek! A man or a company of men who do business in this way have the cheek to do most any thing, as evidenced by the scare that wages will be cut if Railroad rates are reduced. The above enumerated cuts are made in times such as we have been having and so far as we have learned the rates on the road have not been correspondingly cut.

A competent commission might ascertain the real state of affairs and then the Legislature ought not to be at all backward in administering to James J. Hill or any other railroad or other corporation using such tactics as are used on the G. N. a good full dose of their own medicine.

Among our Exchanges.

What Station?

"At what station does the sending of Col. John M. Hay to London leave Chauncey Depew?"—St. Paul Globe.

Probably at the Railroad Station.

Lower Railroad Rates.

Litchfield Review: A general reduction of 10 or 15 percent ought to be made and would not be unreasonable.

It's About Time.

CHICAGO, March 10. There is a rumor here that the Great Northern road is about to expend 100,000 on the improvement and equiment of its passengar trains. They are all to be vestibuled according to the latest and most improved methods and new equipment will be added.

Elk River Star-News: A conductor from the Eastern Minnesota railway was in town one day last week getting the railroad employees here to sign a petition remonstrating against the passage of the Jacobson bill now pending in the legislature, which increases the gross earnings tax on all railroads in the state. Railroad employees claim that if the bill becomes a law their wages will be cut to meet the increased taxation imposed upon the roads, and for this reason they are opposed to the measure.

Litchfield Independent: Carnegie has just sold a hundred thousand tons of steel rails in England, the very country he had pleaded to be protected against by a high tariff. He competes with the pauper labor of Europe at their very doors, shipping his goods three thousand miles. Is there anything more needed to show up the sham of the demands of the tariff barons, who with crocodile tears in their eyes have been begging for a protective tariff, not for their own sakes, but to keep their working men from being reduced to pauperism.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5th, 1897.

The inauguration of the millionaire's President was pulled off in a manner gorgeous enough to be in keeping with the cost of electing him. which is said to have exceeded $16,000,000. It was conducted on the most lavish scale, from the personal escort from Cleveland, Ohio, with their black horses, for which $10,000 was spent, to the ten thousand electric lights of variegated colors used in illuminating the costly decorations for the inagural ball in the big court of the Pension building. It was a millionair's event from start to finish, and the talk of the millionaire's agent, otherwise known as King Hanna, indicates that it is to be a millionaire's administration, notwithstanding the platitudes of McKinley's inaugural address. Never before were there so many private railroad cars in Washington at one time and never before was so much money spent at and upon an inauguration. It is very evident that the millionaires expect McKinley's administration to bring them prosperity, whatever it may do for the poor. When they invest their money they always expect, and they usually get, return in dollars and cents.

Hon. Wm. J. Bryan, who spent two days in Washington this week, divided his time betwen conferances with leading democrats and social intercourse with his extensive circle of personal friends, but declined to remain for the inauguration of his successful rival, said to those who proffered him their support for 1900 that he was not thinking so much about the next Presidential campaign as about the condition of the people, between now and then. He also expressed his sincere regret that the promised "McKinley Prosperity" had not come to the country. It is a remarkable fact about Mr, Bryan that his hold upon democrats has increased since his defeat, instead of diminishing, as is usual in the case of defeated candidates of all parties.

The silver men are not surprised at the failure of the Fifty-fourth Congress to admit Arizona, New Nexico and Oklahoma as states, and they expect no better from the Fifty-fifth Congress, as the diect has gone forth from the Republican bosses that none of the territories shall be admitted, because it is known that they would all send silver senators. But the silver men expect to control the House that will be elected in November 1898, and as they will certainly retain control of the Senate, to have the territories all admitted to statehood before the opening of the campaign of 1900.

Ex-Postmaster General Wilson left the fraud charges against John Wedderburn &Co. and the National Recorder, their paper, which were filed with the Post-office Department a few days ago by fifty-five of Washington's leading patent lawyers, to be acted upon by his successor. The head of the firm of Wedderburn & Co. is the man who started the Examiner Claims Bureau and the Press Claims Co., both of which, during their existence, had extensive dealings with newspaper publishers and figured in suits in Court.

Senator Teller thus stated his opinion of the relations of Mr. McKinley toward the monetary conference bill, which passed with the house amendments: "If the new President has any sympathy for the international agreement, it must be judged from his votes in the House, and not from anything he has said since his nomination, for, excepting the prefunctory acceptance of the platform, his every utterance has indicated that he has gone over to the gold standard, and will remain there."

Senator Tillman was the central figure in the most dramatic incident of the closing week of Congress. He charged in impassioned tones that the two corporations which have a monopoly of making armor plate for the Government haye agents in the Senate and when Senator Hawley, of Conn., protested against the charge, he repeated it, and intimated very plainly that Hawley was one of the agents. There was a time when such a charge would have resulted in trouble outside of the Senate chamber, but Senators no longer fight with other weapons than their tongues.

Mr. Cleveland vetoed the Immigration Bill, on the ground that it was a departure from our national policy that would impose hardships upon deserving people. The House passed it over the veto, but the Senate did not try.

It is noteworthy that the harshest criticisms of the manifest weakness, both from a business and political point of the view, of the men in McKinley's cabinet, have come from those who are classed as Republican leaders. Of course this criticism is as yet only privately expressed, but it indicates that unless McKinley walks the chalk line he will soon find himself confronted by formidable republican opposition.

Mr. McKinley's little bluff about not taking up the question of appointments for a month or so, intended to keep some of the office seekers away from Washington, did not work worth a cent. They have turned up in swarms and are making things lively for King Hanna as well as for Mr. McKinley. The only prosperity they see ahead lies in the public trough.

Late Literary News.

The most intensely interesting people of the world just at this moment are the millions of famine and plague stricken India. But little is known of this region by the people of the United States. Such reports as come to us are the things seen through British glasses. What has been the effect of British rule in India? Why these terrible famines? Why plagues? Julian Hawthorne has been sent by THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE to India to obtain answers to those questions at first hand and depict the situation as it appears to an American. The March COSMOPOLITAN contains the first of what is probably the most important series of articles ever presented in this magazine. Nothing has been published which gives an adequate idea of the larger operations of business—at least nothing by the class of men fitted for such work by thorough familiarity with the subjects of which they write. The article in the March COSMOPOLITAN on "The Methods of Banking," by the President of one of the largest banks of New York—a man of widest business experience—former Postmaster-General James—is one which every person, howevdr humble his clerkship or high his place in the financial world, will find interesting and instructive. This series will constitute a very complete course of business training, and every young man just entering business life and every old man will alike find it of immense value.

THE yearly consumption of sugar in the United States is about 2,000,000 tons, or 4,000,000,000 pounds, which is equivalent to about 60 pounds for every man, woman and child in the country. MCKINLEY is the first president to have a "Mc" to his name. It is a singular fact, considering the prominence of the Scotch and Irish blood among the American people, that not a single "Mc" has served as president, vice president or speaker. Several "Macs," however, have served in the cabinet.

A CURIOUS fact in relation to Spanish titles is of interest to unmarried American men. When a man weds a Spanish woman of title, he takes that title. Titles descend through the female line also. Upon marrying a Spanish duchess an untitled husband would be created a duke and grandee, and by purchasing a property with an annual rental of $10,000 would have a seat in the senate for life.

TRAVELING in a private car is a luxury that may now be enjoyed upon most American railroads by one who will pay 18 railway fares, and for 18 berths, and bear the cost of the cook, meat and drink; but it is most frequently enjoyed, free of cost, by those who can perfectly well afford to pay for it. The charms of this method of getting about may be greatly overrated, and I have one friend who rides in a special car and tells me that to travel in that way is not always agreeable.

The same firm contributed other kinds of puzzles for the same purpose.

AN accident on the English coast, near Gravesend, between the coal barge True Love and the schooner Gravesend) brought to light the fact that the former vessel was built in Philadelphia in 1764, and is probably the oldest vessel afloat. She was formerly the bark True Love, and was built in Kensington 133 years ago. Her timbers are of live oak and she is believed to have been sound and stanch until she was run down by the Gravesend. No vessel has been afloat so many years as the True Love and probably none ever will be.

UTAH, the youngest state in the union, will have two senators after the 4th of March who are both natives of the state. It is rather a remarkable fact, as none of the new states have been represented by men born within their borders. Both Senators Cannon and Rawlins were born in Utah. Both are young men, but new states have heretofore been represented by young men. But three states west of the Mississippi river will be represented in the senate by men born in the state except Utah. The others are California, White; Oregon, McBride, and Texas, Chilton.

Synopsis of President McKinley's Address—His Policy Is Clearly Outlined.

Calls a Special Session of Congress to Meet March 15—Vice President Hobart's Address.

Washington, March 4.—The nation greets its new ruler, President William McKinley. The nation bids godspeed to its past ruler, Private Citizen Grover Cleveland, who for the second time has retired from its service as its chief executive and has again entered upon a private career. At noon to-day William McKinley, of Ohio, took the oath of office as president of the United States for the term of four years which is to come to an end March 4, 1901.

A few minutes before Mr. McKinley assumed the duties of his high office Garret

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

A. Hobart, of New Jersey, in the presence of the senate and house, took the oath of office as vice president of the United States, becoming by virtue thereof ex-officio presiding officer of the senate. This function took place quietly in the senate chamber.

A Grand Spectacle.

The spectacular features attending the inauguration were, if anything, more imposing than any which have been witnessed at former like ceremonies. The inaugural parade was composed of between 40,000 and 50,000 men taken from the ranks of the military, naval and civic organizations. Fully 20,000 people were massed in front of the senate wing of the capitol and witnessed the administration of the oath to President McKinley and listened to his masterly inaugural address.

Mr. Cleveland and Mr. McKinley rode side by side to and from the capitol. They had dined together at the white house on Tuesday evening and had lunched in each other's company on Wednesday.

The Decorations.

Most effective were the decorations in which the city had clothed itself in honor of the occasion. Public buildings, business blocks and private residences were gayly and attractively attired with the national colors entwined in almost every conceivable shape, while thousands of flags floated from every desirable point. The reviewing stand in front of the white house, from which President McKinley and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland and a host of distinguished personages witnessed the procession, was a handsome pavilion—an architectural creation in white and gold.

Down Pennsylvania Avenue.

No other boulevard in the world could have afforded so grand a thoroughfare for the passage of the parade than did Pennsylvania avenue. For fully a mile it presented an uninterrupted view from the white house to the capitol. At every available point along the avenue great stands had been erected, and these were occupied by the enthusiastic populace, whose cheers and other manifestations of applause were continuous. A force of mounted policemen kept clear the space allotted to the marching thousands and prevented injury to the more venturesome of the spectators. Every building on the line of march was draped in bunting of the national colors and every window and point of vantage was occupied. The beautiful stars and stripes were everywhere seen, with other appropriate banners and emblems. In addition to these festive decorations, 50,000 miniature United States flags had been gratuitously distributed by the committee of arrangements These were exhibited at all available points and were waved with enthusiasm as the two presidents and other known public men rode by. At least 100,000 throats voiced a continuous welcome from the time the procession started until the capitol was reached, and these vociferations were still more enthusiastically echoed on the return trip.

McKinley Goes to the White House.

During the forenoon, escorted by the senate committee, President-elect McKinley drove from his temporary quarters at the Ebbitt house to the executive mansion to pay his respects to the retiring president. He was received and welcomed by President Cleveland and his cabinet in one of the handsome state apartments. Then the two distinguished men descended the white house steps and together entered a four-horse carriage, Mr. Cleveland sitting to the right, and, amid the booming of cannon, the clatter of cavalry, the deep, hoarse rumble of artillery, the measured tread of many columns of infantry and the blare of innumerable bands, the march to the capitol began. In another four-horse carriage following the president rode Vice President-elect Hobart and the senators deputed to escort him to the scene of his future duties. Then, in a long stream of carriages, came the distinguished guests. The president's personal escort was Troop A, of Cleveland, O., 80 cavalrymen mounted on coal black chargers and, still more interesting, a detachment of grizzled veterans from the Twenty-third Ohio volunteers, Maj. McKinley's old regiment.

THE PARADE.

Formation of the Escort to and from the Capitol.

The inaugural parade was given under the leadership of Gen. Horace F. Porter, who was the grand marshal, with a strong force of aids. A rough total of the number of regulars and militia soldiers and sailors in line shows an aggregate of 11,000 to 12,000. The escort of President McKinley numbered about 5,000. The civic organizations are estimated at about 12,000 The escort to the president from the executive mansion to the capitol was the first division of the parade forces. The escort from the capitol to the executive mansion was composed of one military and one civic grand division, subdivided into divisions and brigades. The final arrangement for the escort from the white house to the capitol provided for a parade in the following order:

Platoon of Mounted Police.
Governor's Island Band.
Grand Marshal Horace Porter, staff and aids.
Gen. Wesley Merritt, United States Army, Marshal of the First Brigade.

JOHN SHERMAN,
Secretary of State.

Battalion of United States Engineers.
Seventeenth Infantry.
United States Foot Artillery.
Regiment of Marines.
Battalion of Seamen.
Battery of Light Artillery.
Squadron of Artillery.
Troop A, of Cleveland, O., personal escort to the President-elect.
President Cleveland and President-elect McKinley in their four-horse coach.
Detachment of Veterans of the Twenty-third Ohio Volunteers.
Vice President-elect Hobart and the Senate Committee of Arrangement.
Members of the Cabinet.
The Major General commanding the Army.
The senior Admiral of the Navy.
Col. Cecil Clay, Marshal of the Second Brigade.
District of Columbia National Guard.
Escort to the White House.

At the conclusion of the inaugural address by President McKinley the first division, which formed the escort to the capitol, marched north along the east front to the capitol, thence west to First street and out in Pennsylvania avenue past the white house, countermarching on K street to the place of dismissal at Fourteenth and K streets.

Immediately after the grand marshal and his staff came Troop A, then the president, the detachment of veterans of the Twenty-third Ohio volunteers, and the presidential party in carriages. The military grand division was composed first of the regulars under Col. John S. Poland, and there was a full representation of the artillery, marines, seamen, infantry, light artillery and regular artillery. The second brigade was made up of the District of Columbia national guard and the whole of the military division was under the command of Gen. Wesley Merritt.

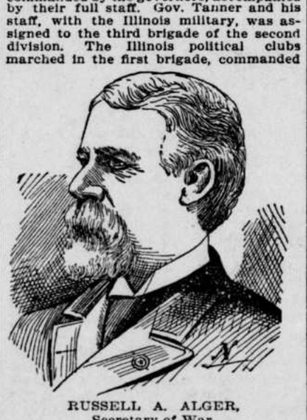
The second grand division of the parade embraced militia from other states. It was under the command of Gov. Bushnell, of Ohio, and was subdivided into several brigades. The first in the order of their marching included Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland. In the second brigade New York,

LYMAN J. GAGE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Virginia, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Vermont and Kentucky. The third brigade included Ohio, Illinois, Texas, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and the colored troops of Washington city. The third division of the brigade was made up of veteran organizations, commanded by Maj. Gen. O. O. Howard, United States army, retired. The first brigade included the department of the Potomac of the Grand Army of the Republic. In the second brigade were the Union Veteran legion, the Union Veteran club and other organizations of old soldiers. The civic grand division of the parade, which was one of the most striking features of the afternoon, was under command of B. H. Warner, of Washington city, with aids from each state of the union. It was divided into divisions, the first of which was commanded by D. D Woodmansee, president of the National League of Republican clubs. This embraced political organizations from Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia and Maryland.

Commanded by Governors.

In the second division, commanded by J. Franklin Fort, of New Jersey, were more political clubs from Maryland and others from the District of Columbia, Virginia, New York, North Carolina and Kentucky. The third division of the civic parade had as its marshal Congressman J. A. T. Hull, of Iowa, and embraced the political clubs from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Florida and West Virginia. The military representatives of the different states were commanded by the governors, accompanied by their full staff. Gov. Tanner and his staff, with the Illinois military, was assigned to the third brigade of the second division. The Illinois political clubs marched in the first brigade, commanded



RUSSELL A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

by Warren P. Sutton, of Michigan, of the third division of the civic section of the parade.

Salvos of Artillery.

A national salute of 21 guns was fired when President Cleveland left the white house in company with Maj. McKinley for the capitol and another salute of 21 guns announced that they had entered the capitol. One gun was fired when Maj. McKinley took the oath of office and a national salute of 21 guns at the conclusion of the inaugural, when President McKinley and Mr. Cleveland began their return march to the white house, and the same number of guns when the tour was made.

HOBART INAUGURATED.

Vice President Takes the Oath in the Senate Chamber.

While the procession was wending its way to the capitol both houses of congress assembled in the senate chamber. The joint assembly was presided over by the retiring vice president, Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois. There were also present the eight justices of the United States supreme court and the diplomatic corps, headed by Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador Promptly at noon President Cleveland and President-elect McKinley entered the chamber, the entire body rising and remaining in this position until they had been shown to the seats set apart for them. After a few words of farewell to his associates by Vice President Stevenson he pronounced the senate of the Fifty-fourth congress adjourned sine die. Then the extra session of the Fifty-fifth session, called by President Cleveland to meet at noon on March 4, commenced. The late vice president made way for his successor, Mr. Hobart, to whom the oath of office was administered, after which he made a brief address. He then proceeded in his turn to swear in such as were present of the 30 senators whose terms either of election or reelection began contemporaneously with that of the president.

M'KINLEY MADE PRESIDENT.

The Famous Ohioan Takes the Oath of Office.

At the completion of this ceremony both houses of congress proceeded to the eastern portico of the capitol, and in the presence of a tremendous throng of citizens the oath of office was administered to President McKinley by Chief Justice Fuller. President McKinley then delivered his inaugural address, which was a masterly effort, and in which he outlined the policy of his administration.

At its close, together with ex-President Cleveland, he entered the carriage and was driven to the white house, tumultuous cheers greeting him all along the route. After reviewing the gorgeous procession from the stand in front of the historical mansion, he formally entered upon his duties as the chief executive of a nation of 70,000,000 people. Grover Cleveland reentered the ranks of private citizens, and will retire to his new home at Princeton, N. J., to resume the practice of law.

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Synopsis of the Remarks of President McKinley.

The president began his address by an appeal to God and his fellow countrymen for

CORNELIUS N. BLISS,
Secretary of the Interior.

guidance and support in the performance of his duties. Of the questions of the day the subject of currency reform was given first place in the address. After stating the position of the country's industrial system, he said: "Our financial system needs some revision; our money is all good now, but its value must not further be threatened. It should all be put on an enduring basis, not subject to easy attack, nor its stability to doubt or dispute. Our currency should continue under the supervision of the government. The several forms of our paper money offer, in my judgment, a constant embarrassment to the government and a safe balance in the treasury. Therefore I believe it necessary to devise a system which, without diminishing the circulating medium, or offering a premium for its contraction, will present a remedy for those arrangements which, temporary in their nature, might well in the years of our prosperity have been displaced by wiser provisions. With adequate revenue secured, but not until then, we can enter upon such changes in our fiscal laws as will, while insuring safety and volume to our money, no longer impose upon the government the necessity of maintaining so large a gold reserve, with its attendant and inevitable temptations to speculation."

Financial Reform Needed.

He advises a thorough investigation of our finance law before attempting to amend them, and says:

"If, therefore, congress in its wisdom shall deem it expedient to create a commission to take under early consideration the revision of our coinage, banking and currency laws, and give them that exhaustive, careful and dispassionate examination that their importance demands, I shall cordially concur in such action. If such power is vested in the president, it is my purpose to appoint a commission of prominent, well-informed citizens of different parties, who will command public confidence both on account of their ability and special fitness for the work."

He favors international bimetallism and promises the subject early and earnest attention, and says it will be his constant endeavor to secure it by cooperation with the other great commercial nations of the world. "Until that condition is realized," he continues, "when the parity between our gold and silver money springs from and is supported by the relative value of the two metals, the value of the silver already coined, and of that which may hereafter be coined, must be kept constantly at par with gold by every resource at our command."

JOHN D. LONG,
Secretary of the Navy.

He advises economy in the administration of the government, and insists upon the resumption of the policy of decreasing in place of increasing the public debt, and the proper and liberal provision for the soldiers and sailors and their widows and orphans.

Tariff Legislation Wanted.

He asks for an increased revenue, and says:

"The government should not be permitted to run behind, or increase its debt, in times like the present. Suitably to provide against this is the mandate of duty; the certain and easy remedy for most of our financial difficulties. A deficiency is inevitable so long as the expenditures of the government exceed its receipts. It can only be met by loans, or an increased revenue. While a large annual surplus of revenue may invite waste and extravagance, inadequate revenue creates distrust and undermines public and private credit. Neither should be encouraged. Between more loans and more revenue there ought to be but one opinion. We should have more revenue, and that without delay, hindrance or postponement. A surplus in the treasury created by loans, is not a permanent or safe reliance. It will suffice while it lasts, but it cannot last long while the outlays of the government are greater than its receipts, as has been the case during the past two years. Nor must it be forgotten however much such loans may temporarily relieve the situation the government is still indebted for the amount of the surplus thus accrued, which it must ultimately pay, while its ability to pay is not strengthened but weakened by a continued deficit."

He advises a "pay as you go" policy for the government and recommends the enactment of revenue legislation at the earliest possible date that will permit of this policy. He says of this:

"The people have declared that such legislation should be had as will give ample protection and encouragement to the industries and the development of our country."

In the revision of the tariff he recommends that special attention be given to the reenactment and extension of the reciprocity principle. In closing the subject of finance and tariff revision, he says congress must legislate for business revival.

He condemns lynchings and says they must not be tolerated, "courts—not mobs—must execute the penalties of the law. The preservation of public order, the right of discussion, the integrity of courts, and the orderly administration of justice must continue forever the rock of safety upon which our government securely rests."

He scores the trusts and says:

"Immunity should be granted to none who violate the laws, whether individuals, corporations, or communities; and as the constitution imposes upon the president the duty of both its own execution and of the statutes enacted in pursuance of its provisions, I shall endeavor carefully to carry them into effect."

Improved Immigration Laws.

On the subject of immigration, he says our laws should be further improved to the constant promotion of a safer, a better and a higher citizenship. He recommends that the gates of the land be closed to those who are too ignorant to understand or too vicious to appreciate the value of our institutions.

The civil reforms must continue, but the changes should not be perfunctory or prompted by a zeal in behalf of any party. An enforcement of the civil service laws is promised.

Legislation is recommended in behalf of American merchant marine, which, he says, is now lower both in percentage of tonnage and the number of vessels employed.

The arbitration treaty with Great Britain receives considerable attention and the early action of the senate is urged on it not merely as a matter of policy, but as a duty to mankind. The importance and moral influence of the ratification of such a treaty can hardly be overestimated in the cause of advancing civilization.

JAMES A. GARY,

In closing this subject the president says: "It may well engage the best thought of the statesmen and people of every country, and I cannot but consider it fortunate that it was reserved to the United States to have the leadership in so grand a work."

Administration's Foreign Policy.

The foreign policy of the new administration is outlined as follows:

"We have cherished the policy of non-interference with the affairs of foreign governments, wisely inaugurated by Washington, keeping ourselves free from entanglements, either as allies or foes, content to leave undisturbed to them the settlement of their own domestic concerns. It will be our aim to pursue a firm and dignified foreign policy, which shall be just, impartial, ever watchful of our national honor and always insisting upon the enforcement of the lawful rights of American citizens everywhere. We want no wars of conquest; we must avoid the temptation of territorial aggression. A war should never be entered upon until every agency of peace has failed; peace is preferable to war in almost every contingency."

Extra Session of Congress.

He gives a review of the conditions of the country at the present time, the necessity for legislation that will relieve the strain in the industrial and financial fields, the desire of the opposing parties to have the questions settled now, the desire of the common people as evidenced at the late election for action on these questions and says:

"In view of these considerations I shall deem it my duty as president to convene congress in extraordinary session on Monday, the 15th day of March, 1897."

In conclusion the president says:

"I congratulate the country upon the fraternal spirit of the people and the manifestations of good will everywhere so apparent. The recent election not only most fortunately demonstrated the obliteration of sectional or geographical lines, but to some extent also the prejudices which for years have distracted our councils and marred our true greatness as a nation. The triumph of the people, whose verdict

JOSEPH M'KENNA,
Attorney General.

is carried into effect to-day is not the triumph of one section, nor wholly of one party, but of all sections and all the peoples. The north and the south no longer divide on the old lines, but upon principles and policies; and in this fact surely every lover of the country can find cause for true felicitation. Let us rejoice in and cultivate this spirit; it is ennobling and will be both a gain and blessing to our beloved country. It will be my constant aim to do nothing, and permit nothing to be done, that will arrest or disturb this growing sentiment of unity and cooperation, this revival of esteem and affiliation which now animates so many thousands in both the old antagonistic sections, but I shall cheerfully do everything possible to promote and increase it.

"Let me again repeat the words of the oath administered by the chief justice, which, in their respective spheres, so far as applicable, I would have all my countrymen observe: 'I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States.' This is the obligation I have reverently taken before the Lord Most High. To keep it will be my single purpose, my constant prayer—and I shall confidently rely upon the forbearance and assistance of all the people in the discharge of my solemn responsibilities."

VICE PRESIDENT HOBART.

A Short Synopsis of His Remarks to the Senate.

The address of Vice President Hobart was very short. He spoke of his appreciation of the honor bestowed upon him by the people of the country. He felt, he said, a peculiar delicacy in entering upon the duties of his office, being aware that the body over which he was to preside had had but a small voice in the selection of its presiding officer, and that he was perhaps not their choice in point either of fitness or merit. He promised a constant effort to aid in the expedition of the business of the senate, and said:

"All the interests of good government and the advancement toward a higher and better condition of things, call for prompt and positive legislation at your hands. To obstruct the regular course of wise and prudent legislative action after the fullest and freest discussion is neither consistent with true senatorial courtesy, conducive to the welfare of the people, nor in compliance with their just expectations. While assisting in the settlement of the grave questions which devolve upon the senate of the United States, it will be my endeavor to so guide its deliberations that its wisdom may be fruitful in works, whilst at the same time exercising such fairness and impartiality within the rules of the senate as shall deserve at least your good opinion for the sincerity of my effort."

JAMES WILSON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

The house spent the day in discussing the fourth insane asylum site and finally decided in favor of Hastings.

St. Paul, March 9.—The senate had a bare quorum when it opened at 2 p. m. yesterday. The introduction of bills and other routine consumed the time until the hour of closing. A Huge Block of Granite.

The mammoth granite base to the Hans Christian Anderson monument nearly six feet square and weighing over ten tons, was completed for the second time in St. Cloud. The surface of the great granite block, entailing a polishing surface of 87 square feet, was executed by Holes Bros. The stone forms the base to the Danish-American monument, erected to the memory of Hans Christian Anderson, and was to have been unveiled last fall in the city of Chicago, had not the accident occurred, which necessitated the cutting of a new base stone.

TREATMENT OF FELONS.

Simple Means of Relief for a Painful Affliction.

Felons occur frequently on the last joint of the fingers or thumb of the right hand. They are localized acute inflammations, resulting from the presence beneath the skin of certatn poisonous organisms which have gained admission through a wound. This wound is very likely a scratch or a prick so slight and insignificant that one cannot remember having received it.

The first thing that attracts one's attention is a small reddened and swollen spot, which is painful when touched. In the beginning the inflammation is just beneath the skin, but if not interfered with, it frequently works its way deep down below the surface, and burrows along the bone or tendons of the finger.

The superficial felon is the less painful. This is located, as a rule, around and under the finger nail. It may appear on one or more fingers at the same time or in succession, particularly if the bodily system is debilitated. The inflammation may be slight and subside quickly, but frequently it is more or less severe and results in the formation of a small abscess.

In the case of enfeebled persons the inflammation may cause considerable swelling and intense pain, and result in the loss of a part or the whole of the finger nail.

The deep felon usually starts on the under side of the finger. Within a day or two the finger becomes painful, tense, hot and throbbing. The pain and tension rapidly increase, especially when the hand hangs at the side, and the suffering continues without abatement until an abscess has gathered and its contents have discharged through an opening in the skin.

For a superficial felon nothing is usually required but rest of the affected part, and a cold application. If an abscess has formed, however, hot applications should be applied and the pus completely removed. The application of the tincture of iodine, carbolic acid, or a blister affords little or no relief.

In the deep variety of felon the formation of an abscess is almost certain, and therefore hot applications or poultices should be employed from the beginning.

If at the end of two or three days there is no marked relief the abscess should be opened. The incision should be deep enough to insure the complete evacuation of the contents of the abscess. Immediate relief from all suffering follows the emptying of the abscess, and the wound quickly heals if care is taken to keep it absolutely clean.—Youth's Companion.

M'KINLEY'S CABINET.

All Nominations Confirmed Though Some Criticism Is Made.

Washington, March 6. — President McKinley Friday sent to the senate the following nominations:

John Sherman, of Ohio, to be secretary of state.

Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois, to be secretary of the treasury.

Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, to be secretary of war.

Joseph McKenna, of California, to be attorney general.

James A. Gary, of Maryland, to be postmaster general.

John D. Long, of Massachusetts, to be secretary of the navy.

Cornelius M. Bliss, of New York, to be secretary of the interior.

James Wilson, of Iowa, to be secretary of agriculture.

The senate confirmed Mr. Sherman as secretary of state and took a recess. The other cabinet nominations were referred to the proper committees, and they at once took them under consideration. The usual custom of the senate is to confirm any man who has been a member of the senate, and for this reason Mr. Sherman's nomination was immediately acted on.

In the afternoon the senate took up the nominations which had been referred to committees and all were confirmed. Silver senators took occasion to criticise the position taken by Mr. Gage on the silver question, and the appointment of Mr. Bliss was found fault with on the ground that he lacked legal training, a quality said to be absolutely necessary in one who would administer the interior department successfully.

Washington, March 8.—The swearing in of all the members of the cabinet except Mr. Gage, secretary of the treasury, in a body at the white house Saturday, was a pleasant departure from the usual routine in connection with a change of administration. Heretofore it has been the custom to administer the oath of office to the new secretaries at their respective departments, generally by the chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, but the coincident presence of the members of the court and of the cabinet at the executive mansion made the unusual incident not only possible, but highly appropriate. Chief Justice Fuller, accompanied by Clerk McKenna, drove to the treasury department, where Secretary Gage had been detained by a company of visitors, largely from Chicago, numbering over 200. In the presence of these the oath of office was administered to the new secretary.

CANNON EXPLAINS.

Tells the Why of the Last Billion Dollar Congress.

Washington, March 9.—The congressional record contains a statement made by the chairman of the house committee on appropriations, Mr. Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, relative to the appropriations made by the Fifty-fourth congress. Mr. Cannon's statement is in part as follows:

The total appropriations of the two sessions of this congress aggregate $1,043,437,018.53. The appropriations of the Fifty-third congress, which was democratic in both branches, with a democratic executive, amounted according to the official tables to $988,239,205.69. To this sum, however, should be added $4,400,000 on account of interest and sinking fund charges for bonds issued by the democratic administration which were not included in the estimates of permanent appropriations submitted to congress and stated in the tables; which brings the sum total of appropriations for all subjects by the Fifty-third congress up to $993,639,205.69, or $49,797,812.84 less than the appropriations, including the deficiencies, made by the present congress.

In explanation of this apparent excess of appropriations by the Fifty-fourth congress over those of the Fifty-third congress, it should be stated that the Fifty-fourth congress made increases over its immediate predecessor on account of fortifications in the sum of $12,563,467; on account of river and harbor works, including contracts therefor, in the sum of $2,476,506; on account of the construction of public buildings, none of which were authorized by the Fifty-fourth congress, in the sum of $2,343,394; for the postal service in the sum of $5,947,523, and on account of permanent appropriations, mainly to meet the interest and sinking fund charges for the bonds issued by the administration just leaving power, $24,983,744; or a total of $62,768,929.

Mr. Cannon admits that the appropriations exceed the legitimate demands of the public service, but this results, he says, from conditions growing out of the rules of the house, the so-called courtesy of the senate and the excessive estimates submitted to congress. The record shows that in no instance during many years past have the appropriations made by congress measured up to the full amounts recommended and asked for by the administration.

Murderess Confesses.

St. Paul Minn., March 8.—Mrs. Nellie Frayer, who recently pleaded guilty to the murder of Willie Maxwell, the 10-year-old son of David Maxwell, for whom she was acting as housekeeper, has made a confession. She says her father was entirely innocent and that she alone committed the crime. She led the lad into an upper portion of the barn, where she fastened him in such a manner that escape was impossible, and then set the building on fire. It burned to the ground, and she says the boy screamed and implored her to release him, but she let him perish. Mrs. Frayer was sentenced by Judge Holland to hard labor for life at Stillwater.

Extra Session Called.

Washington, March 8.—President McKinley has issued a proclamation convoking congress in extra session Monday, March 15. Some pressure has been brought to bear upon the president to induce him to defer the meeting for a couple of weeks, in order to permit senators and members to visit their homes to attend to business and family matters. The president, before reaching a final decision, consulted with Mr. Reed and with other prominent republicans, and upon hearing that the tariff bill could be made ready for consideration as soon as the house had organized for business, decided to adhere to his original programme.

Weyler's Cruelty.

New York, March 9.—A special to the World from Havana, via Jacksonville, Fla., says: Gen. Weyler has issued an order directing that hereafter all women arrested in Cuba who are called "suspicious" shall be tried by court-martial. While the penalty is not publicly stated, it is supposed that if the women are found guilty the death penalty will be imposed. Gen. Weyler says, it is asserted, that the women are hardest to subdue, and that, if he had his way he would kill them first and try them afterwards.

A Filibuster Sentenced.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 9. — John D. Hart, who was several days ago convicted of aiding in the fitting out of a filibustering expedition on the steamer Laurada, was sentenced by Judge Butler to two years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $500 and costs of prosecution.

SEVEN ARE DEAD.

Fatal Result of a Gas Explosion in a Boston Subway.

Boston, March 5.—An explosion of gas which leaked from the two great six-inch mains which cross the subway at the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets, killed six, injured two probably fatally, and nearly 50 other persons at 11:45 o'clock Thursday. A boom like that of cannon was followed by smoke which seemed to rise from the very bowels of the earth and then flames shot upward and blazed in the midst of the thoroughfares where there is more travel than anywhere else in a given section of the city.

The list of the dead and injured, as far as ascertained, follows:

Killed.

Rev. W. A. Start, bursar of Tuft's college; G. D. Bigelow, conductor; Miss A. M. Bates, William L. Vinal, private secretary to Thomas W. Lawson; Benjamin Downing, hack driver; D. H. Sibley, carriage driver.

Injured.

Mary A. Hipwell, A. R. Sargent, motorman; Miss Sadie E. Fleming; Annie Frank, James R. Reardon, John J. O'Connor, Fred W. Deeley, Mrs. S. A. Peck, Mrs. J. R. Wilson, Nellie Jackson, Sadie M. Brown, Charlotte L. Main, A. B. Cunningham, A. L. Shepburne, John Ross, Wolf Kopler, Adolph Lundin, Mrs. Horatio Bigelow, Miss Alice Richardson, Sam Morton, Mary E. Stone, Alexander Levoise, S. D. Nickerson, John J. Venes, Tony Byagarry, Henry J. Kelley, Mrs. Charles S. Bates, William Maybow, H. Woodcock, N. H. Bellard, Nancy O'Neill, Patrick H. Greaney, E. C. Worcester, Lillian Rose, John J. Burns, Patrick Delaney, Charles Newell, John Gill, Thomas Brown, J. Hennessy, Augusta Louisa Wilson, Mrs. L. A. Beck, Anna Harding, Charlotte Nair, Philip Woolf, Frank Tobey, Thomas F. Ford, Lucy Dolan.

Not only were all the window fronts broken in the neighborhood, but from a jeweler's window, precious stones, said to be worth $12,000, were scattered about the street. The foundations of the Hotel Pelham are said to have been shaken badly, while every window display in the neighborhood was injured more or less. It is utterly impossible to estimate the loss in that direction. The immediate cause of the explosion is, of course, uncertain, but the most generally accepted theory is that it was started by a spark from the electric motor of the Mount Auburn car igniting the gas which escaped from the old main that runs along the south side of Boylston street.

Boston, March 6.—William Maybour, one of the victims of Thursday's explosion, died at the Emergency hospital Friday afternoon.

THE REPLY OF GREECE.

Refuses to Heed Demands of the Great Powers.

London, March 9. — The Chronicle publishes a dispatch from Athens giving the full text of the reply of Greece to the powers.

The Greek reply is characterized by four points. In the first place, it is conciliatory in tone, fully recognizing the high aims of the powers. Secondly, it offers to withdraw the Greek fleet from Cretan waters. Thirdly, while pointing out that it is impossible to withdraw the Greek troops from the island of Crete, it offers to place them under the control of the powers to restore order. Finally the reply meets the statements about the Cretans really preferring autonomy by suggesting that the Cretans be allowed to choose their own government.

The Chronicle adds on high authority that the Greek envoys abroad have been instructed on receipt of the reply to inform the government to which they are accredited that Greece is prepared to recognize the temporary suzerainty of the sultan, to withdraw her fleet completely, and to place the Greek army in command of any military representative of the powers senior in rank to Col. Vassos for restoring order in the field if the powers are willing ultimately to leave the decision as to the fate of Crete in the hands of the people.

Canea, March 9.—Monday evening the foreign admirals notified the Greek vice consul that he must leave Crete. They also wired to their respective governments for the immediate dispatch of 600 men to maintain order in the large towns. Probably it will be decided to enforce a peaceful blockade, applying only to vessels under the Greek flag. These would not be confiscated, but detained only until the blockade was raised.

A Big Cuban Victory.

Havana, March 8. — Two thousand Spaniards under Gen. Vara del Rey were defeated by the Cubans under Gen. Calixto Garcia at Manzanillo Fbruary 26. Gen. Vara del Rey confesses his disaster, though finding an excuse in the superior number of the Cubans and the advantage of their position. In his report he says his column contained only 1,500 men, and he estimates the Cubans at more than 3,000. The Spanish dead, he says, were 500. Vara del Rey narrowly escaped being captured. The fight lasted eight hours. The Spaniards took two hours to cross the river and they behaved with great courage during all the battle. The battle was directed by Gen. Garcia in person. The Cubans captured 800 rifles, one cannon and 500,000 rounds of ammunition, besides a large stock of provisions.

Killed by an Avalanche.

Salt Lake City, March 8.—A disastrous snowslide swept down early Sunday morning upon the works of the Daly mine at Park City, burying eight men under the crushing volume of snow. Four of the men were recovered and resuscitated. The names of the dead are: James W. Keating, N. Russato, Nicholas Paffin and Joseph Zucca. The four men who were alive were more or less injured, although they are likely to recover. Their names are: Thomas Hodges, Harry Finney, James Hallman and Charles Mathison. The eight men were asleep when the awful avalanche struck their cabin and carried it and everything else in its path for hundreds of feet, until it reached the mill of the Daly Mining company, demolishing the engines, boilers and doing damage to the extent of $50,000.

Chicago Strikers Win.

Chicago, March 9.—Of the 1,200 union plasterers and laborers who struck Saturday 250 returned to work Monday, the contractors for whom they were working having signed the union scale of wages, which is operative until May 1. Contractors who employ 250 more of the strikers signified their intention of signing the agreement as soon as it was presented to them, and most of them did attach their signatures at union headquarters during the day and evening, and the men will be at work on the buildings again this morning.

THE INAUGURATION BALL.

A Brilliant Affair in Connection with McKinley's Installation.

Washington, March 5.—The inaugural ball was a briliant and notable feature of the festivities connected with the installation of President McKinley. That no more admirable place could have been selected for the affair than the pension building was proved Thursday evening. Its spacious interior was somewhat crowded with well-dressed humanity, but in view of the fact that no larger place was obtainable, that cannot be considered a basis for criticism. Just before eight o'clock, the hour set for the function to begin, the current governing the electric lights was turned on and the wide, broad and high interior was transformed into fairyland. From dome and gallery and from pillar, post and rafter thousands of luminous gleams came forth, bringing into view the results that an army of decorators had labored so long to obtain. More than 100,000 yards of cloth had been used in the drapery; 6,000 incandescent and 50 arc lights had been wired and established in their proper places, and 40,000 roses, not to speak of yards upon yards of smilax and other foliage plants had been arranged in the most artistic manner.

The appearance of the president and Mrs. McKinley and the vice president and Mrs. Hobart was the feature of the evening. It was 9:40 o'clock when President and Mrs. McKinley, accompanied by the private secretary to the president, Mr. J. Addison Porter, and Mr. Charles J. Bell, the chairman of the inaugural committee, arrived. The crowd downstairs had grown impatient for a sight of the presidential party, and in response to their overtures the president and vice president, accompanied by their wives, walked out to the balcony overlooking the floor. They were repeatedly cheered by the ladies and gentlemen, who to the number of 5,000 crowded the open space beneath. The distinguished quartette bowed their acknowledgments; the band played an inspiring air and the ball was fairly opened.

THE LEXOW COMMITTEE.

Result of Its Investigation of Trusts and Combines.

Albany, N. Y., March 9. — The report of the Lexow investigating committee was presented to the senate Tuesday. The testimony taken before the committee is reviewed at length, and while no special drive is made against any individual trust, the committee treats all of the combines investigated alike. They found that these combinations to restrict the necessaries of life do exist, and that the aggregations of capital which have been formed were organized in nearly every instance for the purpose of regulating trade, suppressing competition, controlling the output and dictating prices. The report dwells at length upon the great danger that is likely to arise from the continuance of these aggregations of capital and protests that affirmative legislation should be enacted with a view of restraining, if not entirely prohibiting, the operation of such monster combines. The report states that the committee believes the factors' agreement between the trusts and their agents are to a great extent the potential agency through which these combinations are enabled to fulfill the purpose of their organizations.

Two New Senators.

Salem, Ore., March 8.—Gov. Lord has appointed ex-Senator H. W. Corbett United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the failure of the legislature to elect at its recent session.

[Mr. Corbett represented Oregon in the United States senate from 1866 to 1872. He is vice president of the First national bank of Portland and a pronounced gold standard advocate. He is about 66 years of age, and has been a resident of Oregon more than 35 years.]

Jacksonville, Fla., March 8.—John A. Henderson, of Tallahassee, vice president and general counsel of the Florida Central & Peninsular railroad, has been appointed ad interim United States senator by Gov. Bloxham to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of Senator Call's term at 12 o'clock March 4.

[Mr. Henderson is 55 years of age and a lawyer by profession He has never before held public office, but for the last ten years has been the real head of the regular democracy of Florida. In the last presidential campaign he favored the gold standard, but after the Chicago convention would not bolt the regular ticket.]

Gradual Improvement Continues.

New York, March 6.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"The slow and gradual improvement observed for some time past has continued during the past week, and without material check. There is a better demand for most products on the whole, with continuance of speculative buying in some, notably in wool, because of expected duties. Meanwhile money markets continue as easy and undisturbed as if there had never been anxiety about the gold reserve, and fairly large sales of stocks on London account during the week possibly because of international anxieties have made no perceptible difference in American markets.

"Failures for the week have been 246 in the United States, against 285 last year, and 59 in Canada, against 68 last year."

Failed to Become Laws.

Washington, March 5.—Four of the annual appropriation bills failed to become laws owing to the refusal of the president to approve them. The sundry civil, the Indian and the agricultural bills reached the white house so late that Mr. Cleveland was unable to give them that close scrutiny upon which he insists. He therefore refused to sign any of them. The general deficiency bill failed to reach him owing to the failure of the conference to reach an agreement. The agricultural bill was sent to the president February 25, while the others only reached him during the late hours of the session.

Storm in the Dakotas.

St. Paul, Minn., March 9.—Reports from 100 towns in the northwest indicate that another great snowstorm has been raging. General Superintendent Russell Harding, of the Great Northern, says the snow in North Dakota is three feet deep on the level plains, and in the mountains is far over the tops of the telegraph poles in many places, and so deep that the rotary plow could do little better than cut a tunnel.

Left His Daughter $1,000,000.

San Francisco, March 8.—The will of Thomas M. Quackenbush has been filed for probate. It bequeaths to his daughter, Mrs. Esther Swortfiguer, an estate valued at $1,000,000.

Mrs. Beecher Dead.

Stamford, Conn., March 9. — Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher died at 10:42 Monday morning, at the home of her son-in-law, Rev. Samuel Scoville.

SHATTERED.

The Precarious Condition of Prof. A. H. Nye.

A Prominent Iowa Educator's Painful Experience as Related by Him to a Newspaper Man.

From the Gazette, Cedar Falls, Ia.

The la grippe, that dread disease that had such a run throughout this country three or four years since, left many who were previously in robust health, with shattered constitutions and seemingly confirmed invalids.

Prof A. H. Nye, living at No. 2500 Olive Street, Cedar Falls, Iowa, was among the number left in a precarious condition by the disease. No strength, feet and limbs badly swollen, in fact, almost helpless. Prof. Nye is a native of New York State, having come west in 1886—a healthy, robust man. He is a school teacher by profession, having served as county superintendent of schools of this (Black Hawk) county several terms, and he has the respect of all with whom he comes in contact. His helpless condition called forth the sympathy of the entire community. He tried the best medical skill procurable, and spent most of his ready means in the vain endeavor to recover his health, and had about given up completely discouraged. He had stopped taking medicine, being fully convinced in his own mind that there was no help for him, and that he would have to spend the balance of his days as an invalid, a burden to family and friends. Some one who had heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, spoke to him about them and urged him to give them a trial. His poor success with eminent physicians made him skeptical and he had no faith in what was called proprietary medicine, and would not listen to this advice for some days. The friend being persistent, however, and having faith in the Pink Pills, would not let up, until he had finally prevailed upon the sufferer to send for a box, which he reluctantly did, and after receiving them decided to give them a fair trial. The first box relieved him in a surprising manner; yet he was not convinced that it was the medicine that had helped him, but the weather, which had turned pleasant, and did not send for a further supply until he was again about as bad as before taking the pills. Then he concluded he would make another trial, and took three boxes, and to-day is nearly if not quite as well as before the attack of la grippe. It is needless to say he cannot say too much for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, for people who have been left in poor health from la grippe or any other cause. Anyone wishing to test the validity of this letter can write Mr. Nye, No. 2500 Olive Street, Cedar Falls, Iowa, and he will cheerfully recommend the medicine, and state his condition before and after using.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Beggar (piteously)—"Ah, sir, I am very, very, very hungry." Dyspeptic (savagely)—"Then have the decency to keep your good fortune to yourself. I haven't had an appetite for years."—Tit-Bits.

In every section of this country there is more or less land lying idle and bringing the owner but little in the way of revenue. As the country gradually becomes more thickly settled, taxes on real estate grow higher and the burden from carrying unproducing or waste land more irksome. It is good business to make every foot of land yield something to help bear its share of the expenses of the farm. This may be done in several ways. That land which is too wet for the plow may be ditched or tile drained, and thus be brought under cultivation and production. A more difficult task will be encountered, however, in clearing up timber-land, in removing trees, stumps, grubs, etc., etc. For this purpose several machines have been put upon the market, but none are better than that made by the Milne Manufacturing Co., 743 Eighth St., Monmouth, Ill., a thoroughly responsible firm, whose advertisement appears in this paper. They manufacture the Hawkeye Grub and Stump machine in several sizes, and guarantee it to pull stumps or grubs, and to pull up trees of ordinary size. This machine, unlike others, does not need to be moved for every stump, but will clear out a circle of two acres at one sitting. Write this firm for catalogue, circulars, prices, etc.

PICKED UP ON BROADWAY.

A True Incident.—A woman was picked up in the street in an unconscious condition and hurried to the nearest hospital. On examination her body was found to be covered with sores caused by the hypodermic injection of morphine.

This mere wreck of a woman had once held an honorable and lucrative position in a large publishing house in New York. Her health began to fail. Instead of taking rest and medical treatment, she resorted to the stimulus of morphine.

The hospital physicians discovered that her primary trouble was an affection of the womb, which could readily have been cured in the first stages.

If, when she had felt those severe pains in the back, the terrible headaches, the constant sense of fullness, soreness and pain in the pelvic region, she had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, it would have dissolved and passed off that polypus in the womb, and to-day she would have been a well woman sitting in her office.

Why will women let themselves go in this way? It seems passing strange that a woman like this one, so highly educated, and so well placed, should have depended on morphine, instead of seeking a radical cure.

There is no excuse for any woman who suffers—she need not go without help. Mrs. Pinkham stands ready to help any woman; her address is Lynn, Mass. Write to her; it will cost you nothing. In the meantime get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the nearest drug store. The following letter from one of your sisters will encourage you:

MRS. BERTHA LEHRMAN, No. 1 Erie St., 27th Ward, Pittsburg, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I can hardly find words with which to thank you for what you have done for me. I suffered nearly seven years with backache and sideache, leucorrhœa, and the worst forms of womb troubles.

"Doctors failed to do me any good. I have taken four bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one box of Liver Pills, and used one package of Sanative Wash, and now can say I am well and have been steadily gaining flesh; am stouter and heartier now than I have been for years. I am recommending your Vegetable Compound to my friends. Again I thank you for the good health I am enjoying."

Pill Clothes.

The good pill has a good coat. The pill coat serves two purposes; it protects the pill, enabling it to retain all its remedial value, and it disguises the taste for the palate. Some pill coats are too heavy; they will not dissolve in the stomach, and the pills they cover pass through the system as harmless as a bread pellet. Other coats are too light, and permit the speedy deterioration of the pill. After 30 years exposure, Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills have been found as effective as if just fresh from the laboratory. It's a good pill with a good coat. Ask your druggist for

DELANO, FRIDAY, MAR. 12, '97.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—A new lumber dealer threatens to open up in Delano soon with a first class stock.

—Our former townsman H. Galley was elected a member of the council at Royalton, Tuesday.

—Rumors are afloat that a new drug-store is to be put in Delano, "Competition is the life of trade".

—The Eagle Printing Company's new folder is in place and has already learned to fold faster and nicer than any other folder in the office.

—The caucus ticket was elected in the village election Tuesday. Several combinations were arranged to defeat a portion of it but without success. Owing to the new law but few votes were cast.

—The Delano Creamery seems to be satisfactorily getting along. A west side man who has one cow and uses milk for quite a family at home, received $3.50 for his last month's surplus; at 16½ cents per pound for butter fat.

—Last Sunday evening, quite a little debate took place on the rear platform of the depot, 9:00 sharp, the debators, being a little warm removed their coats and delivered very eloquent speeches, which were very forcibly emphasized by gestuers.

—Public rumor, Mother Grundy and the Eagle said last week that William Ziebarth was married so we ventured to publish it as a fact, but it seems it was not so, even though we saw it in the Eagle. We are creditably informed that the event will come off in the near future.

—It is currently reported that it cost one of Franklin's newly elected supervisors a fatted calf to appease some of his thirsty constituents and a lot of village fellows, before he could get out of town. It is not the proper thing to oblige a man to expend his fortune in any such a way. Usually those that participate in such exhibitions are fonder of corn juice that of cattle.

—Some system of fire alarm from the extreme ends of town to the City Hall; or better to the power house, wound be found convenient sometimes. If the night watch or other person should discover fire it would be much quicker to telephone to the power house and have the whistle blown than to wait until he traveled half a mile or so to ring the bell. It will pay to look the matter up.

—Since the fight over the location of the Fourth Hospital for Insane assumed such great proportions, some of our citizens are becoming awake to the fact that Delano might yet get the institution if they would make a good fair, square fight for their rights. A public meeting to talk the matter up and take such steps as is thought best is in order. If Delano don't look out for her own interests, no one else is liable to do so for her.

—Roads in this country where they are covered with snow nearly half the time should be built in such manner as to prevent drifting of snow as much as possible. Many times for weeks, a couple of bare spots a few rods long, or a big drift or two will deter many people from bringing loads to town. Provision for remedying this should be made, in construction of road, and in having some road work done in the winter, when needed.

—Several of our most esteemed townsmen were absent from the polls on Tuesday. Some of them the first time for years. They had never taken out their full citizen's papers and under the new law could not vote. Unless the papers are secured or the law changed of course they are forever disfranchised. It is better if they live in this country and intend to continue here to become full citizens. Laws may be made if not now in existence which would conflict with their supposed property rights.

—Franklin town election was very tame compared with former stormy scenes. But one ticket was in the field, out of about 375 votes, heretofore, but 71 put in an appearance Tuesday.

—At the regular meeting it was voted that supervisors and town clerk shall receive $2 per day. For town Revenue $250; Roads and Bridges $350; Poor $100; Special $300. It was voted to have the supervisors purchase $300 worth of road-scrapers. 40cts on each $100 of valuation for road tax invested. Deliquent road tax to be worked where delinquent. The following selections were made for —Kennedy's Own for March arrived this morning. It is up to its previous high standard.

—The biggest snow storm of the season kept our citizens busy this forenoon cleaning sidewalks.

—The School entertainment at the City Hall tonight is expected to be above the ordinary entertainments of the kind.

—A. J. Hayes bought a cow and some other things from the Mrs. Sarah Marshal, estate, which will pay for her burial and other expenses.

—This morning when we arose to find no wood were surprised; But upon further investigation found it only covered by the heaviest snow of the season.

—Several car loads of brick are already piled up on River street awaiting spring when they will be laid into buildings to take the place of those burned.

—People are shoveling their hay out of the deep snow and hauling to town or to their barns for fear of high water when the snow melts. This is a wise precaution.

—Rev. Murray preached Monday and Tuesday evenings at the M. E. Church. His sermons were eloquent and deserving of a much larger audience than he had.

—A big icle fell from the rear eves of the drugstore, one day this week, and demolished a couple af $7.50 thermometers for our local weather prognosticator. Quite a misfortune.

—At their town meeting on Tuesday Rockford voted to allow Drs. Ames and Soper $100 for their fees in the diphtheria cases there last year. This will probably end all litigation on the matter.

Handed in.

--With 3 Barbers 4 Doctors and so it is said, 2 Drugstores in this town, it seems to look Metropolitan.

--Somebody got votes for an office which is not known to be on the list for applicances of the Village,

--I will be a nice thing for this Village to have Music all over town next Summer. We have now 2 good Bands and can have Music in the upper and lower town at any odds.

—The last Election went off very nicely, somebody says, though this some of the Candidates got a few more votes than they were entitled to. Probably this question will come up later on.

--Gust Anderson, who has been on the sick list for about 9 months was able on last Tuesday to go to the polls and cast a vote for his friend R. M. Bohn, who was running for the Recordership of this Village.

—A lecture will be given on Pilgrim's Progress illustrated by stereoptian views in the Presbyterian church next Tuesday evening at 7.30. Admission free; but a collection will be taken from those disposed to give to relief for the ophans made by the terrible massacres in Armenia.

—It is currently reported that some of our good Scandinavian citizens of this village on accounts of the cheap facility of transportation, caused by the works Exposition to be held at Stockholm Sweden next Summer, contemplate to visit their frieds and relatives.

The Brandser Brothers, Ole Peterson and R. M. Bohn, the last named to get his Pension for disability in the Army, will possably constitute the Members, visiting their old homes.

County Cullings.

Montrose has again voted no license. After having tried license for a few years they prefer to have no saloons.

Where, oh where, was Culkin, when the vote on the Knotnold bill to make a uniform license of $1,000 for every retail liquor establishment in the State was before the Senate? Surely the great and important 38th Legislative district deserves to be heard from on this question.

Our Board of County Commissioners must be, judging from the way they cut down claims at their last month's meeting, trying to save enough to pay for those new copies of the statutes they recently purchased, we are not one of those that begrudges them the statutes. If the county needs commissioners it should provide them with the rules and regulations, the laws by which they are to be governed.

If our members of the Legistature wants to aid the people in selecting their choice of men for office they should vote for a new primary election law under the present system the "log rolling" politicians have nominations their own way. A nominating election is of even more importance than an actual election. People should have an apportunity to say who they prepare for office; and not, as is now often the case simply to chose between two of the least desirable citizens of them precinct.

The fashion of obliging people to swear to every bill they present to the county for services or goods furnished and then having the board cut the bills down don't look right. People should put in their bills to a county same as to an individual, and should be as promptly paid if right. If not right, they should be given an opportunity to correct them and not have them cut in two, and the person presenting them held up to the eyes of the public as having made oath to an unjust bill for the sake of securing a few cents or dollars from the County Treasury. The legislatures from this district might cover themselves with glory by having this matter fixed right.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter, at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

THEM republicans are bound to monopolize everything. It is now claimed the longest whiskers in the Fifty-fifth Congress belong to W. B. Shattuc, a republican, and an Ohio man at that.

THE St. Paul Globe editorially announces that it now belongs to the National Democrats of the country. This is a free country. If the National Democrats want the Globe, the St. Paul Globe, let 'em have it.

IT is pitiful to hear the plaintive pleadings of the gold standard papers to have the Republicans and the National Democrats come together, even in the Chicago city election; while at the same time they are making all manner of fun of the people who believe that bimetallism is best for the country and that the best way to have bimetallic money is to vote for it and who are trying to get together to put their preachings into practice as early as practicable.

RECIPROCITY seems to be gaining in favor with some people. For instance it is reported that the Governor of Missouri wouldn't acknowledge the validity of requisition papers from Minnesota and send a man, wanted by law, to Minnesota, because the Minnesotians persisted in keeping the Younger brothers in their penitentiary. Now comes the report that some Iowa fellows tried to exclude a Minnesota Insurance Company from doing business in that state, when up jumps the Minnesota Insurance Commissioner and excommunicates the entire Iowa force of insurance from this state. It does look as if things will keep on until the primitive methods of every family living within its own resources will be arrived at. The days when each family spun its own wool and made its own cloths. When shoemaking, blacksmithing and every thing else nearly was done at home, and insurance was unknown.

Keeping Their Promise.

We were repeatidly promised before election that if the gold standard forces were successful we would find that the hidden money of our country would be brought out and put into circulation. That the horded wealth would be turned loose into the channels of business. From the uncommonly large percentage of what money is now to be seen being half dollars and quarters of the fifties, before the war money, it leads one to think that all the old stockings and even the children's savings banks, and pocket pieces and collections of old coins are indeed, finding their way into the markets, and for once political promises are being fulfilled.

Vote for What you Want.

Every male citizen of the state of Minnesota over 21 years of age is entitled to a vote. He has a right to vote for what he pleases. His vote is wholly within his own power. No man has a right to know how his neighbor votes unless his neighbor sees fit to tell him. Every man has the same power, so far as his vote goes, as any other man of saying how our state or our United States governments shall be ruin. Each voter has a right to say whether or not he wants a protective tariff, a free trade, gold standard or gold and silver standard money. He can vote for the men for office who will properly represent him in Congress or in the legislature. He can vote for men who he knows will do what he would have them do, or himself do were he an officer. So if things don't go right is it not largely the fault of the voters themselves? If men will be misled, will be scared, or coaxed, or otherwise influenced to cast their votes for men whom they know to be unfit, or incompetent, or will work in direct opposition to their wishes, whom can they blame but themselves?

If men want protective tariff they should vote for men who will do all they can to give them what they wish. If men want Bimetallism, and most of them profess to, though some want to wait until England is ready to let them have it, they should help elect men to Congress who will work for bimetallism; who will give them gold and silver both for standard money as contemplated by the founders of our constitution. Vote for what you want, when you can.

The New Administration.

The new administration is now in full swing. McKinley has been inaugurated. His cabinet officers have been appointed. An extra session of Congress has been called to try to bring better times to the country. Of course people know, though many of them are slow to admit it, that the President alone, cannot bring good times. They know too, that as the Senate is not under the control of the republican party that bills only can be passed that the Senate may sanxion, or acquiesce in. Cangress may offer what bills they may see fit. But unless the Senate passes them they don't even get to the President.

The republicans seem anxious to change the tariff bill. It is altogether likely the Senate will not oppose their doing so, and that we will soon be doing business under the new tariff bill. Paying more for our woollen clothes and for other things we are obliged to have. Just how we are to get the extra few cents or dollars to pay with don't show up just yet. But we are told to have confidence, and all will come out right.

Of course we know our money is about all drained out of the country. We get barely enough to exist on; to pay our taxes and for a few necessaries. All improvements must wait. If the prices of what we must buy are advanced we must simply deny ourselves the more. Must go without what we would like to have, until a change comes.

Of course the tariff on some farm produce is raised a few cents, but how, if the tariff on barley is 20 cts., or is 30 cts., per bushel, will that make ours any more? It is a little like a tax on snow. If the tariff on snow should be fixed at 25 cts. per bushel would our present large crop of that article be worth any more than it now is?

An international agreement to make gold and silver both standard money is still talked of about Washington. We have no faith whatever in such an agreement being signed by England, most other nations, we believe, are favorable to such an agreement and with the help of the United States would surely bring England to time. But so long as they wait for England to lead or even to follow in such an agreement, until she is actually forced to, we believe England will let them wait.

If Congress would pass a law to remonetize silver, it is our opinion the president would not veto it, and that more would in this way be done to bring about a re-establishment of business than by any other present possible means.

Bounty and License.

Bounties are often voted for various purposes in different communities. The word bounty or bonus seems to have a hallowed charm for many. They will anxiously await the day and walk up to the polls and vote for a bonus or a bounty for some suggested enterprise in town, usually entirely unnecessary, as if the proposed object is a worthy one, a few dollars, or many dollars could be but a small object to those engaging in the money making scheme, and is apt to be simply so much clear gain to the greedy money getter.

Only schemers as a rule ask a bounty to go into any kind of business. They work upon the imaginations of susceptible people; they make them believe a certain thing would be a great advantage to the town; that without a bounty it will never be built and the thing is worked through by the aid of votes procured, often in questionable manners.

The fad seems to have struck legislatures in several states and they proceede to vote a bounty on beets raised for sugar, or on sugar manufactured in the state; but usually taking care to fix the amount so high that only a big farmer or manufacturer will get any of the bounty. So much must be raised or manufactured as to place the amount on which bounty will be received just above what an average citizen would be likely to have

If some poor fellow comes along and wants to rent a few acres and try to make a living who gives him a bounty? Who sets him up in business? He would be laughed at or considered crazy or a "dead beat" if he should even ask for assistance from the town.

If it is necessary to pay a bounty for sugar why not pay a bounty for other products of the farm? Is sugar any more important to the average person than is wheat? Don't people need potatoes, cabbage, beans, onions and various other articles as deserving of a bounty as are sugar beets.

License is another growing evil. It is kept gaining by the use of every means at the command of those favoring it. it is being rung into various kinds of business. It is being sought to strengthen and fortify it by so spreading it among people as to make it well nigh impossible to get rid of it. But, in their eagerness the bounds are being overstepped and people are begining to see where it leads to and will in one supreme effort overthrow the whole license, bounty and trust business, will wipe it from the country and place the people once more on the pedestal of free men.

If a particular thing is considered wrong as the great department stores, a license to "regulate" them is the thing. This is a make shift and only serves to make them more of a monopoly, by protecting them from competition.

The saloon business must be protected. Unless a man has $500 far a license he can't put up a keg of beer and sell it to his neighbors, doubling his money, but must patronize the man who has the money. Then the town is run into debt, and respectable people vote to license men to sell liquor to their boys and their neighbors, simply for the miserable excuse of a few dollars revenue it brings to a town, while, at the same time, it improverishes the citizens to such a degree that a stagnation of business is felt in every other line but that of the drunkard in his march to the grave.

People in free America should vote for no bounties, no, license, no trust, no monopoly of any kind. Every man should have the same right, the same privilege, to do right, or to do wrong, and no greater right than every other man has. If a particular thing is wrong license don't make it right. Think of these things. Settle them now, and when you come to vote you will know how you want to vote.

Among our Exchanges.

Duluth Evening Hereld: Minnesota calls at the White House every day looking for a piece of the patronage pie.

St. Peter Herald: With pomp unprecedented in the history of Washington, McKinley was safely inaugurated president, last Thursday.

Buffalo Journal: We are assured that confidence and prosperity are on the way, but as they travel by the old stage coach line we are still told to wait.

Interurban: The almost universal comment is one of hope that ere long the expected dawn of a better time is near at hand. Let each one do his share towards making it.

Howard Lake Herald: A good republican congress will begin next Monday and a good old republican protectionist president will sign the bills which they pass for the benefit of United States.

Annandale Post: It is to be sincerely hoped that Gov. Clough will veto the bill locating the fourth insane hospital at Hastings. The juggling and scheming in the matter has been a disgrace to the state and should receive severe rebuke.

Duluth Herald: When the London school board was debating whether elementary science should be taught in the schools it was objected that the pupils would get only a smattering. Sir John Lubbock replied: "Who has more?"

President McKinley stated in his inaugural address that all that was necessary to "restore prosperity was confidence." We understood from the redublican papers that confidence was assured upon the election of McKinley. How is this?—Chaska Valley Herald.

Minneapolis Tribune: The gold democrats appear to be falling into line with the republicans in the Kentucky legislature, which insures the speedy etection of a republican United States senator. He may get to Washington in time to help out on the tariff.

Some of the aldermanic statesmen of this city are entirely too sensitive over news-paper criticism, but if they only realized it there is one sure way of escaping it. That is to discharge the duties with which they are entrusted in honest, businesslike fashion.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Swift County Monitor: Jim Hill is very polite to the members of the legislature, but to every one else it is "go ——— ———, ——— you." Up to the present time the legislature has been very considerate of Mr. Hill, but it is hoped that the thundering in the back counties will be herd at the state capitol before the law-makers adjourn.

The Joint Committee to investigate the Anoka and Hastiugs Asylum contest have reported that Hastings offered the better site, but Anoka was the more accessable.

There must have been some awful rotten doings in the location of that hospital, and it might be the best thing to do, to locate the hospital somewhere else. Delano, in this county, offers a better site than either Anoka or Hastings.—Buffalo Journal.

Gov. Briggs' Vetoes.

Governor Briggs, of North Dakota, has vetoed the two acts passed by the legislature affecting the temperance status in that state, one being an amendment to the prohibitory law which virtually emasculated, it and the other providing for the appointment of a temperance commissioner. A. C. Rankin, the "molder" orator, was presumably to be the beneficiary of the latter act, but the governor evidently is of the opinion that the present law and the facilities for enforcing are equal to all demands.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Advertise in the GAZETTE.

Litchfield News-Ledger: President McKinley will have 106 presidential postoffices to fill which Cleveland made appointments for, but were not confirmed.

Pioneer Press: The distinguished authority on the toilet has stated that chewing-gum causes rinkles. We beg our readers to give this information the widest possible circulation.

The Sixth Congressional district is woefully lacking in orators in either branch of the legislature, and thus is handicapped in any fight it may have on hand. Aside from Senator Culkin and Representative Hartshorn and Jones it has no one who is capable of coping with Greer, Schaller, Donnelly, Jacobson, Feig and others. If this great district is ever to be worthily represented in the legislature it must pick out its ablest and best man who have a full knowledge of parliamentary law and a gift of language which will be able to cope with the ablest.—Wright County Times.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12th, 1897.

Mine host McKinley will not serve the regular dessert of official pie until his Congressional boarders have eaten the tarriff and currency commission dinners now being prepared for them, although a few individuals who have squarred things with King Hanna will be at once given generous slices of the best pie in the establishment.

Republican Senators and Representatives would like Mr. McKinley's plan of making them choose the men who shall be appointed to office from their states much better if he had not allowed it to become generally known.

They are willing enough that the men who get the offices should give them credit for securing them, but they do not like the idea of having to be held responsible by the unsuccessful applicants. It was a shrewd dodge on the part of McKinley and its announcement has already brought about a marked falling off in the number of office-seekers who will seek to push their claims by personally calling at the White House.

While the caucus of democratic Senators did not decide the matter definitely, it was plain from the tone of the remarks made that a number of them were opposed to the proposed combination with the silver republicans and populist to recognize the Senate Committees. Some of the shrudest democrats in the Senate are of the opinion that nothing would be gained by such combination, although they are determined that the successor of ex-Senator Voorhees on the Financial Committee shall be a silver democrat, in order that the silver men shall retain their majority on that committee. Senators Faulkner and Smith have been put on the democratic steering committee in place of Blackburn and Brice, and Gorman, chairman, and Cockrill, Harris, Walthall, Jones, of Ark., White and Murphy have been reappointed as members of that committee.

The widow of Dr. Ruiz, whose mysterious death or murder in a Cuban prison caused Consul General Lee to threaten to resign if the late Cleveland administration did not better support his demands upon the Spanish authorities in behalf of American citizens, arrived in Washington this week accompanied by her five children, to try to interest the new administration in her claim for indemnity. She says she had documentary evidence, which she is anxious to lay before Secretary Sherman, proving that Dr. Ruiz was killed in his cell by the prison guards upon the investigation of Wevler's men. Speaking of Cuban matters, the new administration has disappointed many by issuing even more rigid orders than those of the Cleveland administration for the prevention of fillibustering and the absolute maintenance of neutrality. It had not, of course, been supposed that the McKinley administration would openly countenance fillibustering. That would make this country liable for damages. But it was thought that the idea would be conveyed to the officers of the Nayal and of the Revenue Marine Service that their superiors did not expect them to break themselves down hunting for fillibusters. Republicans say that the Supreme Court decision in the Three Friends case left the administration no choice.

Mr. McKinley has to have the services of a special military aid-de-camp; at least he has them, and that duty has been assigned to Capt. Heistan, U. S. A., who by some hocus pocus has been with the McKinley's at Canton ever singe the election. Capt. Heistand's wife will live at the White House and be Mrs. McKinley's constant companion. This sort of flap-doodle may be all right in Europe, but it seems out of place in this country. By a coincidence the last President who has had a military aid-de-camp was an Ohio man—Garfield.

Senator Harris, of Tenn., who has been dangerously ill with the grip, does not expect to be able to attend the extra session. He will go to Mississippi next week, if he continues to get better, to remain till he gets entirely well. He will be badly missed by the democrats.

About twenty democrats who ought to be snugly ensconced in Presidential postoffices find themselves in a very unpleasent predicament just now. They were nominated and confirmed by the Senate, but, owing to delay in getting their bonds approved by the Post Office department, Mr. Cleveland did not sign their commissions. If Mr. McKinley chooses he can sign these commissions, but it is entirely discretionary with him whether he will do so or nominate republicans for the places.

Pension Commissioner Murphy is authority for the statement that the McKinley Inaugural ball cost the government $70,000 in salaries paid to idle employes of the Pension Bureau.

On Senator Gorman's motion the credentials of Mr. Wood, appointed by the Governor of Kentucky to succeed Senator Blackburn, were referred to the committee on elections, and nobody need be surprised if they are never heard of again.

After looking over the ground King Hanna concluded he had enough to do without antagonizing Tom Reed, so there will be no administration candidate for Speaker of the House.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Good morning, Mr. Editor, many things have transpired since I last visited your sanctum. Have a new president; an extra session of Congress and many other things as an accompament to the new administration. McKinley and Mark Hanna prosperity has not arrived yet; but is expected on every train. It will come by through express if the freight is pre-paid: and will be consigned to single gold standard men for distribution.

Mark Hanna's advance agent has just been through on a dog train, and says prosperity is snow bound and will not be along until April or May. Then all business will start up. Then the smoke from the blast furnace and the manufactory will be so thick as to form a fleecy sheen to eclipse the sun at noon day. Every idle man will get employment without regard to party affiliation, race color, or previous condition of servitude, and as Patrick Henry said: "Let it come, I repeat it, let it come". For the people are anxiously waiting.

What about the fifty cent silver dollar that was talked so much about last fall? They tell me they pass as current money among the murchants; for taxes etc.

As the last administration was a failure it is hoped by all that the present one may be a success and if so the people will receive it gladly.

Our spring is bound to be late this year; too much snow now for an early spring.

All kinds of business in our town is doing well considering every thing. Town meetings pass off very quietly, but polled only 120 votes.

We have so much snow that it is hard getting around.

John H. Richards and wife, of Buffalo, were visiting friends and relatives in Independence part of last week.

Mr. Editor there is not much news this week, everybody is busy shoveling snow. Town board meets to-day.

JOHN H. McGARY.

The Sons of the American Revolution are offering prizes in the public schools for compositions on revolutionary history, and some of the state societies of Colonial Dames give similar testimonials for high-school papers on local colonial subjects. It is a form of society work to be much commended.

The Boers claim from England about 700,000 pounds sterling for material damage and 1,000,000 pounds for moral and intellectual damage. Dr. Grenier, the member of the French parliament who is a convert to Islam, advocates polygamy as a means of checking the decline in the population of France. The marine sanitarium is the latest idea in England for getting the better of the various ailments that beset mankind. An order has been placed for the construction of a large steamship, which will be a floating palace of convenience, comfort and healthfulness, the idea being to carry only invalids and make a cruise of nine months in each year. Just at a time when photographers had almost abandoned hope of ever discovering a really practicable process of color photography a report comes to the state department in Washington from United States Consul General Mason at Frankfort giving a description (as far as the process may be divulged) of a means of doing this in a manner so simple and inexpensive as to be available to every photographer, thus opening a new era in reproductive art.

Of the eight cabinet officers who composed President Cleveland's official family when he entered upon his second term all are now alive except Secretary of State Gresham, of Chicago, but two of them, Postmaster General Bissell and Hoke Smith, of the interior, dropped out by resignation, the first because his law practice demanded his attention, the second because his state, Georgia, was for Bryan and free silver. On the whole, that cabinet was exceptionally stable. The first Cleveland cabinet also had only one death, that of Secretary of the Treasury Manning, of Albany, N. Y.

The wave of political progress has at last reached Alaska. A circular is being sent about for signatures throughout the southeastern part of the territory petitioning congress for an act providing for a civil government, which shall give the people representation by a delegate, the right of bona fide residents to acquire title to public lands, authority to incorporate towns and villages, and a repeal of the law preventing the sale of liquor and the substitution in lieu thereof of a very stringent license law. Our far-away territory evidently is making great strides in the world of progress.

The Fifty-fourth congress did a good thing for the public at large in making the government responsible for the value contained in registered letters. For a long time the receipts from this source have been large, but the senders of registered letters have not been able to recover value, if the letters were lost, which made the registration fee a rather useless charge so far as insurance of value is concerned. Of course comparatively few registered letters are lost, but the government should be responsible for the money inclosed, and the act of congress very properly, it seem to us, makes it so.

URGED TO ACT.

President McKinley Makes an Appeal to Congress.

Need of a Tariff Law to Increase the Country's Revenues Declared to Be the Imperative Demand of the Hour.

Washington, March 16.—The president Monday sent the following message to congress:

"To the Congress of the United States:

"Regretting the necessity which has required me to call you together, I feel that your assembling in extraordinary session is indispensable because of the condition in which we find the revenues of the government. It is conceded that its current expenditures are greater than its receipts, and that such a condition has existed for now more than three years. With unlimited means at our command, we are presenting the remarkable spectacle of increasing our public debt by borrowing money to meet the ordinary outlays incident upon even an economical and prudent administration of the government. An examination of the subject discloses this fact in every detail and leads inevitably to the conclusion that the condition of the revenue which allows it is unjustifiable and should be corrected.

"We find by the reports of the secretary of the treasury that the revenues for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, from all sources, were $425,868,260.22, and the expenditures for all purposes were $415,953,806.56, leaving an excess of receipts over expenditures of $9,914,453.66. During that fiscal year $40,570,467.98 were paid upon the public debt, which had been reduced since March 1, 1889, $259,076,890, and the annual interest charge decreased $11,634,576.60. The receipts of the government from all sources during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, amounted to $461,716,561.94, and its expenditures to $459,374,857.65, showing an excess of receipts over expenditures of $2,341,674.29.

"Since that time the receipts of no fiscal year, and with but few exceptions of no month of any fiscal year, have exceeded the expenditures. The receipts of the government, from all sources, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, were $372,802,498.29, and its expenditures $442,605,758.87, leaving a deficit, the first since the resumption of specie payments, of $69,803,240.53. Notwithstanding there was a decrease of $16,769,128.78 in the ordinary expenses of the government, as compared with the previous fiscal year, its income was still not sufficient to provide for its daily necessities, and the gold reserve in the treasury for the redemption of greenbacks was drawn upon to meet them. But this did not suffice, and the government then resorted to loans to replenish the reserve.

"In February, 1894, $50,000,000 in bonds were issued, and in November following a second issue of $50,000,000 was deemed necessary. The sum of $117,171,795 was realized by the sale of these bonds, but the reserve was steadily decreased until, on February 8, 1895, a third sale of $62,315,400 in bonds for $65,116,244 was announced to congress.

The Yearly Deficits.

"The receipts of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, were $390,373,203.30, and the expenditures $433,178,426.48, showing a deficit of $42,805,223.13. A further loan of $100,000,000 was negotiated by the government in February, 1896, the sale netting $111,166,240, and swelling the aggregate of bonds issued within three years to $262,315,400. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, the revenues of the government from all sources amounted to $409,475,408.78, while its expenditures were $434,678,654.48, or an excess of expenditures over receipts of $25,203,245.70. In other words, the total receipts for the three fiscal years ending June 30, 1896, were insufficient by $137,811,729.46 to meet the total expenditures.

"Nor has this condition since improved. For the first half of the present fiscal year the receipts of the government, exclusive of postal revenues, were $157,597,603.76, and its expenditures, exclusive of postal service, $195,410,000.22, or an excess of expenditures over receipts of $37,902,396.46. In January of this year the receipts exclusive of postal revenues were $24,316,994.05, and the expenditures exclusive of postal service $30,269,389.29, a deficit of $5,952,395.24 for the month.

The Total Deficit.

In February of this year the receipts, exclusive of postal revenue, were $24,400,997.38, and expenditures exclusive of postal service $28,796,056.66, a deficit of $4,395,059.28; or a total deficiency of $186,061,580 44 for the three years and eight months ending March 1, 1897. Not only are we without a surplus in the treasury, but with an increase in the public debt there has been a corresponding increase in the annual interest charge from $22,893,883.20 in 1892, the lowest of any year since 1862, to $34,387,287.60 in 1896, or an increase of $11,493,414.40.

"It may be urged that even if the revenues of the government had been sufficient to meet all its ordinary expenses during the past three years, the gold reserve would still have been insufficient to meet the demands upon it, and that bonds would necessarily have been issued for its replenishment. Be this as it may, it is clearly manifest, without denying or affirming the correctness of such a conclusion, that the debt would have been decreased in at least the amount of the deficiency, and business confidence immeasurably strengthened throughout the country.

Should Be Promptly Corrected.

"Congress should promptly correct the existing condition. Ample revenues must be supplied not only for the ordinary expenses of the government, but for the prompt payment of liberal pensions and the liquidation of the principal and interest of the public debt. In raising revenues duties should be so levied upon foreign products as to preserve the home market, so far as possible, to our own producers; to revive and increase manufactures; to relieve and encourage agriculture; to increase our domestic and foreign commerce; to aid and develop mining and building, and to render to labor in every field of useful occupation the liberal wages and adequate rewards to which skill and industry are justly entitled. The necessity of the passage of a tariff law which shall provide ample revenue need not be further urged. The imperative demand of the hour is the prompt enactment of such a measure, and to this object I earnestly recommend that congress shall make every endeavor. Before other business is transacted, let us first provide sufficient revenue to faithfully administer the government without the contracting of further debt, or the continued disturbance of our finances. (Signed)

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY."

One Taken, the Other Left.

Bath, N. Y., March 16.—A buggy in which was seated Sanford Gardiner and Mrs. Charles Fenton, was struck by a train on the Erie railroad while crossing the tracks of that road in this village. Mrs. Fenton was killed. Mr. Gardiner escaped unhurt.

Sentenced to Be Electrocuted.

Auburn, N. Y., March 16. — Frank Sheldon, a well-known cattle dealer of Cayhuga county, was convicted of murdering his wife and sentenced to be electrocuted during the week beginning April 25. The murder was committed April 30, 1896. The verdict was a surprise to all who have followed the case. The jury was out for 84½ hours.

Confessed.

St. Louis, March 16.—Louis Harry, bookkeeper for McLain & Alcorn, commission merchants, was arrested Monday for embezzling $800 of his employers' money. He admitted his guilt.

Grocers Assign.

Springfield, Mo., March 16.—The Headley Grocery company, wholesalers, have failed. A deed of trust to preferred creditors and an assignment to Charles H. McCann were made. The preferred liabilities amount to $65,000; other debts, $35,000.

Fifteen Hundred Houses Burned.

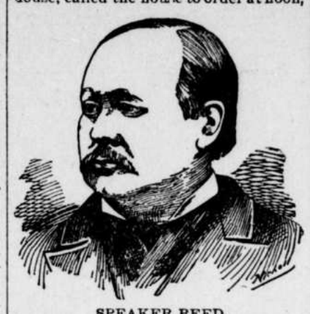
London, March 16.—The Daily Mail has a dispatch from Bombay saying that 1,500 houses in Mandalay have been destroyed by fire. Seven thousand persons have been rendered homeless by the conflagration. The loss is placed at £400,000.

IN EXTRAORDINARY SESSION.

Fifty-Fifth Congress Convenes—Reed Reelected Speaker.

Washington, March 15.—The opening of the Fifty-fifth congress in extraordinary session was witnessed in the house Monday by an immense crowd of spectators.

Mr. Alex McDowell, clerk of the last house, called the house to order at noon,



SPEAKER REED.

when prayer was offered by the blind chaplain, Rev. Mr. Couden. The clerk read the president's proclamation convening congress, and the roll of members was called, showing that 337 members had answered to their names.

The election of speaker was then proceeded with, the result being:

For Mr. Reed, 199 votes.
Mr. Bailey, 14 votes.
Mr. Bell, 21 votes.
For Mr. Newlands, of Nevada, one.

Mr. Reed, having been conducted to the chair amid applause, addressed the house briefly. The speaker was sworn in by Mr. Harmer (rep., Pa.) and then the oath was administered to the members, four of whose certificates had not arrived, being sworn in by unanimous consent. A committee was then appointed to wait on the president.

Washington, March 15.—The extraordinary session of the Fifty-fifth congress was opened in the senate by reading the president's proclamation convening it. Sixty-eight senators answered to the roll call and the galleries were filled to overflowing.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS HEAVY.

Importers Act in Anticipation of Higher Tariff Rates.

New York, March 16.—The payment of duties at the customhouse Saturday amounted to $1,488,693.67, making one of the largest totals in the history of the customhouse. Payments on sugar alone were said to have amounted to several hundred thousand dollars. This anxiety on the part of the refiners was caused by the fears that the change from an ad valorem to a specific duty would largely increase the rate of duty on the sugar at present held in bonded warehouses.

New York, March 16. — Monday's aggregate of withdrawals of imports from bonded warehouses reached the enormous sum of $2,667,978.51. This is the largest in the history of the New York customhouse for one day, previous record being $2,308,000, made August 1, 1872, when the late A. T. Stewart made his famous payment of $1,000,000 on goods withdrawn. The largest sum received from one firm Monday was $190,000. Most of the goods involved in the panic are raw sugar, woolens, dress goods and tobacco. The customs receipts since last Wednesday have been $6,089,642.

Immigration Decreases.

Washington, March 13. — There has been a decrease in immigration during the past seven months compared with the same period last year of 45,525. Commissioner Stump explains the decrease as follows: The many deportations and strict examinations of the immigrant to the United States has caused a large increase of immigration from Europe to Brazil, Argentine Republic and other South American countries, where inducements are held out for their migration. Italian immigration will be seriously checked by the proclamation of Marquis di Rudini, minister of the interior for that kingdom, warning undesirable classes from embarking and refusing passports.

Fifteen Killed.

Canea, March 16.—A terrible accident occurred Monday on board the Russian war ship Sisoi Veliky. The vessel was practicing outside of Suda bay, when one of her turret guns exploded, owing to the breech not having been properly closed. The noise of the explosion was terrific, and its results were most disastrous. The turret was blown to pieces and every one of its occupants were killed. The turret and cupola in falling killed a number of others who were on deck. The killed numbered 15, including two officers. Thirteen men were so badly injured that they will die, while a number of others received less serious injuries.

Was a Land King.

Keithburg, Ill., March 15.—William Drury, known as the millionaire land owner, died at his country place north of this city Saturday night. He was the largest individual land owner in this country, having hundreds of thousands of acres in Colorado, Nebraska, Texas and Kansas, besides 6,000 acres of the richest farming land in this county.

Troops on the Greek Frontier.

London, March 16.—The Times publishes a dispatch from Athens saying that, with the reservists of 1885 and 1886, the Greek army will number about 80,000 men. The same paper has a dispatch from Constantinople stating that the Turkish troops on the Greek frontier number 60,000, with 200 guns.

Smothered Chicken.

Dress the fowl and prepare as for roasting, stuffing it if you desire. Sever the sinews of the legs at the joints so they will lie flat to the fowl, put a good sized lump of butter and a cup of water in a kettle, lay the fowl in and cover with a basin that fits down close to it inside the kettle. Cook from one to three hours, according to age, adding water as it boils away. The chicken will be tenderer and of better flavor when stewed in this way, and may be set in the oven to crisp if desirable.—Detroit Free Press.

THE SNOW FORT.

In the happy days of boyhood,
Five and thirty years ago,
(Life's golden age of joyhood)
We built castles of the snow.
In the glittering drifts we quarried,
And our mason work was rare
As those mansions, many storied,
Manhood fashions out of air.

Though our ramparts and our fosses
Might have puzzled old Vauban,
What cared we, the infant bosses,
For old fogy rule or plan?
Our outworks were the queerest
Ever reared by human skill,
But of names we chose the dearest—
Every fort was Bunker Hill.

How the parts of British leaders
Went a-begging, one and all!
How we all were earnest pleaders
For front places on the wall!
Boys detailed for service foreign Fell in line with clouded brow,
Each one clamored to be Warren,
And none wanted to be Howe.

The battle—ah! we fought it
Not at all by history's light:
How the pesky English caught it,
How they always lost the fight!
In despite of truth we chased them,
And, to facts entirely blind,
As adown the hill we raced them
How we peppered them behind!

Thus we fought the fight of Bunker's
In the days that knew no care,
Ere the snow we tossed, as younkers,
Time had sifted on our hair.
Now, alas! in the fierce battle
We wage daily with the world,
Harder shots against us rattle
Than our boy arms ever hurled.

And 'tis not the generous tussle
Of the snow fort on the knoll,
But a strife of those who hustle
Not the body, but the soul;
And instead of gleaming missiles
Poisoned shafts fly to and fro,
And we march o'er galling thistles,
Not the velvet of the snow.
—W. R. Barber, in Youth's Companion.

DUTCH NECK'S GOAT SAM.

A Billy Full of Guile and More Substantial Things.

Timothy Hillhouse has the most remarkable goat that ever grew chin whiskers, says a Dutch Neck, New Jersey correspondent of the New York Sun. The goat's name is Sam, and his stomach has had in it about everything that in the ordinary run of life is left lying about loose. Sam's courage is about as great as his appetite, and he goes into any kind of a row unhesitatingly if he sees anything to eat at the other end of it.

Sam is 12 years old. He first came into notoriety eight years ago, when he cornered a burglar, and kept him cornered until Hillhouse and a hired man took the man in. This happened one summer night. Hillhouse had lived on the farm that he owns a good many years, and never had been troubled with midnight prowlers. When he retired on this particular night he left the window of a second-story room open. Near the window grew a tree, and up the tree a thief climbed in the night, made his way through the window, ransacked the house, and got safely back to the ground. But the end was not yet. Sam, who was snooping around the yard seeking something that would stop the gnawing in his stomach, espied the burglar as he was coming down and started for him.

The first knowledge that the man had of Sam's presence was when the goat's head hit him with the force of a battering ram from the rear. The fellow was knocked to his knees, but he was quickly on his feet and sprinting for the gate. Sam went after him and got between him and the gate. Seeing that escape in that direction was impossible, the man turned and ran toward the barn. Adjoining the barn was a wagon house, and into the angle formed by these buildings the goat drove the buglar and butted him up against the side of the barn with a force that made the man howl like an Indian. Now and then the man tried to sneak around the goat and get away, but Sam was on the alert and stopped him. The goat pounded away until the burglar ached in every joint, and, concluding that he might better go to jail than face the animal any longer, began to howl at the top of his voice. The noise woke Hillhouse, and, with his hired man, he went out to see what was up. He found the thief and handed him over to the constable.

From that time Sam's career has been eventful and brilliant. One of his most remarkable exploits was the saving of Mr. Hillhouse's little daughter from drowning. Three years ago Carrie Hillhouse, then four years old, started out one afternoon to join her father and his men, who were working in a field about a quarter of a mile from the house. On the way she was obliged to cross a bridge over Sutphin's creek, a sluggish stream that runs between high, steep banks. Sam went with the girl. She stopped on the bridge to look down into the water, lost her balance, and fell in.

Hillhouse, who was on a load of hay, headed for the barn, saw his daughter fall, and, sliding to the ground he ran as fast as he could toward the bridge. The goat, without hesitating an instant, leaped into the water and hooking his horns into Carrie's clothes held her head above the surface.

Sam struggled heroically with his burden, and managed to get to the bank just as Hillhouse reached the spot. The goat and the child were lifted out, and more delicacies found their way into Sam's stomach that week than he ever had seen before. Everybody in the neighborhood showed the goat some mark of esteem, and when Sunday came the preacher in the local church paid him a high tribute in his sermon, and in his prayer invoked a blessing on the head of the faithful animal who, he declared, was "more courageous and more intelligent than many men." Sam is probably the only goat that ever received special prayer in a pulpit.

Sam's appetite frequently has got him into trouble and at the same time has increased his value in the eyes of his owner, who knows that some day, when the goat's thread of life is broken, he will yield up some of the valuables that he has swallowed. Years ago Mrs. Hillhouse discovered that on wash day the safety of the clothes she hung out to dry depended upon their hanging high when Sam was in the neighborhood. She didn't learn this until the goat had almost completely devoured a wash left within his reach. On that occasion he consumed two sheets, a calico dress and a flannel shirt, a table cloth, half a dozen napkins, a pair of boys' trousers, and three cotton stockings. He undoubtedly would have cleaned the line and devoured the rope had he not been discovered by Mrs. Hillhouse before he had reached next to the last garment, for he made a brave fight against the broomstick that was brought into requisition and tried to get at a bosom shirt and sun bonnet that were still on the line. Thereafter the clothes were hung so high that Mrs. Hillhouse was obliged to use a stepladded to reach them, and Sam satisfied himself with walking around, now and then up on his hind legs and sniffing wistfully.

The wide scope of the goat's appetite was not understood even then, but it was revealed to Mrs. Hilhouse one day when she hung a hall mat over the porch rail to let the wind blow the dust out of it. The mat never was seen again, but Sam was found lying on the porch, near the spot where it had been hung, with a look of supreme contentment on his face and a few woolen ravelings of various colors dangling from his jaws. A few days afterward, when she wanted to hang some tidies out on the porch rail to air, Mrs. Hillhouse first tied Sam to a tree, but, unfortunately, she tied him with a rope. It happened that the tidies were in plain view of the goat, and they made a tempting display in the eyes of the creature that so constantly hungered for novelties, whether raw or cooked. Some of them were of fine linen, richly embroidered, and others were combinations of scraps of silk and satin of various pleasing colors. Sam turned upon the rope that held him and ate it. Then he tackled the delicacies displayed on the porch rail, and soon had them stowed away in his stomach.

Mrs. Hillhouse demanded that he be killed at once, but her husband was warmly attached to the animal and refused to end its life. So Sam lived, and lived to eat. The goat's intrinsic value increased. One day when Hillhouse's hired man left his vest hanging on a bar post Sam took a notion to go out in the lot where the men were working, and while nosing around espied the vest. When the owner went to get it at noon it was missing, and only a few bits of lining had been left to indicate its fate. The hired man did not take kindly to the loss of his vest, because in one of the pockets was a brand new $20 open face watch, to which was attached a three-dollar chain. The matches, tobacco, and other stuff in the pockets he could spare, but he couldn't give up his watch without a protest, and he suggested to Hillhouse that there was only one way to recover the timepiece, and that was by killing Sam and laying bare the interior of his food pouch. Hillhouse stubbornly refused to have the goat killed, and satisfied the hired man by buying him a new watch and chain.

Sam showed no signs of regret over the watch exploit and kept on hunting for unusual things to devour. One day he indulged in a meal that caused him considerable physical discomfort. An insurance agent rode out from Trenton to see Hillhouse on business. He came on a bicycle, and, leaning the machine against the fence, went into the house to look over some papers. Sam never had seen a bicycle before, and he immediately began looking it over to find out if there was anything about it that he might safely add to the varied assortment already in his stomach. The tires were soft. Sam began work on them and in an extremely short time had nibbled them from the wheels. The insurance agent was hauled back to town by Mr. Hillhouse's horse, and Hillhouse paid for a new set of tires for the bicycle. The rubber tires did not set so well on Sam's stomach as they had on the wheels, and the day after he had eaten them he gave indications of internal disturbance. He was not himself at all. He refused to eat and lay stretched out in a corner of the woodshed. Hillhouse doctored him, and in two days the animal was well enough to walk out and eat a lace curtain that Mrs. Hillhouse had laid on the grass to bleach, thinking that it was safe because Sam was sick.

One day last summer Hillhouse went to Trenton to draw money with which to pay his help. He drew $100 from the bank, $75 in five-dollar gold pieces and silver and $25 in bills. He put the money in a shot bag and shoved the bag into his coat pocket. When he reached home he took off his coat and laid it on a box while he unharnessed the horse. Sam's eye fell on the coat, and when Hillhouse disappeared in the barn he walked up and proceeded to devour it. By the time Mr. Hilhouse came out of the barn the goat had swallowed one-half of the coat, and it was the half that contained the pocket which had the money. Gold, silver and greenbacks were in the goat's stomach. Then it was that Sam's life came near an end. Hillhouse got his gun and was about to shoot the goat when his daughter objected.

"I must kill him, Carrie," said her father, "because he has swallowed $100 and I can save the coin."

"It'll be just as valuable when Sam dies as it is now," replied Carrie.

Hillhouse could not get over the argument, and Sam's life was spared. Although the animal is walking around to-day with $23 worth of jewelry and $75 in hard coin in his stomach, he puts on no airs. He is the same simple, unpretending creature that he always has been and is just as hungry as he was in his youth. His owner figures that Sam's intrinsic value is upward of $100, but he would not part with him for a house and lot.

The Inauguration Ball.

The inauguration ball dates from the very beginning. There was a ball when Washington was inaugurated in New York, but owing to the pressure of other demands upon his time, it did not take place till the evening of March 7 Washington attended, and performed a minuet with Miss Van Zandt, and danced cotillons with Mrs. Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Mrs. Maxwell and others. There was no ball at his second inauguration because of its extremely quiet character, and there was none when Mr. Adams came in because of the general grief over Washington's departure. I can find no mention of a ball when Jefferson was inaugurated, but there was one when Madison came in, and since then there has been no break in the custom. There were two when Polk was inaugurated, and two when Taylor succeeded him—an administration and an opposition ball on each occasion, both very well attended. The crush was so great at the Taylor administration ball that many persons narrowly escaped injury, and there were loud complaints because of the inadequate supply of refreshments.—Joseph B. Bishop, in Century.

TO SWELL THE REVENUES.

Mr. Dingley Explains Purpose and Possibilities of Tariff Measure.

Washington, March 16.—At quite a late hour in the session of the house Monday Chairman Dingley presented for reference to the committee of ways and means, of which it was well understood he was again to be the chairman, the tariff bill upon which he and his republican associates have been engaged for many weeks. Most of the essential details of the bill, except its administrative features, which are embodied in the last 4,000 words of the bill, beginning with section 3, have already been made known. But in discussing the general scope and purport of the bill, Chairman Dingley gave an interesting synopsis of what he expected of it, as follows:

"The bill has two purposes, namely, to raise additional revenue and to encourage the industries of the United States. On the basis of the importations of the last fiscal year the bill would increase the revenue about $112,000,000, divided among the several schedules roughly, as follows:

A—Chemicals	$3,500,000
B—Crockery and glassware	4,000,000
C—Metals	4,000,000
D—Wood	1,750,000
E—Sugar	21,750,000
F—Tobacco	7,000,000
G—Agricultural	6,300,000
H—Liquors	1,800,000
I—Cottons	1,700,000
J—Jute, linen and hemp	7,800,000
K—Wool	17,500,000
K—Manufactures of wool	27,000,000
L—Silks	1,500,000
M—Pulp and paper	58,000
N—Sundries	5,200,000

"This statement is on the supposition that the imports of each class of goods would be the same the next fiscal year as in the fiscal year ended last June. But as the imports of wool were three times as great and those of woolen goods more than twice as great in pounds as in 1893, the committee assumes that their excessive importation would be largely reduced by the proposed bill, although the fact that our domestic production of wool has diminished 8,000,000 pounds since 1893 will necessitate the importation of much more wool now than in the latter year. Assuming that the importation of wool will fall off at least one-third from those of 1896 on account of anticipatory imports to avoid duties, we place the increased revenue from this source at $11,000,000. Anticipating also that the imports of woolens will fall off nearly 15 per cent. from the enormous imports of 1896, we estimate the increased revenue from this source under the proposed rates at about $14,000,000. From sugar we estimate $20,000,000 additional revenue. Anticipating a considerable falling off of imports of Havana tobacco because of the revolution in Cuba, we reduce the estimates of additional revenue to be derived from the tobacco schedule to $4,000,000. The remaining schedules will afford a revenue of about $39,500,000 on the basis of the imports of 1896, but as there would probably be diminished exports at some points, although the gradual restoration of business activity would offset this by increasing the consumption of imported luxuries, we reduce the estimates on these to $31,000,000. These would aggregate an additional revenue of $80,000,000 the first year. A further reduction of $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 for contingencies would leave $70,000,000 to $75,000,000 as the probable increased revenue from this bill the first year, which would undoubtedly rise to $100,000,000 the second year.

"This increase of revenue is secured by transferring wool, lumber, crude opium, argole, paintings and statuary, straw ornaments, straw mattings, burlaps and various other articles from the free list of the present law to the dutiable list; by increasing the duties on woolens to compensate the manufacturer for the duty placed on wool; by raising the duty on sugar about three-fourths of a cent per pound in order to encourage the production of sugar in this country, which it is believed can be done, and thus give our farmers a new crop, which we now import mainly from abroad; by increasing the duty on agricultural products affected by Canadian competition, and on fine cotton goods, some advanced manufactures of iron and steel, manufactures of jute, flax and hemp, in order to encourage these and other industries here, and especially by increasing duties on such luxuries as liquors, tobaccos, silks and laces, etc.

"As a rule the rates of duties proposed are between the rates of the tariff of 1896 and the tariff of 1894, such reduction of rates from the former law preserving the protective principle being made feasible by changed conditions.

"The iron and steel schedule is changed very little from that schedule in the tariff of 1894, the change being entirely in the more advanced articles. The same is true of the cotton schedule. In the agricultural, wool and glass and earthenware schedules alone are the duties of the act of 1890 fully restored as a rule and in a few cases increased, with the view of amply protecting and encouraging our farming interests at every possible point. While the duty on clothing wool is larger in proportion to the foreign value than on manufactured articles, yet it is thought desirable for the public interest and for our agriculture that we should produce this prime necessity for ourselves. The duty on carpet wools, as well as upon many other articles, is imposed mainly for revenue. The irritation caused by the use of a few wools heretofore classed as carpet wools being used for clothing purposes has been remedied by transferring such wools to the clothing wool classes, but the duty on clothing wools has been restored to the rate of the act of 1890

"In framing this new tariff the aim has been to make the duties specific, or at least partly specific, so far as possible, to protect the revenue and also to protect our own industries. This has been done in response to the wishes of the better class of importers, as well as of the administrators of the law and of our own producers. The very general substitution of specific duties, even where they are only the equivalent of existing ad valorems, will of itself increase the revenue and strengthen the protection offered to our industries.

"The reciprocity provisions of the act of 1890 have not only been fully restored, but this policy has been extended by adding to sugar, tea, coffee and hides as articles on which to make reciprocal agreements, such articles as champagne, brandy, wines, artificial and natural mineral waters, chicle, argols and silk laces. In adding these articles the reciprocity provision is strengthened greatly by providing for a reduction of duties on them to countries giving us similar concessions.

"The bill as a whole has the unanimous support of the republican members of the ways and means committee and will, it is hoped, receive the support not only of republicans, but of others who believe that revenue should be at least equal to expenditures, with a small surplus added, and who are patriotic enough to entertain the conviction that in adjusting duties to secure such revenue it is wise policy to encourage home production and manufactures, and thus provide employment at good wages for the laborers of our people, upon whose purchasing power depends the market for our productions."

Sad Fate of a Young Lady in Chicago —Residence Partly Destroyed.

Chicago, March 16.—Fire Monday night almost destroyed the residence of William Spiers at 3643 Vernon avenue. Barbara Newman and Rose Mayfield, nieces of Mr. Spiers were sleeping in a bedroom on the second floor. The fire started in the second story of the residence and it is supposed Miss Newman had perished before the firemen arrived.

Mary Kobik, of Minneapolis, aged 10 years, was burned to death. The accident happened while the mother was away from the house on an errand. The little girl was endeavoring to light a bundle of kindling wood which she had placed in the stove, and in some way her skirts caught fire. Enveloped in flames, she rushed from the house, calling wildly for help. Her screams attracted the attention of some of the neighbors, by whom the flames were extinguished, but not until she had been terribly burned about the body.

A COUNTERFEITER CAUGHT.

The Police of Syracuse Make an Important Capture.

On Monday the 15th Harold Marquisee, of Utica, N. Y., was arrested in Syracuse, N. Y., on a warrant sworn out by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., charging him with forgery. On the 15th of December Marquisee visited a photo-engraver in Syracuse, saying he was the representative of the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., and arranged for the making of a full set of plates for the direction sheets, labels, etc., of the famous Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. News of this reached the home office, and no time was lost in arranging for his arrest when he should return for the plates. He returned on the 15th, and was accordingly arrested and is now in jail in Syracuse awaiting examination, which occurs on March 2d.

This arrest proves to be an important one. In addition to various plunder, such as medical books, typewriters, rugs, etc., found in Marquisee's trunk when arrested, the police also found counterfeit coin both in the trunk and on his person; and in a search of his apartments in Utica found a complete outfit for counterfeiting consisting of crucibles, bellows, nickel, lead, bismuth, antimony, a small blacksmith forge, a charcoal furnace, and several plaster-of-paris molds. The United States marshals want him just as soon as Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. are through with him, and, no doubt, he will be sentenced for a long period.

In selecting Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for his counterfeiting operations, he showed his knowledge of the proprietary medicine business; for these pills are in such great demand that they are easily sold at any drug store in the United States. His scheme was to work the country druggists and sell his imitations at a discount of from 2 per cent. to 5 per cent., explaining the reduced price by the fact that he had picked them up in small lots and at a discount from dealers who were overstocked. By working fast and making long jumps, he would have secured many hundreds of dollars in a short time. The proprietors of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are most fortunate to have caught the rogue, before he had fairly started, and to have thus kept these spurious goods out of the market.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—A bust of Thomas Arnold, of Rugby, has been placed in Westminister abbey. It is opposite that of Matthew Arnold, who was thus honored before his father.

—Ruskin's favorite recreation is chess to which it is his custom to devote his evening. A partiality for chess is also said to be one of the characteristics of George Meredith.

—Dean Farrar quotes Tennyson as having related to him the remark of a farmer, who, after hearing a fire-and-brimstone sermon from an old-style preacher, consoled his wife by saying: "Never mind, Sally; that must be wrong. No constatooshun couldn't stand it."

—Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager, though one of the most conspicuous men in this country, and well known in England and France, will never sit for his phtograph nowadays. There is an old picture of him, taken years ago, which occasionally appears in illustrated newspapers, but it does not look much like him.

—Maurice Maeterlick, the Belgian poet and dramatist, lives in the quiet old town of Ghent, and enjoys wheeling over the flat smooth roads. M. Maeterlinck is a barrister, but does not practice, saying frankly that as he was never able to manage his own affairs he could not expect to manage other people's.

—Twelve thousand copies of Ibsen's new drama, "John Gabriel Borkman," have been printed in Norwegian, being the largest edition known in Scandinavia. For Nansen's book, "Farm over Polkavet," there are 11,000 Norwegian subscribers. Jonas Lie, too, is bringing out a new novel, "Byre Rein."

—Eugene Zimmerman, the caricaturist who signs his eccentric and comical drawings "Zim," is a Swiss by birth, and started his artistic career as a painter of sign. One of his drawings on a barn in the country was so comical that it attracted the attention of the editor of Puck, and the creator of this was sought out and soon installed the Puck office at four dollars per week. When the late Mr. Gillam left Puck for Judge, Mr. Zimmerman followed him. He has since remained there.

An unusual experiment is to be made at Concord, N. C., where a large cotton mill is to be erected and operated exclusively by Negroes. The plan anticipates a capitalization of $200,000, and this is to be subscribed by colored people. No white man is to be allowed in it.

Woman's Nerves.

Mrs. Platt Talks About Hysteria.

When a nerve or a set of nerves supplying any organ in the body with its due nutriment grows weak, that organ languishes.

When the nerves become exhausted and die, so to speak, the organ falls into decay. What is to be done? The answer is, do not allow the weakness to progress; stop the deteriorating process at once!

Do you experience fits of depression, alternating with restlessness? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one moment you laugh and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Again, do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you, all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound, pain in ovary, and pain especially between the shoulders, sometimes loss of voice and nervous dyspepsia? If so, you are hysterical, your uterine nerves are at fault. You must do something to restore their tone.

Nothing is better for the purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it will work a cure. If you do not understand your symptoms, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will give you honest, expert advice, free of charge.

Mrs. Levi F. Platt, Womleysburg, Pa., had a terrible experience with the illness we have just described. Here is her own description of her sufferings:

"I thought I could not be so benefited by anything and keep it to myself. I had hysteria (caused by womb trouble) in its worst form. I was awfully nervous, low-spirited and melancholy, and everything imaginable.

"The moment I was alone I would cry from hour to hour; I did not care whether I lived or died. I told my husband I believed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do me good. I took it and am now well and strong, and getting stouter. I have more color in my face than I have had for a year and a half. Please accept my thanks. I hope all who read this and who suffer from nervousness of this kind will do as I have done and be cured."

"When I Saw —your advertisement

I thought that it was probably like the announcements of many other makers of harvesting machinery—big blow and little show; but I'm ready to surrender; go ahead, gentlemen, you're all right; I bought one of your binders last season and it is equal to any claim you ever made for it."

This is the condensed essence of what Mr. Thomas Carney, of Washington Court House, Ohio, has to say about the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator Harvester and Binder. The claims made for McCormick Machines are strong claims. That's because

McCORMICK

—The general impression among traveling men and others who have been in town lately, seems to be that if Delano was to make a determined fight for the location of the Fourth Hospital for Insane it would, now, have lots of sympathy from those who have tired of the wrangle into which the commission, and the investigating commission have got themselves. Let everybody talk for Delano. Delano ought to have the institution.

—Rev. Tabor Davies gave his steroptican lecture on Pilgrim's Progress, at the Presbyterian church, on Tuesday evening to a fair sized audience. The lecture was well handled and the illustrations aided much in impressing upon the minds of the young, in particular the importance of choosing the better way. Mrs. Davies presided at the organ; and Mr. Blackwell assisted in manipulating the lantern. A collection was taken at the close of the exercises.

—Don't buy anything you don't need. Don't buy anything you can't pay cash for, if you can get along without. Work a little harder rather than buy costly machinery you can't afford. Save what you have and pay as you go and times will be some better to you. Most people have acquired a habit of running into debt. Of living a good deal off of some one else. Of living on "they owe", consequently in debt times harder than if they were to pay as they go. Try it and see if you don't succeed.

- Mrs. Borel, an old lady living about five miles south of Delano was brought to town about 4 A. M. Monday with her lower jaw out of joint. She got up in the night to poke the fire when the accident took place. Dr. Catlin reduced the dislocation and the old lady went on her way rejoicing that she could talk as fast as ever. It is enough to make most anybody's lower jaw drop considerably to get up to poke the fire so often these cold nights, but this is the only case we have heard of this winter where the jaw droped out of joint —The new Village Council assumed the reins of government Monday evening. Mr Knoll refused to qualify consequently an adjournment was taken until next Monday evening when it is expected that the vacancy will be filled, and with a full board once again it is hoped a little tighter rein will be held. County Cullings.

The railroad committee in the House are said to have reported the Douglass bill for reducing railroad rates to be indefinitely postponed, by a vote of 10 to 1. This is the committee the Times accused with being closeted with railroad attorneys and the reporters excluded. The house however didn't see it that way and voted 53 for consideration; 50 for indefinite postponement; 12 not voting. Wright county's representative's names appear as follows: Dare for postponement; Belden and Boutwell, the former speaking, in favor of considering the bill; Mattson not voting. So we will hear more of the bill as it has not yet been quite killed.

Punish Severely.

Two of the ex state officials have been arrested for embezzlement. If proven guilty their bondsmen as a matter of justice, should be compelled to pay every dollar of the loss as well as to fully reimburse the state for all expenses incurred, while the principles as a punishment, should be given a good long term in the penitentiary, with an additional year on accounnt of their being republicans.—Weeping Water Republican

A TYPICAL CABINET.

It would be hard to imagine a more interesting and typical picture of the conditions of political life in the United States than is presented by the Cabinet of the new Administration at Washington.

The Secretary of State was born in a log cabin. The Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster General are the only college graduates. The Secretary of the Treasury was once a watchman in a lumber yard. The Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Interior are self-made millionaries. The Attorney-General is a careligionist of the Lord Chief Justic of Great Britain, and the Secretary of Agriculture is of foreign birth.

Of such a Cabinet it can be truly said that it is wholly free from discrimination on account of birth, creed, social antecedents or any form of sectionalism.-New York World.

TWICE-A-WEEK COURRIER-JOURNAL.

Beginning the first of the new year, the Weekly Courrier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., will be changed to the Twice-a-week Courier-Journal. It will be published Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The paper will be six pages, or twelve pages a week, instead of ten pages weekly, as at present, an increase of 832 columns of matter during the year. The Wednesday issue will be devoted exclusively to news and politics, while the Saturday issue will be strictly a family paper—filled with stories, miscellany, pictures, poetry, sketches, etc. The politics of the paper will not be changed, and the battle for pure Democracy and true Democratic principles will be continued successfully, in the future as in the past. In spite of the expence involved in the improvements noted, the price of the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal will remain the same, one dollar a year, with liberal inducements to agents or to old subscribers who send in new ones. A feature during the coming year will be the editorials of Mr. Henry Watterson on political and other topics of the day.

Late Literary News.

The most intensely interesting people of the world just at this moment are the millions of famine and plague stricken India. But little is known of this region by the people of the United States. Such reports as come to us are the things seen through British glasses. What has been the effect of British rule in India? Why these terrible famines? Why plagues? Julian Hawthorne has been sent by THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE to India to obtain answers to these questions at first hand and depict the situation as it appears to an American. The March COSMOPOLITAN contains the first of what is probably the most important series of articles ever presented in this magazine. Nothing has been published which gives an adequate idea of the larger operations of business—at least nothing by the class of men fitted for such work by thorough familiarity with the subjects of which they write. The article in the March COSMOPOLITAN on "The Methods of Banking," by the President of one of the largest banks of New York—a man of widest business experience—former Postmaster-General James—is one which every person, howevdr humble his clerkship or high his place in the financial world, will find interesting and instructive. This series will constitute a very complete course of business training, and every young man just entering business life and every old man will alike find it of immense value.

THE CASE AT PRESENT.

(W. H. Lampton in Life)

Diogenes Dedontoit,
A man of some renown,
Accountered with a lantern, lit,
Went nosing 'round the town.

Nor was it very dark, that he Should go aroun that way,
Because the sunshine showed it was
The middle of the day.

"Odds peterkins!" the people cried,
When first his search began,
And running after him, they asked:
"Dost seek an honest man?"

"Nay, nay," Diogenes replied,
"We have a diadem
Of that kind and the g. o. p.
Is more than full of them.

"I'm seeking what was promised us
Beyond the slightest doubt;
That Era of Prosperity
You've heard so much about."

Then those who saw him shook their heads,
And let the seeker go
On nosing with the lantern, lit,
While all they said was: "Oh!"

—Courier Journal.

"EVERY dog has his day" and "Every woman has her say", some of our republican friends intimate as much, anyway.

W. J. BRYAN is said to have received for his share on the sale of his book "The First Battle", the sum of $16000 and to have turned over to the cause of Bimetallism half the amount.

SOME of the newspapers made fun of Nevada for allowing prize fights, and at the same time their own columns are filled with pictures and minute discriptions of the whole affair. Far more space and attention was given to the prize fight than to Congress. If mind moulders would be a little more careful in the selection and handling of subjects perhaps a better tone would manifest itself among their readers.

THE write ups of some of the would be authors in the metropolitan press given to criminals, who are hung, according to law, for murder; for, in cold blood, deliberately planning to ruin their victims and then kill them to hide their own shame, or to try to avoid the consequences, are worthy of a nobler subject. The idea of an editor of a great daily paper, a mind moulder and educator of the people going to work to tell of the wonderful nerve, of the great bravery displayed by a murderer to be hung on the gallows. How he died game. How could he help it? They might as well say an ox or a sheep in the slaughter house was brave and nobly expired.

THE Minnesota Tax Reform Association are getting petitions sent in to the legislature asking for the passage of the following bill:

A bill for an act to so amend Section three (3) of Article nine (9) of the Constitution of the State of Minnesota, as to enable the voters of any county, city, village or township, by by majority vote, to reduce taxes upon improved lands and increase taxes on lands held idle, by exempting improvements.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISNATURE OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA:

Section 1. The following amendment to Section three (3) of Article (9) of the Constitution of the State of Minnesota is hereby proposed to the voters of the State; that is to say, that said Section three (3) shall be amended by adding there to the following proviso:

PROVIDED, That the electors of any county, city, village or township of the State may, at any general election or town meeting, by a majority of all the votes cast in such county, city, village or township exempt from taxation, for local purposes only, all buildings and structure and other improvements being and situated in such county, city village or township.

Other sections provide for submision to the people.

There is no harm in allowing the people the privilege of voting on any bill provided voters look the matter up and satisfy themselves as to what is really best for the masses of the people. In this enlightened age people who govern themselves by voting for what they want all have a chance to think over matters and post themselves before voting. If they do not attend to their duties and privileges as American citizens and things go wrong they must blame themselves for voting to have it so. Possibly the best thing for the country would be to assess a tax of $1. or $5. per acre for all lands within its bounds and let the improvements go free, possibly it would not. Before we vote on the subject we prefer to know more about it. On the face of the thing it looks as if we are not much of a single tax man.

WHAT's going to become of Twinsite Anoka? Merchants threaten to buy no more goods at St. Paul because of their actions on the asylum question. Moorhead threatens to get her merchants to unite in buying enough goods to get freight rates so low as to compete with the twins in the sale of goods, then buy from manufactures and eastern houses. This would be boycotting the twins with a vengeance.

TAMS BIXBY, of whom we have heard so much as the brains of the Minnesota republican party don't seem to fare any better then the balance of his party. Even William Henry Eustis is still engaged in earnestly telling Minneapolitians about "When I was Mayor" and "My policy". He don't seem to have succeeded in getting "the evener" just right so that Minnesota gets her share of the political plums.

Reaping their Reward.

Minnesota republicans though aided by National democrats and the inability of many voters to mark their tickets for president so as to count for the man of their choice rolled up quite a majority for McKinley. They also succeeded in re-electing Governor Clough over John Lind who, many of them openly admitted, was much the better man for the place. They crowed in fine style over their victory. They would show the democrats just how to run the United States Government, the State government and all kinds of government. Things would move like clockwork. Peace and harmony, among the republicans, would prevail. Now are they reaping their reward. Men who will march like sheep to the slaughter house, and vote for what they themselves will admit is not for the interests of the state, the people or any good thing; who can be trusted to support the party nominee for party interests though they believe differently, whose vote can be counted in the party lines every time whether the party be right or wrong, need little recognition. If men living in Minnesota who know that the better the woollens for the money, and the more coal for a dollar; the cheaper good fine lumber is the better for them and their neighbors, will deliberately walk up and vote to put a tariff on such things, enabling dealers in those articles to grow rich out of their hard earnings, and at the same time offer a money consideration as an inducement to clear off the last of our pine forests and evento burn up our old rails for wood will vote to restore the tariff on such articles it is not necessary to guide them office. There are other states who allow an opposition candidate to get an office occasionally, they must have the appointments to hold them in line.

When they who believe in bimetallism will vote for a gold standard, because they are told that is bimetallism. of the best kind, they can be depended on to vote the party ticket. The other fellow can have the appointment.

Mr. McCafferty and Mr. Cutcheon have been furnished places on the Reform School affairs. Republicans of the Eustis stripe delight in creating a laugh among their audiences by saying that a vote was taken in the jail and every man was a democrat. Perhaps Gov. Clough thought that all the members of the Reform School were democrats and by sending such old ex-democrats to help run the reform school they might at least hold the inmates in the gold party.

Even President McKinley don't seem to think himself called upon to recognize any claims of aspirants of note from Minnesota. As republicans claimed, Minnesota gave him a big majority. But, like the Irishman when asked if he didn't wonder at the wonderful waterfall of Niagara, with the water poaring over the stones? answered by the question: "What's to hinder?" McKinley seems to say to himself "It was a matter of course. Minnesota is a sure Republican State". And when Ex-Gov. Hubbard and Ex-Gov. Merriam go on a pilgrimage to Washington for appointments to foreign missions they return home empty handed. When Mr. Hunt, with the endorsement of the State Editoral Association appears for Public Printer he learns that another man needs the job. When Captain Castle wants a place with petitions numerously signed he don't get it. Everybody can't have the important places so Minnesota, being a sure state must wait.

Surely it must be a great come down to our Minnesota republicans. They started out to get the Presidency. Cushman K. Davis was boomed for the place. He didn't get it. Then ex-Governor Merriam presented a financial plank to the republican Convention. He was going to be appointed to a cabinet position; Secretary of the Treasury. He wasn't. Then Cushman K. Davis would be Vice-President or Secretary of State. He was neither. Then comes Estis, Hubbard, Hunt, Castle, Hendryx and a host of others. But they failed. Minnesota is certainly a great and sure republican state. Sure when votes are wanted to put the G. O. P. in power, and when the political plums are distributed just as sure not to get any.

If Minnesotians would consult their own intrests and vote for what they know is for their own interests they would fare fetter. If they voted for no tariff, no bounty, no trust, no gold standard they would be doing themselves a favor. If they would elect men to the Legislature who could build a Hospital for Insane without acting in a manner to risk being consigned to one themselves, they would save the state money, and being made the laughing stock of the country. When politics take precident of business, of charity, of humanity, then is the state so sure as to need no recognition from the balance of the country. They have all there is at home, why should they claim the rest of creation. Why should they want the Presidency, the Vice-Presidency, Secretary of State, Secretary of Treasury, Public Printer, Minister to London, Berlin or any other place? They surely have enough to fuss over at home. More tan they can harmoniously distribute.

"As they sow so shall they reap", They have coaxed, threatened, promised and done numerous things to keep men inside of the party lines. They staid for once more. And many of them have become disgusted with the outcome and will look about to see where they are at and what they want themselves, individually, before voting again.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 19th, 1897.

There have been several times during the present week when an opening ruptur between Mr. McKinley and some of the biggest men in his party seemed inevitable, but by sacrificing some of his personal friends Mr. McKinley has so far avoided it. The bones of contention are the big offices. It is the fierce fight over each of them that accounts for the small number of nominations sent to the Senate. States are no sooner made up than some objector gets backing enough to smash them. A number of men who had Mr. McKinley's positive promise that they would get certain positions have had to give way to the objectors, among them being ex-Governor Merriam, of Minn., and ex-Congressman Storer, Ohio. It was not intended to make any but necessary appointments until after the tariff bill got through Congress but it will require some very adroit maneuvering to do even that much without starting a bitter factional fight in the republican party. There is now a fight in the Congressional delegation of nearly every state especially bitter in those having republican Senators, over the men who will get the offices which are to go to those states. Still, there are columns of rot being printed about the existing harmony between the administration and Congress.

The honest patent lawyers are after the fake concerns who have been bringing discredit upon their profession in dead earnest now. They have employed Mr. William Small, Attorney-at-Law, McGill building, Washington, D. C. to undertake the duty of suppressing and prosecuting swindling concerns, and he invites correspondence from inventors, newspaper publishers and others who have been deceived and defrauded by and through false and fraudulent representations, specious devices, including offers and awards of prizes, medals of honor, certificates of stock, etc., of alleged procurers and sellers of patents. Those who have had unsatisfactory dealings with these fake patent concerns should accept the invitation and write to Mr. Small.

Using a bill introduced in Congress, which has no chance to pass, as a basis to swindle the ignorant is by no means a new dodge, but, according to the correspondence of many southerners in Congress, such a dodge is now being successfully worked among the ignorant negroes of the southern states by unscrupulous men. During the first session of the last Congress, Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, introduced by request a bill providing for the payment of a pension to all negroes who had been slaves. It was well known in Washington that the bill would never be seriously considered in committee, to say nothing of being passed by either House or Senate, but that bill is being made the basis of a swindle upon the poor negroes, who are being told that upon the payment of 25 cents for filling out an official looking blank with their name, age, residence, etc., they would be entitled to a pension when the bill becomes a law. The worse part of this dirty swindle is that the men operating it cannot be prosecuted, as it is printed upon each blank that "it is to secure the names and number of persons in each state entitled to a pension under the Thurston pension bill", and the fee is charged for filling the blank.

The nomination of Henry White to be Secretary of Embassy at London, was almost as unpalatable to republicans as the Van Alen nomination to Italy was to democrats when it was made by Mr. Cleveland about four years ago. Some of them are inclined to be sarcastic about it. For instance the man who said: "Who says White isn't an American! He has lived abroad for many years, but didn't he come over from Europe last year, live at Newport just long enough to cast his first vote and then go back. White is all right. His help is needed to make John Hay popular in London's swell society".

The tariff monstrosity known as the Dingley bill is in many respects worse than the McKinley bill, but it is going to be crammed down the threats of the democrats of the House with less than two weeks debate. There are also quite a number of republicans in the House who are opposed to this bill, and a few of them have threatened privately to vote against it, but there will not be enough of them to effect a result. The democratic opinion of the bill was voiced when Representative Berry, of Ky., said: "It is an excessively high protective tariff measure. It will, if passed, inevitably raise the price of necessaries of life, such as sugar and the woolen goods worn by all classes. I don't see how it can fail to add to the burdens of the people instead of lightening them. It will cut off our foreign markets by raising the cost of production and thus curtail the manufacturers sales. As a consequence the mills will need to run only six months, instead of all the year, as they ought to do".

Among our Exchanges.

Pioneer Press: The overthrow of the A. P. A. government at Omaha is one of the numereous bright spots on the horizon of municipal politics.

This country's salvation depends on a larger volumn of money for the people, and not until that is secured will the times be any better.—The Broad Axe.

THE advertisement of Dr. Cornelius Williams, of St. Paul published by us was without his knowledge or consent. The Doctor is a good occulist just the same.

Sherburne County Star-News: The Wright county papers are putting in a bid for Delano as the site for the insane asylum, as a solution to the vexed question. We would rather see it located there than at Hastings by a considerable.

Editor Caswell, of Anoka, makes specific charges of attempted bribery by the Hastings and St. Paul crowd in reference to the location of that 4th hospital. The legislature will not dare to ignore these charges. There must be another investigation.—Buffalo Journal.

With a state insane asylum at Delano and a county poor house at Buffalo there would always be something to fall back on. The Herald would like to see these institutions materialize so we could give some good excuse for those towns having a little larger population than Howard Lake.—Howard Lake Herald.

There is a good deal of talk about corruption in this state, and it is known and gennerally believed that there are just grounds for the talk. It ought not be at all surprising. This state is now controlled by one of the most corrupt political rings that ever existed, and the people voted for it.—Buffalo Journal.

Swift County Monitor: This insane asylum row has become a disgusting nuisance. Much as the state needs a fourth insane asylum, the general public would be pleased to see the whole thing wiped off the slate and a fresh start made. Pass a new law, appoint an entirely new commission and select another site—with both Hastings and Anoka barred.

Insane Asylum.

We should like to see Delano preparing to again enter the contest if it is thrown open as we believe the location would be a satisfactory one geographically and from a sanitary standpoint. —Howard Lake Herald.

Word of Warning.

Wiona Republican: It is the old familiar story. If the republican members of the legislature at St. Paul do not hang together in the consideration and disposition of measures of public policy, they and their party will by and by hang separately. True statesmanship does not consist in listening to and being led by the loudest mouthed brawler in the legislative body. And, practically speaking, the people of the state will hold the republican party responsible for all that is good or bad in the legislation of the present session at St. Paul.

Terms ussd Advisedly and Without Offense.

(From W. J. Bryan's Nashfiele address)

In the first place, you must commense with a definition and we must agree upon a definition. If we differ as to what honest money is we cannot get together at all: and yet there is a wide difference between the definitions of honest money which you will hear given. You take a goldbug—and I want to say to you, my friends, when I use the word "goldbug" I do not mean to use it in any offence: I simply use it in describing those who advocate the gold standard, and not in any sense of offense, but in the same way that the goldbugs use the word "lunatic" when they speak of me. (Laughter and applause). It has never hurt my feelings to be called a lunatic, or to have any other names applied to me. I take it very philosophically. I reason this way: If a man calls me a thing and I am it, he has a right, and if he calls me something and I am not, his calling calling me that does not make me that. (Laughter.)—Evening Press.

READING, Pa., March 24: Superintendent Passmore of the Reading & Southwestern street railway has issued orders to all employes that on and after April 1 they must dispense with their mustaches and beards. The order has caused much dissatisfaction. —Times.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. Courier: Senator Wolcott is undoubtedly right when he says referring to the proposed conferance, "its aaccomplishment, in my opinion, rests largely with the United States." We believe it rests wholly with the United States. If this government should remonitize silver we would probably have an urgent demand for a monetary conference inside of sixty days. It would not come from France and Germany only, but from England also.—Evenig Press.

The doctor's bill is a never-ending butt for ridicule. Acceleration ought to be given to the flying machine industry in this country by the report that Dr. Nansen proposes to inspect some of these American airships. As yet, no airship has proved a success.

The gum is procured from a transverse incision in the root. The juice flows rapidly from the first ten to fifteen minutes, and after three days' exposure a layer resembling rubber is formed, and over this another.

Minority Report on the Dingley Tariff Measure.

Washington, March 23.—The views of the minority of the committee on ways and means upon the tariff bill were presented to the house Monday evening by Representative Bailey (dem., Tex.), the leader of the democracy. It reads as follows:

"This bill was framed with the avowed purpose of protecting the manufacturers of the United States against foreign competition, and it is perfectly obvious that if it accomplishes that purpose it must result in compelling the consumers of this country to pay more for their manufactured goods, and for this reason we think it should not pass. We rest our opposition upon the broad principle that congress was invested with the power of taxation as a means of collecting from each citizen his fair proportion toward the support of the government, and that it is a gross perversion of that sovereign power to employ it as a means of enabling favored classes to levy unjust charges upon the great body of the people.

"If government has a right to levy taxes upon the people for the purpose of inducing men to establish unprofitable industries, or industries which can only be made profitable by compelling the consumers of the United States to pay exorbitant prices for their products, then the bounty system is a more direct and less complex way of attaining that end, and at least has the advantage of directness and simplicity.

"It follows as a matter of course that a bill based upon a vicious principle must be injurious in its effects, and perhaps no effect could be more pernicious than the extravagance which the bill encourages. The tabulated statement embraced in the committee report shows that the bill is expected to raise $113,000,000 more revenue than was collected in customs during the last fiscal year; and yet, as is shown by the same report, the difference between the government receipts and disbursements during that year was only $25,000,000. It is well known that the importations of last year were smaller than usual, owing to the general depressions that existed in all circles; but even supposing that importations hereafter can be kept at a level with the importations of 1896, the bill will collect from the people more than $90,000,000 annually above the requirements of our present extravagant and wasteful appropriations.

"An overflowing treasury is a constant temptation to enter upon expenditures that corrupt both the public mind and the public's servants. Under a system of high taxes there must be a surplus or there must be waste, and both are serious evils. President Jackson hardly overstated the danger of a surplus when he declared that it was more dangerous than a standing army; and yet, dangerous as a surplus is, it is not so dangerous as the extravagance which is always resorted to in order to prevent its accumulation. It cannot be forgotten that many of those who now advocate a high tariff and defend the extravagance which it engenders did not hesitate to denounce the administration of President Buchanan because in its last year the appropriations exceeded the sum of $60,000,000. Our population at that time was nearly half what it is to-day, and if the government were now properly and frugally administered our expenses, including liberal pensions for the soldiers of the late war, ought not to and would not exceed the sum of $350,000,000.

"If the system of unnecessary taxation is indefensible because of the extravagance which it encourages, it is still more so on account of the trusts which it fosters and promotes. It is not more certain that protection encourages extravagance than it is that it breeds unlawful combinations of capital. Indeed, protection is justified upon the avowed theory that competition should be restricted. True enough, it assumes the patriotic pretense that foreign competition ought not to be permitted against our home industries; but they little understand the selfishness of human nature, and especially they little understand the selfishness of that human nature which relies upon the favoritism of the law to increase its fortune, who suppose that these men, having secured themselves against foreign competition by the favor of congress, will fail to secure themselves against domestic competition by voluntary combinations among themselves.

"It is an old adage, and it is as true as it is old, that 'competition is the life of trade,' and whatever tends to restrict competition must tend to restrict trade. The majority of the committee seem to think it an easy matter for us to build a tariff wall about our borders and thus prevent the foreigners from trading with us, but they forget that the same wall which shuts the foreigner out shuts us in, and that regulations to prevent the foreigner from trading with us must at the same time prevent us trading with the foreigner. We believe in the principle of competition, and we believe the people of the United States can successfully compete against all other people of the world; and we denounce as a crime against the best interests of our people any law which leaves the consumers of this land subject to the exactions of reckless and corrupt combinations formed to destroy competition and control prices.

"The report of the committee on ways and means is singularly silent upon the old pretext that these high taxes are imposed for the benefit of American labor, and the silence may be taken as conceding the democratic contention that the intelligence and skill of the American factory operative are all the protection which he needs or desires. The labor argument of the protectionist can be reduced to an absurdity which makes it amazing that it should ever have been seriously advanced. To say in one breath that the welfare of labor depends upon its wages and that its wages in turn depend upon its skill and intelligence, and in the next breath to say that the very intelligent and highly skilled laborers of this country cannot successfully compete with the ignorant and unskilled laborers of the old world, is equivalent to saying that skill and intelligence are not of great advantage to the laborers who possess them. To our minds, it involves a contradiction in history as well as in economic theory, to hold that the factory labor of a civilized country needs protection against the factory labor of an uncivilized country.

"We are unable to offer a substitute for the pending bill, because we have not been allowed a seasonable time to prepare one. Congress convened in extraordinary session on Monday, the 15th day of March, and this bill was introduced the same day and referred to the committee on ways and means, which met the next morning, and on Thursday it was ordered to be reported to the house. The majority of the committee had spent the three months of the last session of the last congress in the preparation of their bill, and yet they refused to allow the minority three weeks in which to prepare a substitute. We are unwilling to propose a measure that has not been carefully matured, and we must therefore content ourselves with protesting against the passage of the committee's bill."

A Blow at Pugilism.

Chicago, March 23.—National officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance union have forwarded an appeal to Washington to administer a knock-out blow to pugilism in the United States. The intention is to have President McKinley secure the aid of congress and that of the governors and legislatures of every state to prohibit pugilism and the exhibition of kinetoscopic pictures of the Carson City mill and others. As the official representatives of 300,000 members of the union the national officers entreat President McKinley to call upon congress to prohibit these pictorial reproductions in the District of Columbia and every territory in the union.

Seventy-Eight Drowned.

New York, March 19.—It is now believed that 78 persons in all were lost by the foundering of the French line steamer Ville de St. Nazaire off Cape Hatteras, although a summary of the list of the passengers and crew who were in the vessel when she left shows that there were but 11 passengers in all and the crew list numbered 71 men. Of these four are known to be saved. The officers, crew and passengers were, with one or two exceptions, residents of foreign ports. Of the total number on board, 60 were colored.

HIS REPORT TO THE HOUSE.

Dingley Explains His Tariff Bill—Urges Early Enactment.

Washington, March 20.—Chairman Dingley, of the ways and means committee, Friday presented in the house the report on the new tariff bill.

The report says that a deficiency in revenue amounting to $203,000,000 in four years justifies the convocation of congress to effect a remedy. Although the government realized $293,481,894 from the sale of bonds to redeem demand notes, $262,000,000 of the notes were paid out to meet the deficiency, which notes, the report says, have been a potent cause of the distrust in business circles.

At least $16,000,000 of the $196,000,000 in the treasury will be paid out before July 1 to meet the deficiency, and of the remainder at least $150,000,000 in gold ought to remain in the reserve, leaving but $30,000,000 as a working balance, which is as small as safety admits.

If the revenue had continued to rise after the opening of the year 1893, as it had before that time, says the report, the revenue would have been ample to meet all expenditures and the government would have been spared the humiliation of issuing bonds to meet deficiencies. The report continues:

"The plain duty, therefore, of congress—a duty emphasized by the president's message laid before the house on the opening day of this extraordinary session—is to so revise the tariff as to secure an increase of revenue from duties substantially equal to what has been lost; first by the anticipated, and then by the partially realized tariff reductions made by the act of 1894.

"Another imperative duty resting on this congress is to so adjust duties in such a revision of the tariff to secure needed revenue to carry on the government as will better protect the many industries which have so seriously suffered the past three years from unequal foreign competition and from the consequent loss of purchasing power of the masses of the people, upon which the demand for products and the prosperity of every citizen depend.

"The feasibility of uniting in a tariff both revenue and protective qualities has been amply demonstrated by the results of the protective tariffs in force from 1861 to 1883, at which latter date the tariff of 1890 was practically nullified by the anticipation of a revision on a non-protective basis. The working of the wool and woolens schedule of the tariff of 1890 on a protective basis and of the same schedules in the tariff of 1894 on an anti-protective basis is exceedingly instructive on this point."

There is then a review of various schedules in the bill, the effect of each being described and commented upon at some length. Only the most general comparisons have been made.

"In revising the several dutiable schedules, as a rule the duties have been fixed at points between the tariff of 1890 and the present tariff, it having been found that on account of changed conditions in a large part of the articles duties lower than those of 1890 would be equally protective. The metal and cotton schedules are in large part the same as in the present tariff, the increases above those rates being in the more advanced articles. The agricultural, earthenware and glass, and the silk, liquor and wool and woolens schedules are substantially the same as in the tariff of 1890, the duties on fruit having been increased. Manufactured lumber, which was put on the free list by the tariff of 1894, has been transferred to the dutiable list as an act of justice to this large industry and in the interest of revenue, with little change in duties except on white pine, which has been restored to the duty of 1883. The duty on wrapper tobacco has been restored to the rate of 1890, and the rate on filler tobacco increased, partly for purposes of revenue and partly to better equalize the duties on wrappers and fillers. The general policy pursued has been to raise the duties on luxuries.

"The aim has been to make the duties specific, or at least partly specific, wherever practicable; not only to protect the revenue against undervaluation frauds, but also to give our own industries the protection carried on the face of the tariff, and in carrying out this policy we have had the sympathy and aid of reputable importers. This has been done for the most part in the chemical, glass, iron and steel, lumber, sugar, tobacco, agricultural, liquor, cotton, flax and jute, woolen, silk, paper and sundries schedules—in the silk for the first time, notwithstanding ex-Secretaries Fairchild and Manning most earnestly recommended this some years ago. Several articles, like argols, opium, asphaltum, chicory root, feathers and downs, paintings and statuary, Chinese floor-matting, lemon juice, mineral waters, hatter's plush, straw ornaments, sago flour, etc., have been transferred from the free to the dutiable list for revenue purposes, while such articles as wool, lumber, burlaps, bags and salt have been restored to the dutiable list, from which they should never have been removed.

"The reciprocity policy inaugurated in the tariff of 1890, which proved so great a success in the brief period of its existence, is not only restored, but enlarged. The provisions of the act of 1890, authorizing the president to impose duties on coffee, tea, skins and hides, in case the countries exporting such articles decline to extend equivalent concessions to exports from the United States, are reenacted, sugar being transferred to the schedule of articles on which duties are imposed. The president is further authorized to negotiate with countries exporting argols, chicle, champagne, brandy, sugar, wines, mineral waters, paintings and statuary and silk laces, with a view to secure reciprocal and equivalent concessions in favor of the products or manufactures of the United States. It is believed that this extension of the reciprocity policy of the tariff of 1890, strengthened by the tenders of lower duties as a concession in return for equivalent concessions, will result in even more advantageous commercial advantages than those that were secured under the act of 1890.

"On the assumption that the imports under the proposed tariff bill, if enacted into law, would be the same as the imports in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1896, the revenue which the several schedules of the new bill would yield, if it should be enacted into law, compared with the revenues obtained under the present tariff in 1896, and also compared with the revenue yielded by the tariff of 1890, fiscal year 1893, would be about $113,000,000 more than under the act of 1894. What the actual revenue would prove to be in the year following the enactment of the proposed measure into law is, of course, dependent upon contingencies which cannot be forecast with any approach to certainly, and will therefore be subject to varying estimates.

"It is probable that any delay beyond the 1st of May would result in a loss of from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 of revenue for each week of delay. If the proposed tariff revision could be enacted into law by April 5, undoubtedly the revenue for the first year under its operation would be from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 larger than it would be if its passage should be delayed until the 1st of July."

Honor to the Old Emperor.

Berlin, March 23.—The ceremonies attending the celebration of the centenary of the birth of Emperor William I., grandfather of the present emperor, which began Sunday and end to-day, continued Monday commencing with an early visit of the emperor and empress to the mausoleum of William I. Leading his troops, the emperor proceeded to Festival square, where at 11:30 a. m. the monument of William I. was unveiled. During the ceremony the colors and flags captured from the French during the war of 1870-71 were displayed on both sides of the monument and were surrounded by a circle of cannon also captured from the French. A banquet was given at the castle at night. Emperor William delivered an eloquent eulogy upon his illustrious grandfather.

Sunk a Greek Vessel.

Canea, Island of Crete, March 19.—The Austrian gunboat Sebenico has fired upon and sunk near Candia a Greek vessel loaded with provisions and munitions which were intended for the Greek forces at Crete. It appears that the Sebenico, while watching the Greek ship, was fired on by a party of insurgents. To this the Austrian warship replied by sinking the Greek craft and driving off the insurgents.

POWERS BLOCKADE CRETE.

Uncle Sam Is So Notified—Russia Said to Be Behind Turkey.

Washington, March 22.—The representatives in Washington of the six powers signatory to the Berlin treaty, Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russia, have in concert notified this government of the blockade of Crete, the respective notes of Sir Julian Pauncefote, Mr. Patenotre, Baron de Fava, Baron von Thielman, Mr. Hengel Muller von Hengervar and Mr. de Kotzebue, having been delivered to Secretary Sherman Sunday. They were almost identical, and consisted of a mere formal announcement of a blockade of Cretan ports against ships under the Greek flag commencing at nine o'clock Sunday morning. Merchant vessels of neutral powers, including those of the United States and of the treaty powers, while subject to overhauling by the blockading war ships of the concerted fleets, are not to be disturbed in their ordinary commercial occupation if they carry no merchandise intended for the Greeks or insurgents on the island.

Washington, March 23.—The United States will take no action at present regarding the blockade of Crete. Secretary Sherman says he will simply acknowledge the receipt of the notes of the representatives in Washington of the powers, which were delivered to him Sunday.

Copenhagen, March 23.—The semi-official Berlingske Tidente publishes a dispatch from Athens saying that an agreement has been concluded whereby Russia guarantees the integrity of the Turkish empire in return for an island in the Mediterranean and the peninsula of Mount Athos.

Constantinople, March 23.—The opinion prevails here that the blockade of Crete by the fleets of the foreign powers, which commenced Sunday, will be a useless proceeding, as Col. Vassos, commander of the Greek army of occupation, is well supplied with provisions. It is now thought that the best means to accomplish the withdrawal of the Greek troops from Crete would be to withdraw the Turkish troops.

The Turks at Tokat Sunday attacked the Armenians while the latter were in church. Fifteen were killed and it is feared that this outbreak marks a renewal of the massacre of Armenians.

IT STILL LAGS.

Business Is Slow in Reaching Its Former Volume.

New York, March 20.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"Though steadily increasing, business is still much below its volume in former years of prosperity, and many express disappointment. Yet there is some gain every week, with more hands at work and more mills in operation, and the sure result, larger purchases for consumption, cannot be long delayed. In some branches it is felt already. There is larger distribution of finished products, and the demand for commercial loans has sharply increased, especially in dry goods and the iron and steel branches.

"The progress of the iron and steel industry is hindered by uncertainty regarding the cost of lake ore for the coming year. While there is no great activity in finished products, the demand steadily increases. Contracts for several great buildings at Chicago are pending, and for a good many bridges and other railroad works, and the demand for wire nails and for wire does not abate, nor the demand for black sheets required in the tin plate manufacture.

"Although shipments of boots and shoes are almost as large as in any previous year, it is announced that one or two of the largest works have closed for want of orders. At the same time many other concerns are taking very large orders, it is claimed, at prices below those generally quoted.

"The demand for wheat has not given much help to speculation. Atlantic exports have been only 1,263,390 bushels, against 1,119,335, flour included, for the corresponding week last year, while western receipts have been only 1,297,346 bushels, against 2,416,089 bushels last year. Accounts regarding the coming crop have been less favorable this week, and the price has advanced 1⅝ cents. The exports of corn continue heavy, 4,543,705 bushels for the week, and quotations advanced seven-eighths.

"The volume of business indicated by clearing house exchanges is smaller than last year. The average of daily exchanges for the month is 3.3 per cent. less than last year.

"Failures for the week have been 216 in the United States, against 261 last year, and 50 in Canada, against 49 last year."

Pingree Is Not Mayor.

Lansing, Mich., March 20.—The supreme court of Michigan decided on Friday that the office of mayor of Detroit became vacant when Hazen S. Pingree took the oath of office as governor of Michigan on January 1. The court ordered an election to fill the vacancy on the 5th of April, the date of the spring elections. The decision of the court was unanimous, and is based on two grounds: That the mayoralty is a state office, and cannot be held by the governor, according to the constitution, and that the two offices are in common law incompatible.

Violates Anti-Trust Law.

Washington, March 23.—By a majority opinion delivered by Justice Peckham, of the supreme court of the United States, it has announced its decision that the agreement in the Trans-Missouri Freight association to maintain rates within its territory was a violation of the anti-trust law of 1890, prohibiting contracts or combinations in restraint of trade, and must be abandoned. This reverses the decision of the courts below, which ordered a dismissal of the government's bill. Justices Field, Gray, Shiras and White dissented.

Want to Make a New State.

Albany, N. Y., March 23.—What has been feared and suggested by the republican leaders from the interior and up-country section of the state has come to pass. They argued that the creation of a greater city of New York was the first step toward making a separate state out of the territory adjacent to New York harbor. Assemblyman Trainor will introduce two bills looking toward the creation of a new state out of the counties of New York, Kings, Richmond, Queens, Suffolk, Westchester and Putnam.

War Hero Killed.

Cumberland, Md., March 22.—An eastbound passenger train on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad jumped the track two miles west of Oakland Saturday, and Gen. J. S. Fullerton, a St. Louis capitalist, with a distinguished record for gallantry during the war of the rebellion, was killed and ten other persons were more or less badly injured.

Chosen by the President.

Washington, March 23.—The president sent to the senate on Monday the nomination of Binger Herman, of Oregon, to be commissioner of the general land office. Ernest G. Timme, of Wisconsin, was named as auditor for the state and other departments (fifth auditor).

MILK A NUTRITIVE.

A Medical Man Who Existed for Thirty Days on Sweet Milk.

A medical man expresses the belief that person could live for any length of time and take heavy exercise all the while on no other food than sweet milk. His conviction is the result of personal expiriment.

He wanted to establish the fact that persons convalescing from sickness may grow stronger with no other nutriment than sweet milk, and that they are obliged to take "something solid" to eat, as so many people imagine. He holds that many a convalescent has has gone into his grave as a result of overtaxing his week stomach by putting "solid" food into it, and he maintains that the old belief as to bread being the first essential of human life is shown by his experiment to be erroneous.

His test was to live 30 days with only sweet milk as a nourishment. In the hole time he lost 5½ pounds in weight, but no strenght. He even attributes the loss of weight to the warmth of the weather and to excessive exercise on the bicycle, and the daily manipulation of 16-pound dumbells and other heavy weights. He took more exercise than usual in order to test the thing fairly. On the seventh day of the experiment he ran several fast races in a skillful manner, but was beaten in each race.

On the thirtieth day he again pitted himself against the same runner and got the best of the opponent, which certainly would tend to confirm his statement that he lost no strength during 30 days' test. He drank four pints of milk daily for the last week. He thinks a healthy person should take about five pints of milk daily when no other food is being taken. His practice was to drink milk at intervals of two hours for the day, commencing at seven o'clock in the morning and continuing until ten at night. After that he would take no more until the next morning.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A GLIMPSE OF PARADISE.

Talk about your paradises!
Though they may be fair,
Nothing else is half so nice as
Is a happy pair.
Life's a treasure, full of pleasure—
Honey to the brim—
When a body loves a body
Who's in love with him.

Many years we've dwelt together,
Winsome wife of mine,
Always happy though the weather
Brings us rain or shine.
Love has sought us out and taught us
Life's a joyous hymn
When a body loves a body
Who's in love with him.

In our hearts the spring eternal
Gladdens all the land.
We shall reach the great supernal,
Walking hand in hand.
Oh, the glory of the story
Time can never dim,
When a body loves a body
Who's in love with him.

A SISTER.

BY GWENDOLEN OVERTON.

Army wives generally have unmarried sisters. These sisters always come out to visit them, and the rest goes by itself.

Mrs. Lorrilard had an unmarried sister. She was very attractive. She was far more attractive than Mrs. Lorrilard ever could have been. The girl's name was Spencer—May Spencer. She was 18 years old, if you took her word for it; and she was blond and pink and white and plump. She came from some place in Ohio, and she visited the Lorrilards at Stanton—which is in New Mexico, 100 miles from the railroad, across Dead Man's valley (there is always a Dead Man's valley) and some steep hills and a lava bed a mile wide. If you have never seen a lava bed, you cannot appreciate that. You might try to imagine the ocean lashed into fury by a simoon, then fancy its great waves and billows and swells changed suddenly to dark gray-brown stone at the height of the storm, and you may form a vague idea of what the lava bed between Fort Stanton and the railroad is like.

It frightened Miss Spencer badly. The ambulance went slipping, and sliding, and coasting, and thumping, and bounding over the one passable part, in a way that only an ambulance conducted by a driver who has spent his life on Arizona and New Mexico roads could possibly stand. It put all the laws of centripetal force and of equilibrium at naught. It and the four mules were laws unto themselves.

Miss Spencer was not accustomed to that sort of thing. She stood it as long as she could, and then she told Maj. Roche—in whose charge she was traveling—that she meant to get out and walk. She had bothered the major a good deal already, and he was getting tired, so he did not say anything, but simply told the driver to "slow up" and let Miss Spencer get out by herself.

She fell behind after a moment, and the ambulance went relentlessly on, creaking, flapping its canvas, clanking its chains, its brake screeching shrilly. And as it disappeared, sometimes lost to sight in a great hollow, sometimes toiling up a smooth face of lava, Miss Spencer felt herself abandoned, indeed, in a New Mexico desert under that terrible midsummer sun. The heat was fiery, scorching, parching. The sky was like hot blue glass. She wondered why, when the lava was hot enough to burn her feet through the soles of her shoes, it did not melt or grow soft. She kept on walking because she was afraid to stop. Twice she slipped and fell and cut her hands. Under the porous, piled-up rock, rabbits and owls and quail were hidden; there were snakes, too, and lizards. At first she was frightened when they scurried by her, but soon, with her head ringing and her eyes dazed with congested blood and her mouth open and as dry as flour, she did not even notice them.

She reached the end of the huge rock river at last, and found the ambulance waiting. The driver was asleep, and the major was drinking beer. He offered her some, and when she had drunk it she held out her broad little foot.

"My shoes are all cut to pieces, and they were new and awfully heavy."

"You should have kept still," he answered.

Now, Miss Spencer wanted sympathy, and when she didn't get it she took a dislike to the major; and because she disliked him, she eventually made him sorry.

For the first fortnight of her visit she was not pretty. She was sunburned from her passage of the lava sea. Her face was red and swollen, then blotchy, and lastly peely. After that she returned to the normal pink and white She was the only girl at the post, and there was a bachelor, a brevet bachelor, a young contract surgeon, and Maj. Roche's son. The bachelor officer was studious—the kind that have much faith and think that the great fathers in Washington will reward lieutenants who pass high exams. and have ideas on Indians. He had no time for young women. He paid his one call and retired. The brevet bachelor is peculiar to the service. His wife is back east, visiting her family. He differs from the real article only in that he is ineligible. He was devoted to Miss Spencer, but he did not count. There was also the contract surgeon. Of course, he was only a contract surgeon. Still, he was tall and blond and had a beguiling southern drawl. He fell in love with Miss Spencer.

But the exciting part of the story hinges on Maj. Roche's son. He was 20, but he was of no use on earth. He was just a boy, and never would be anything more. He had failed in everything he had ever undertaken. He couldn't even dance, and he was afraid of a three-foot acequia when he rode. He depended on his papa for everything, and he thought he knew women through and through. Providence sent Miss Spencer to show him that he didn't—but the ways of Providence are inscrutable, and I can't be sure.

Well, the con tract surgeon fell in love with Miss Spencer, but, like Viola, he never told his love. Now, as the bachelor was hidden, Miss Spencer couldn't fall in love with him, and no one could have fallen in love with Teddy Roche, so she reciprocated the contract surgeon's passion.

"His name was Randolph—Custis Randolph, to match his nice blue eyes and his charming drawl. His courtship was of the eternally-on-hand sort. The life of a garrison offers even greater advantages for this than that of a southern town. He was with Miss Spencer from guard mounting until long after taps. But Miss Spencer pined to see more of him.

"Mr. Randolph, I believe you're lazy!"

"Oh, now—Miss May—why? That isn't kind." He gazed at the flag on the flag staff tenderly, and dwelt musically on each word.

"Because."

"It is the privilege of a lady to give that reason." His eyes sought the tennis court in tender, blue abstractedness."

"Well, I know you are."

"Won't you have pity on me, and tell me why?"

"Because you never are up until almost guard mount."

"Oh! deah, yes I am. I go over to the hospital at sick call, you know."

"Why don't I ever see you, then?"

"Perhaps you haven't risen yourself."

"I'm always up at reveille."

"No! Goodness; why on earth do you do that?"

"I believe you go over to the hospital the back way and aren't half awake and don't even have a collar on."

"Now, Miss May—how unkind."

"Isn't it true?"

"I always have my collar on." He told a future truth. After this he would wear a collar.

"I hate lazy people."

"Oh, Miss May—how unkind. You don't hate me, I hope?" His eyes were on the pink ribbon that fluttered form her belt; he took hold of it and wound it around his finger, getting gradually nearer to her.

"I do, if you are lazy."

"How can I prove to you that I am not?"

"That's easy enough."

"Do tell me how."

"Just prove it."

"By rising early and letting you see me?"

"Well—yes."

"I shall do so to-morrow."

"But I always go for a ride before breakfast."

"May I not join you?"

"If you like. I don't care." Which is feminine for caring very much indeed.

So Dr. Randolph rode with Miss Spencer the next morning, and he breakfasted at the Lorrilards', and he sat on the Lorrilards' porch, to watch guard mounting, and then he played tennis with Miss Spencer, and when it was too hot to do that any longer they sat on the porch again, shaded by the crowsfoot and morning glory vines, and read aloud by turns. They parted for luncheon, but immediately afterward they went again in the Lorrilards' sitting-room to practice the mandolin and guitar. Randolph dined with the Lorrilards, and then he and Miss Spencer walked up and down the line until taps, and after taps they sat on the porch once more and talked in undertones.

Occasionally the Roche boy made a third, and, though he was far from welcome, he never guessed it.

Now, it may seem incredible, but it is true, that though this went on without a pause for ten solid months, Randolph still modestly doubted if he were loved, and dared not voice his passion. Mrs. Lorrilard began to think that she had done quite all that the family could expect of her, and she grew hopeless and weary, moreover, of boarding free two hungry young people. She told Miss Spencer as gently as possible that she might go the next time the ambulance went over to Carthage, which was the railroad station. Miss Spencer told Randolph she was going—and wept. And Randolph consoled her from afar, and actually thought she was weeping at leaving her little nephew and niece and her sister. There are men like that.

The ambulance went a week later to carry Maj. Roche and Teddy Roche to the railroad. Teddy was offered a position at Tucson, and was going to take it; the major had government business at Carthage. The Carthage road is a branch; it joins the main line of the A. T. & S. F. at a station called San Antonio. The major would chaperon the young woman to Carthage; thence she would go to the main line and east, and Teddy to the main line and west. Only Teddy and May compromised. They both went to Socorro, which is on the main line, a very little northeast of San Antonio.

The contract doctor and Miss Spencer had a harrowing parting. The latter lost her temper over his procrastination, and burst into tears. It nearly broke his heart and entirely silenced his tongue.

After she was gone, hopelessly gone, he determined to reveal the secret of his heart, by letter. But, being named Custis Randolph, he put off doing it. Instead, he swung on his hammock all day, and thought of her blue eyes and pretty face and guileless smile, and regretted his erstwhile constant companion. The ambulance would return, empty of its lovely load, in five days. He knew that. He would write when it returned.

So, on the afternoon of the fifth day, he sat, still swinging in the hammock and smoking a pipe, the ashes whereof besprinkled his coat, when the four mules and the ambulance rattled into the post. They stopped at the major's quarters, in a cloud of dust, and two men and a woman alighted. There was no doubt about who the woman was. In his delight, Randolph lost his head. He strode down the broad walk to the Roches'.

Miss Spencer was still standing by the ambulance, hunting—with the driver's help—for something under one of the seats. The major and Teddy had gone indoors.

"Why, Miss May!" said Randolph, and this time there was no drawl—"how delightful! What brings you back?"

"Oh! my husband. Teddy and I got married in Socorro, and joined the dear old major again in Carthage the same day."

"How delightful," Randolph repeated, weakly.

"Well, Teddy seemed to think so, but the dear, sweet old major didn't. Anyway, you know, he was so horrid about my shoes on the bad lands that day." She smiled demurely.

And that was all anyone ever knew about it.—Gwendolen Overton, in San Francisco Argonaut.

A Great Stammerer.

Charles Kingsley was a great martyr to stammering and it was torture to him to keep conversation waiting until he could put his thought into words. Singularly enough, in church when he was reading or speaking there was no sign of stammering, but on the way home from church he would say: "Oh, let me stammer now; you won't mind it!"—Chicago Chronicle.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Both Bodies Are in Good Working Order.

Gossipy Letters Giving in Detail the More Important Work of the Senate and House of Representatives.

St. Paul, March 17.—Pass one more day up in the senate to the credit of the fourth insane asylum imbroglio. At the session yesterday Senator Miller called up his resolution for the appointment of a committee of seven to ascertain whether the present asylums cannot be enlarged sufficiently to meet the public demands, and thus postpone the fourth asylum for a time. Of course, the friends of Hastings were up in arms in opposition, while the Anoka contingent, feeling that any turn of the wheel could make it no worse for them, favored the scheme. The upshot of a lengthy debate was that the resolution was passed, but the work was assigned to the regular committee on insane asylums, instead of to a special committee. This was done by a vote of 23 to 21, which indicates that Hastings' strength has been reduced.

One of the bills introduced provides for the repeal of the law requiring fees to be paid for the filing of articles of incorporation. When the senate adjourned there was an open meeting in the chamber of the judiciary committee to hear newspaper representatives relative to the proposed repeal of the libel law of 1887. The Publishers' Association of the Twin Cities and the State Editorial association were represented by several speakers in opposition to the proposed repeal.

The contention in the house yesterday was relative to the disposition of the road and bridge fund. Bill after bill has been introduced making appropriations for roads and bridges, to an amount which cannot be provided for in the next four years. There is only $39,000 in the fund, and more than twice that amount is called for by the bills now pending. In consequence, a resolution was offered apportioning the sections of the state where the funds available shall be expended, and also the amount which each section shall have. After debating nearly all the forenoon on this topic the resolution was withdrawn, and the house found itself emerging from the same hole it went in at. One important item of business accomplished was the passage of a resolution forbidding the further use of the house for lectures on phrenology.

St. Paul, March 18.—To scale or not scale. That was the question which agitated the senate yesterday. The scale in question is known as the San Jose, Cal., product and the bill in question is to prevent its introduction and spread in Minnesota. In California the scale insect is one ot the greatest drawbacks which confronts fruit growers. The opponents of the bill claimed it was merely in the interest of nursery men. After two hours' debate it was recommended to pass by 19 to 12, but that is 9 votes short of passage.

Several quite important bills came into the senate. One increases the tax on the gross earnings of insurance companies doing business in the state from 2 to 4 per cent. Another taxes sleeping and drawing room cars 4 per cent on their gross earnings. The teachers' pension bill was a third measure which will attract a good deal of attention. The fund is to be created by a tax of 1 per cent per annum on the salaries of teachers. To obtain a pension a teacher must have served 20 years, and 12 years of that time in the place where the pension is to be paid. The highest pension allowed is $500 per annum.

The house showed its good will for Speaker Jones by presenting him with a large oil painting of himself. He accepted with thanks.

The traveling library bill lacked two votes of passing in the house. It has been one of the most agitated bills of the session and has been killed and resurrected several times. It looks as though it would stay dead now. The bill extending the terms of county auditors to four years produced a long debate, and while it was allowed to go to the calendar for passage or rejection, it only developed a strength of 50 votes, which is eight minus of passage. Three bills were passed by the house, the one of importance providing for free text books in the schools.

St. Paul, March, 19—The bill regulating the state board of equalization was the subject of a sharp debate in the senate yesterday. The bill authorizes the board to increase, but not to decrease the assessments made by the county officers. A strong effort was made to allow them to decrease an assessment as well, but it failed and the bill was recommended to pass with a proviso that a party should have a hearing before his assessment was raised. Senator Knatvold endeavored to resurrect his bill making village license $1,000, but failed. The bill was put on the table very hard.

The judiciary committee gave a hearing in the open senate to a large number of merchants from the leading cities in the state who appeared in opposition to the proposed anti-trust law. They claimed it would not reach the trusts, but would destroy mercantile business in the state. Nothwithstand- St. Panl and Minneapolis united in favor of allowing the capital commission to issue $500,000 in certificates of indebtedness, the bill was laid over for further consideration. As far as the senate committee on insane hospitals has gotten, the evidence is that a fourth asylum is necessary.

The Twin City Jockey club, having expended $60,000 in building a grand stand at the state fair grounds, thought it was hardly fair when the legislature two years ago passed a law forbidding pool selling. A bill was accordingly introduced in the house repealing the prohibitory law of 1895, and it was recommended to pass, but the house reconsidered the recommendation yesterday, and now the bill is likely to be killed. The bill permitting labor organizations to co-operate to maintain wages caused quite a stir in the house. Representative Johns claimed that threats were being used of political death to intimidate members to vote for the bill. In spite of the heated debate, the bill was recommended to pass. The bill allowing organized clubs to conduct glove contests, which is designed to allow prize fighting in Minnesota, was indefinitely postponed by the house.

Though Saturday is the last day for introducing bills, only thirteen were offered in both branches yesterday. Altogether, there have been 1,338 bills introduced, and before the limitation expires the number will exceed 1,500. It will require pretty industrious work the remaining month of the session to give proper consideration to the measures still in the hands of the committees.

St. Paul, March 20.—The legislative storm center was in the house yesterday very decidedly. It continued over from the day before in the shape of the bill taxing the output of the iron mines 8 cents per ton, and the mines not worked on the supposed valuation of the ore in the ground. The bill was the special order and all other business was sidetracked. A call of the house was ordered and continued throughout the day. The friends of the measure were divided as to whether the tax should be 5 or 8 cents but finally amended the bill to make it 5 cents per ton and the fight raged all up and down the line. More oratory was developed than on any other measure this session. As the members were confined in the hall owing to the call they flocked to the cloak rooms to escape the speeches but the orators made a fair sized audience of themselves and out of courtesy they remained to hear each other. It was nearly 5 p. m. when a vote was reached and the bill was lost by 56 yeas to 50 nays—it requiring 58 votes to pass a bill. Before the vote was announced Mr. Staples changed his vote to nay for the purpose of moving a reconsideration, so that the official record stood 55 yeas to 51 nays. There were seven absentees, and if every member had been present the bill would have passed. As it is, the friends of the bill are very confident they can get the requisite 58 votes when the bill is reconsidered. Upon the vote being reached the house immediately adjourned.

The senate also indulged in an elaborate debate, though not of so exciting a character. The contest was over the house bill providing for the organization of the unorganized counties of Cass and Beltrami. The bill was finally recommended to pass, although there were 23 votes in favor of indefinite postponement.

A bill was passed for a constitutional amendment giving women the right to vote at municipal elections for officers of library boards. They already have the right to vote for school board officers. A bill was also passed forbidding companies being organized to deal exclusively in tax titles, and another authorizing the organization of insurance companies to insure against loss by burglars and robbers.

St. Paul, March 22.—Saturday was not a strong day in the senate for accomplishing results. Two bills were passed of general interest—one allowing newspapers to charge for publishing the heading and foot of tax lists, which heretofore have been printed free, and one allowing the state board of equalization to increase but forbidding them to decrease assessments. Property owners who want their assessment reduced can no longer appeal to the state board, if this bill goes through the house and becomes a law, but must abide by the decision of the county officers. The bill providing for a state highway commission with a view of improving the roads elicited a long debate, but no result was reached Four bills were introduced, one of which authorizes the use of automatic voting machines at elections. It will be a case, if adopted, where the voter will touch the button and the machine will do the rest.

Anyone who was in the house Saturday forenoon was made fully aware that the bill imposing a 5 cent tonnage tax on the output of iron mines was not dead, nor even sleeping. A call of the house was ordered as soon as it was called to order, and over an hour was spent in bringing in absentees. When all that could be found were present, Mr. Staples moved to reconsider the bill which had been lost the day before, and the motion was carried by 58 to 43. It requires 58 to pass a bill, but as some opponents of the measure voted to reconsider, its friends did not dare to put it on its passage. It was made the special order for tomorrow afternoon. Both friends and opponents are straining every nerve on this measure and the closeness of the fight intensifies the interest. On the surface the leaders on both sides profess confidence of success but in reality both are greatly alarmed. No one can tell until the next roll call what will happen. It is claimed that one vote was wrongly recorded nay on Friday when the man voted yea, and if this is true it had 57 votes, only one less than is necessary to pass it while seven were absent, two of whom are sure friends of the bill. It is the first real, good entertaining fight of the session.

The peculiarities of legislation have an illustration in the case of W. M. Jones, who rendered legal services to the state. Two years ago a bill passed appropriating $1,000 to pay him but through an error of the enrolling clerk failed to become a law. This year a bill was introduced in the house giving him the same sum and was promptly rejected. In the senate it was introduced and passed. Saturday the senate bill reached a vote in the house and the bill was cut to $250, and passed. So Jones must lose $750 because a clerk made a mistake.

One of the bills introduced in the house forbids any kinetoscope or veroscope of a prize fight in Minnesota. If this passes the Corbett-Fitzsimmons debate will not be seen here. A long list of bills were reported from committees and a good many debated in committee of the whole, but no bills were passed by the house.

St. Paul, March 23.—Yesterday was another committee of the whole day, no attempt being made to pass bills in either branch of the legislature. In the senate the bill providing for publishing notices of expiration of redemption in the newspapers was indefinitely postponed. A long debate ensued over the distribution of the $14,090 appropriated for county fairs, it being claimed that Olmstead county, in obtaining $2,000 for a Southern Minnesota fair, got more than her share. The bill was recommended to pass, in spite of strong opposition.

The longest debate in the house was over the bill allowing ten men in a jury of twelve to render a verdict in civil cases. It was finally recommended to pass. The bill placing the grain inspection department under civil service was again defeated. There seems to be a "to the victors belong the spoils" feeling regarding this bill, and the farmers in the legislature don't want to be tied down to any one set of inspectors. A desire has cropped out all through the session to hit the railroad commissioners, and a measure was proposed yesterday cutting their salaries from $3,500 to $2,000, and their secretary from $2,500 to $1,500.

A SOLDIER.

From the Sentinel, Cherokee, Kansas.

J. M. Baird, a Union war veteran, and commander of Shiloh Post, No. 56, G. A. R., Cherokee, Kansas, made the following statement to a reporter on August 31st, 1896:

"For about three years I have suffered intensely from rheumatism, and during that time I have tried various remedies and was treated by several able physicians, but without result. I passed many a long, weary night without closing my eyes in sleep, so great was the pain in my arms and hands. Last spring Rev. J. B. Wiles advised me to try Pink Pills as he said they had cured a bad case of rheumatism for him and some of his relatives. I was so impressed with Mr. Wiles' enthusiastic praise of Pink Pills that I decided to try a box, and the result is all that the most exacting could wish, for before I had taken two boxes of the pills I was completely cured, and I feel better now than I have for several years.

"My wife," continued Mr. Baird, "was badly afflicted with neuralgia in the breast with frequent smothering spells. One box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills effected a complete cure in her case. I attribute my cure and that of my wife solely to Pink Pills, and have no hesitancy in recommending them to the afflicted."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—(they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

The people who once claimed to have found their affinity, don't, as a rule, look as if they had found much.

The report that the inauguration of a new sleeping car line from Chicago to Washington, by way of Cincinnati and Indianapolis, by the B. & O. and connecting lines, was part of a plan of the Receivers to abrogate the lease of the Central Ohio Railroad is untrue. The lease of the Central Ohio is to run for 30 years yet, and the road is too valuable as a part of the B. & O. system to be disposed of. The financial troubles, which are now in the courts, will be settled satisfactorily.

WISE ADVICE TO HUSBANDS.

Those Who Have Ailing Wives Will do Well to Accept It.

Do not wrangle and quarrel, and finally rush into the courts and try to get a separation from your faithful wife; but just stop a moment and think! Your wife, who was even-tempered and amiable, and all that was lovely when you married her, has changed. Now she is peevish, irritable, jealous, discontented and miserable—in a word, she has uterine disorder of some kind.

Law is not the remedy for this condition, she needs medical treatment, her uterine system is at fault.

My advice to you is, sit down and write a letter to that friend of women, Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., state fully and freely the whole case to her and she will honestly advise you what to do. Give your wife that chance, good man!

If you do not wish to write about your wife, bring her a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, watch its effects, you will soon see the beginning of the improvement; then get her another and keep it up until she is restored to you, the same lovely woman you married years ago.

Following we relate the circumstances of a case of this nature. Mrs. MELVA ROUTON, of Camby, Ind., says:

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be of great benefit to me. The doctors said I had womb trouble. I had the headache all the time, also a terrible backache, was nervous, cross and irritable. I looked so pale that people would ask me what was the matter. I suffered in this way for about four years, until one day about in despair my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I commenced its use, and much to every one's surprise, it cured me. It has completely changed my disposition for the better also. Several of my neighbors, knowing what the Pinkham medicine has done for me, are taking it, and are much pleased with the result."

Bubbles or Medals.

"Best sarsaparillas." When you think of it how contradictory that term is. For there can be only one best in anything—one best sarsaparilla, as there is one highest mountain, one longest river, one deepest ocean. And that best sarsaparilla is———?.... There's the rub! You can measure mountain height and ocean depth, but how test sarsaparilla? You could if you were chemists. But then do you need to test it? The World's Fair Committee tested it,—and thoroughly. They went behind the label on the bottle. What did this sarsaparilla test result in? Every make of sarsaparilla shut out of the Fair, except Ayer's. So it was that Ayer's was the only sarsaparilla admitted to the World's Fair. The committee found it the best. They had no room for anything that was not the best. And as the best, Ayer's Sarsaparilla received the medal and awards due its merits. Remember the word "best" is a bubble any breath can blow; but there are pins to prick such bubbles. Those others are blowing more "best sarsaparilla" bubbles since the World's Fair pricked the old ones. True, but Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the medal. The pin that scratches the medal proves it gold. The pin that pricks the bubble proves it wind. We point to medals, not bubbles, when we say: The best sarsaparilla is Ayer's.

—Plans and specifications for the several new buildings to be erected here as soon as the weather warms up are being freely discussed about the sidewalks when the sun shines. Some of them look quite nice on paper to say the least.

—Miss Gracie Mowatt on the 9th aniversay of her birthday, last Saturday gave a party to 22 of her little friends. Puss Sherer got the bean; Annie Fautch, the ring, and Carrie Eppel the money. All had a good time and wished for many returns of the happy occasion.

—The Ida County Era, Iowa, says complaints are being made that much of last year's corn crop did not mature sufficiently to grow, and advises people to test their seed corn and if it fails to grow to secure some of the '95 crop. The same fault may be found here. Test your seed corn before you plant it. It is no fun to plant the corn field over; especially if the season is late to begin with.

—On Saturday several car loads of mysterious looking machinery passed over the G. N. through town on their way to the Pacific thence to Japan. It was said to be an outfit for a paper mill to be operated in that country. Unless the new tariff laws interfere we may look for a lot of fine paper clothing in a few months. Our young ladies and dudes will then probably assume the apperrance so far as apparel goes, of Japanese dolls.

—Minneapolis is having another epidemic of Typhoid Fever, 118 cases are reported in hospitals, Mississippi water is charged with being the cause and the health authorities recommended that drinking water be boiled before using. If any of our citizens should have business in the Saw Dust City and do not want to become infested with typhoid germs they had better do their drinking at home before they go and after they get back. It is the safest plan.

—One of the principle sources of danger to the established healthfulness of our village is the great nuisance of emptying slops onto vacant parts of lots or into alleys. These dumping places are unsightly, unpleasant, unwholesome and unhealthy and should be annihilated. Each family should keep a swill barrel which the village should have emptied every day where necessary, or every two days beyond the limits of the village, onto some farm where it would aid in fertilizing the grounds. This should be provided for before warm weather comes on.

—Merchants complain that people patronize the city stores; the great department stores and take trade there that should be done at home. If the merchants in a village of the the size of this would come together and meet traveling men from manufactories or eastern houses and get their assistance to get the best freight rates they could doubtless by buying large quantities of goods and dividing them on receit, get them landed in Delano as cheap or nearly as cheap as in the cities, and their other expenses being less than city merchants they ought to sell goods as cheap. Most country people had rather buy of some one with whom they are acquainted, and trade should be held at home, even if in order to compete with department stores our country merchants take each a special line and constitute themselves into a great department store, run in seperate buildings, each man attending to his particular branch.

News from the Eagle.

—The asylum difficulty is practicly settled, the Senate having recommended to pass a bill locating it at Anoka. Thus ends a very disagreeable piece of business from beginning to end.-Eagle March, 25, '97.

What's the matter with the "Old Bird" anyway? Has she entirely gone daft? Anoka don't seem to be in it with the Senate; but, at last accounts, Hastings was voted to have it. And the squabble is not yet over. Some ugly charges of attempted bribery on the part of Sheriff Chapel, of St. Paul, have been made by editor Caswell, of Anoka. This may result in prolonging the unpleasantness until the asylum is given to Delano where it ought to be.

—The entertainment given by Alexander's Plantation Genuine Minstrel troupe is said to be good, but was very poorly attended here.

Senator Culkin, of Wright County, is said to have been among the first to have been provided for. The receivership, or the recordership of the Duluth land office, with salary of $3000, or $4000 a year. The papers don't agree on the salary, and the Senator has not yet notified us about the appointment so we can't give exact figuers. However, of course this will have to satisfy Wright County Republicans for a long time. Its rather more than they are used to feeding on. Pretty rich for their blood. But then "Billy" will be a Duluth boy now.

Possibly one reason Senator Davis help on to his present office instead of taking a cabinet position was that he feared Mike Doran or some other National Democrat would be appointed to his place. And again maybe he couldn't get the cabinet place; as no Minnesota man seems to be big enough in the eyes of the administration for such important offices.

What a time there will be two years from now getting a legislature together to elect a succesor to Senator Davis. If some good silver Democrat would launch his frail bark on the tempestuous waters forthwith, and nobly, honestly, and fearlessly battle with the waves of adversity, perhaps he would, by 1898, have acquired skill enough to land the boat triumphantly in the United States Senate. The battle is not always to the strong; and there is nothing like starting out in time.

Late Literary News.

The most intensely interesting people of the world just at this moment are the millions of famine and plague stricken India. But little is known of this region by the people of the United States. Such reports as come to us are the things seen through British glasses. What has been the effect of British rule in India? Why these terrible famines? Why plagues? Julian Hawthorne has been sent by THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE to India to obtain answers to these questions at first hand and depict the situation as it appears to an American. The March COSMOPOLITAN contains the first of what is probably the most important series of articles ever presented in this magazine. Nothing has been published which gives an adequate idea of the larger operations of business—at least nothing by the class of men fitted for such work by thorough familiarity with the subjects of which they write. The article in the March COSMOPOLITAN on "The Methods of Banking," by the President of one of the largest banks of New York—a man of widest business experience—former Postmaster-General James—is one which every person, howevdr humble his clerkship or high his place in the financial world, will find interesting and instructive. This series will constitute a very complete course of business training, and every young man just entering business life and every old man will alike find it of immense value.

TWICE-A-WEEK COURRIER-JOURNAL.

Beginning the first of the new year, the Weekly Courrier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., will be changed to the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal. It will be published Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The paper will be six pages, or twelve pages a week, instead of ten pages weekly, as at present, an increase of 832 columns of matter during the year. The Wednesday issue will be devoted exclusively to news and politics, while the Saturday issue will be strictly a family paper—filled with stories, miscellany, pictures, poetry, sketches, etc. The politics of the paper will not be changed, and the battle for pure Democracy and true Democratic principles will be continued successfully, in the future as in the past. In spite of the expence involved in the improvements noted, the price of the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal will remain the same, one dollar a year, with liberal inducements to agents or to old subscribers who send in new ones. A feature during the coming year will be the editorials of Mr. Henry Watterson on political and other topics of the day.

County Cullings.

That old war veteran and wheel horse democrat of Buffalo, Timothy Desmond don't seem discouraged a bit. He sends money for the GAZETTE and says: "send it just the same and silver we are bound to have".

David Jackson is very much improved and is able to get around the house unaided. He has shown a wonderfully strong constitution in pulling through several months severe illness at 83 years of age and is on the road to recovery now.—Howard Lake Herald.

The Street Commissioner and the committee on side walks could by making a tour now, get a much better knowledge of where to fill and where cut down, to aid the natural good drainage of our village than several trips on a nice, dry summer day would afford them.

The County Superintendent of schools has been the subject of discussion for a few weeks past. It is claimed he wants to raise the grade of teachers. We don't believe any of our schools are suffering from a superabundance of knowledge possessed by the teachers, nor do we believe that the teachers believe that is the fact.

Road bosses would do well to view the roads in their respective districts while there is water on them and when they can see at a glance where mudholes are likely to form and where they can be drained or filled to the best advantage. Wright county naturally has good roads but much can be done in many places toward improving them.

The squabble among our Republican friends for the post office at this place seems to have resolved itself into a triangular fight between Messrs F. H. Lindsley, W. H. Frazee and J. W. McDonald. Things seem to be about status quo and all are resting on their oars awaiting the turning up of the time when the present incumbents term of office will expire.

Those of our fellow citizens who are interested in the people having equal rights and justice to all with partially to none; class legislation for nobody. Money for the rich and for the poor all made out of the same kinds of material and good for its face whenever and wherever presented should furnish themselves, their families and their neighbors with such papers as advocate these doctrines.

The Buffalo Journal says it has been watching the votes of our three representatives and they "have been generally right". How could they help be right when the vote was divided? And what about Dare? We have four representatives. And how could the Senator miss the mark when he spoke, and fought, and voted for a Fourth Hospital for Insane at Anoka? And then when Hastings was about to get it away from them grew still more eloquent over the idea that no Hospital was needed? Of course if all sides are taken some must be right. What is your opinion Journal?

The re-appointment committee has finally agreed to do a little toward redistricting the state. Duluth is to have a little bigger representation. Carver and Scott counties are to have but one Senator instead of two, as at present. But Wright and Sherburne are to worry along together instead of Sherburne hooking onto Anoka and Isanti as proposed by Hon A. N. Dare and Wright looking out for herself. We suspect Hon. A. N. has been offered "Billy" Culkin's old shoes when he is done with them as an inducement to keep still.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.
The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.
The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.
And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.
Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?
But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?
And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?
And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?
Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.
At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.
That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.
The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12 for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.
And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

BACKBONE FOR WASHINGTON.

If the matter can't be settled any other way the legislature might appoint a committee with power to summons people and papers and investigate the matter as to whether or not Judge Lochran ever was at Gettysburg or not. At the present rate Donnelly or some other iconoclast will soon be able to make out that it was Judge Hicks or Mr. Bevens or some one else. Most Minnesotians seem to think Judge Lochran was in the battle and deserves recognition accordingly, when committees are appointed.

WHEN our wealthy corporations find they have been doing business a little too graspingly they often seek to take the sting from their consciences, by building, or contributing to a college, school, church, or other benevolent enterprise a few of their surplus dollars. Of course retaining enough to keep them going in good style. Would it not be more just so long as there is a surplus, to make freight and passenger rates a little lower or sell their wares at a trifle less price or raise the wages of the faithful men, who helped them earn their wealth; pay each a little more, so long as business is booming? Would not the employes then feel a little more like allowing a small cut in their wages when times are dull? But when they know times are good and the business paying, who can blame men for not wanting wages reduced while the officials are giving gifts.

MANY are the reports of Air-Ships being more or less nearly completed. Of course so much fun has been poked at those who believe that aerial navigation will soon supersede the slower and more expensive railroad system that until the proprietor of an air ship is certain that when he attempts to fly he will succeed better than did Darius Green, he will keep it under cover. He will not tell anybody that he has one. But so many attempts, partially successful have been made as to insure the possibility of navigating the air. When the machine is once thoroughly under control, it can be improved upon in various ways. People used to require the help of wind to transport them over water; they have long since got over that and now cross the ocean against the wind. They have long been able to balloon through the air why not get something more pratical for every day use in the air?

Aerial navigation may yet supersede the now costly corporation business of transportating people and goods. Every man may yet be able to take unto himself wings and fly with the merry songsters to the southern climes for winter, returning to his northern home in the summer without contributing most of his hard earned money to a wealthy syndicate for the privilege of a few hours ride.

This would bring down freight and passenger rates.

God in his infinite wisdom looks out for his people and when greed grinds them hard enough and long enough a way is opened for their relief.

The Correct Idea.

"Gov. Mounts, of Indiana, says he will not give positions to steady drinkers he thus strikes about 75 per cent of the Indiana politicians off his list at one stroke of the pen."—St. Paul Globe.

There is doubtless enough as capable men as the state affords still left to fill all the offices in Indiana. People are drawing the lines a little closer every year. When drinking and office holding become entirely separate in all our states there will be less trouble with public matters. A drunken man; a man who deliberately befuddles his brain with drink is not the best man for the discharge of public business.

THE outcome of the republican row will doubtless result in there being no Fourth Hospital for Insane built before two years at least. As some of the last year's orators were fond of calling all free silver men cranks and lunatics prehaps they have concluded there are too many of them and they can't house them all.

Dingley Tariff Bill.

The new Dingley Tariff Bill is likely to become a law in some shape. The McKinley bill or a little higher will have to be payed on goods. This of itself will not help us in Minnesota. It cannot put more money into our pockets by obliging us to pay more for our woollen clothes our steel and iron tools, or sugar and other things we must have. I will of course take away from our pocket books. Some of the protective advocates tell us that more tariff will make goods cheaper, and increase our revenues, so that we won't have to sell our government bonds to run the government. That by having protective tariff not so many goods will be shipped in; but we will make our own at home, and set our mills going, and furnish ourselves a home market.

That used to sound kind of nice to some people. So long as it was a mystery, people like mysteries. But it is no longer a mystery. It has been tried, right here in the United States. When the McKinley bill was made, it was to reduce the surplus and furnish a home market. It reduced the surplus and millions beyond what was expected by some; but our home markets were also reduced.

It is said that protection makes goods cheaper, and it is now claimed that restoring something like McKinley rates will fill our treasury with money. How can this be? Can people ship goods here, pay protective tariff and sell cheaper than with less tariff? If so why put on protective tariff; a tariff to protect our home industries; to enable them to compete with foreign nations? This don't look reasonable. It is no longer a mystery. People have seen it tried. They know it is not a fact. But either the revenue or the prices must go down.

A tariff to bring in revenue must be low enough to permit goods brought here and sold at a profit. People are not bringing goods to this country and paying tariff without getting it back. A tariff to add anything to the revenue must be low enough so that merchants can pay it, add it to the cost of their goods and still make a profit.

A tariff to set our mills going by protection, must exclude other countries from shipping goods here. Then we can get no revenue, and our manufacturers can raise prices just enough so that the outsider can't undersell him, and have that much advantage of other people. We must, when we want goods, pay the prices made possible by figuring in the tariff, the manufacturer and not the government gets this, and we are poorer, the government is no better off. Machinery does what hundreds of people would do in Europe. The people if they had the work would eat our provisions. The machinery don't eat, and the manufacturer and a few skilled workmen do the work and the corporation and not the U. S. government gets the benefit of the tariff.

If some of our country newspapers will just tell the people how the restoration of a protective tariff bill is going to help Minnesota, Wright county, or any of the people in our state, we would like to have them do so.

Don't Deserve Notice.

Editor Evening Press;

Certain railroad men are& have been very active petitioning the legislature not to lower rates on coal, wheat and other merchandise, claiming that it would cause a cut in their wages. Now this is not true, and to prove it we will look back a little.

The Great Northern when it was known as the St. Paul and Pacific, and its bonds went as low as 85 cents on the dollar, its western terminus was Brekenridge, and Mr. Farley was manager: it paid its section men $1.75 and all other employes in proportion. When Jim Hill began to feel his oats and struck out west ward with his St Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba (when emigration poured in and made him a millionaire), the switchmen had to strike to get a small increase of their pay. The St. Louis when in the hands of a receiver, paid better wages than they do now. Carnigie, when he became a millionaire, began to cut. Pullman the same. If the railroad employes would take the trouble to inform themselves on the subject they would find out that all firms when starting into business pay better wages. It is only when they become corporations that they begin to squeeze labor. Now, I hope our legislature will pay very little attention to the petitioning, as a great many knew that if they did not sign it they would lose their jobs, and in that case they would not be as well off as the colooed folks befo' de war. No, boys, when Jim Hill wants to cut wages he doesn't go to look at his tariff sheet. I remain yours truly,

D. F——G, Ex-Employe.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 26th, 1897.

The McKinley tariff bill number two got some very hard knocks in the House this week, and the outside pressure was so heavy that Mr. Dingley was compelled to announce that the Ways and Means committee had decided to strike out that clause of the bill placing a duty on books and scientific instruments for educational institutions and add an amendment puting those articles on the free list, as they are at present. The democrats of the House made the almost numberless unjust and uncalled for discriminations made by the bill in favor of the few against the many, but the speech made by Representative McMillin naturally received the most attention, both from the opponents and friends of the bill because of his position as the ranking democrat of the Ways and Means committee, and because on account of his long experience in tariff matters he had been requested by Representative Bailey to make the leading speech against the bill. In replying to Representative Dingley's statement that the increased burden of taxation imposed by the bill was on luxuries, Mr. McMillin said: "The claim that the increased burden is on luxuries is not sustained by the facts. Are course shawls and knit goods luxuries? Are wool hats and overcoats luxuries? Are knives and forks in this urban age luxuries? And I beg with all deferance to ask whether in the State of Maine a clean shirt has become such a rarity that it is classed with the luxuries? I ask him when, among Americans, the sugar that sweetens tea and coffee became a luxury—when trace chains became a luxury to farmers? Sir, not only is the bill itself higher, but the different schedules average above those of the McKinley bill." Mr. McMillin also called attention to the fact that foreign governments are already preparing to resist this new assault upon commerce, he also reminded the republicans that a purchased verdict, such as they obtained last November, would not be allowed to stand.

Senators and Representatives have had an excellent opportunity to observe the sublime cheek and impudence of the individual who bobbed up in the late campaign as "Cousin Osborne", and who has secured the position of Consul General to London, one of the best paying positions at the disposal of his cousin, Mr. McKinley. It seems that in seeking and obtaining this position "Cousin Osborne" had overlooked an order of Secretary Olney, issued last October, regulating consular fees, which has resulted in reducing the income of Consul General to London from $30,000 to $40,000 a year to about $12,000. When "Cousin Osborne" found this out he was indignant, although there are people who say that the reduced income of the office is about six or seven times as much as he has ever been able to earn in private life. Be that as it may, "Cousin Osborne" applied to Mr McKinley to have that order of Secretary Olney's set aside and the old scale of consular fees resumed, but Mr. McKinley feared the scandal that would follow such action on his part, and said he would not do it unless Congress directed it to be done. This week "Cousin Osborne" has been personally canvising Senators and Representatives to get their support for what would be pratically making him a present of something like $55,000 a year. He hasn't received much encouragement.

Whether the administration will make any use of the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court sustaning the Sherman anti-trust law and including railway pools and agreements within its scope, is a question that many men in Congress are much interested in. It was maintained by Mr. Cleveland's two Attorney Generals—Olney and Harmon—that nothing could be done under the Sherman low because of the decessions of courts against its validity. Now that the highest court has reversed those decisions and declared the law valid, there is an opportunity for this administration to clear itself of the charge of being too freely to the trusts, by rigorously prosecuting them, if it isn't afraid to do so.

The civil service law which stands between the republicans and offices, was very viciously attacked by Senator Gallinger and others in the debate which proceded the adoption without a dessenting vote of Senator Allen's resolution for an investigation of the methods pursued by the Civil Service Commission, and the end is not yet. Senator Gorman was the only democrat who took part in the debate and he merely took advantage of the opportunity to good-naturedly nag the republicans a little about their anxiety to get at the offices. If it comes to a direct vote on the repeal of the present civil service law, there are plenty of democrats who will vote "aye", although they know that it would mean the replacing of every democrat in a Federal office by a republican.—A bill to repeal has been introduced.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Last week's GAZETTE was full of good reading matter. In fact the GAZETTE seems to be getting to the front as a newsy paper. The local country paper as a whole always gives the most inportant news in a few words and this is what the busy man likes. Confidence and prosperity is all under water no prospect of getting out until the weather changes. Some of the papers say the mills are starting up. Yes they always start up in the spring, more or less. It takes no prophet to tell of that event.

I expect when we get the new tariff bill the people will have to go up in a balloon to keep out of the way of prosperity.

Good time now to collect international revenue on fish for the boys will be at it. The game and fish commission should put a corporal's guard at every little brook and polliwig hole in the state. You know there is nothing like protection; especialy when the country people want a mess of fish or two in the spring when the water is cold.

The tramp says times are not improving much yet; can't see muchchange but think when the grass grows the people will have more confidence and they can run their face for a few meals. Taxes and hard times are looking the prosperity full in the face and asking for 30 days of grace. Oh for a faith that will not shrink when oppressed by every foe. We are now bound by the golden link unless free coinage makes a go.

The farmers who have been the tools of every Trust, Combination and Monopoly since Cain and Able's time, in my opinion have let their last opportunity go by, they hold the balance of power in the hollow of their hand yet they have failed to use it when opportunity offerd, now mortgages, taxes and interest have got them by the throat and it is only a question of time when all will be gone, many of them are trying hard to hold on to a part at least, that they may have enough to pay expences when they take their departure out of this world but the man of usury keeps close upon their heels and the prospect is that the tail will go with the hide. Bankers Trusts, Combines and Monopolies throw politics to the dogs when it comes to money matters, but the farmers and many others say it was so from the beginning, and so might it be henceforth, now and forever.

Last fall some of the republican benchman said if their party only was elected the country would swim in prosperity within 48 hours, but now they are asking for an extention of time, saying that you must give us time to bring things around. We knew all the time that you must have time to accomplish so great undertaking you fellows set out to bring about, you will find later on perhaps that your tirade against the silver dollar was one of the greatest mistakes of your political life. The silver dollar to day is a legal tender for all debts both public and private, unless otherwsie stipulated in the contract, and right here we say it is wrong to give one money of the constitution preference over another making mortgages and notes payable in gold at the dictation of the mortgagee. This moy look all right to the man of usury but it is hard upon the hewers of wood and drawers of water. The silver dollar will buy goods from the merchants will pay taxes, will pay funeral expenses but it will not buy salvation, neither will gold.

Last fall's campaign is on reckord, it has been type written and engraven on tablets of stone and when the final summing up comes it will cut more of a figure than did Brutus at the assassination of Cæsar, but I am asking for no misfortune or calamity upon the present administration I hope they may prove a success to the country and the people but considering the crookedness of the hole they went in at can't see how they can come out at the other end with a whole hide and without the smell of smoke upon their garments.

A FARMER.

Why is FARM, STOCK and HOME Minneapolis, Minn., read by a greater number of northwestern farmers than any other agricultural paper published? That's easy. Because it is best adapted to to Northwestern conditions. FARM, STOCK and HOME is a large semi-monthly journal, regular price 50 cts a year. It can however be obtained in connection with the GAZETTE for $1.30.

The April number of "What to Eat" has some exceptionally interesting features. An account of the late banquet of the Gridiron club in Washington (a club made up exclusively of newspaper men) will be of particular interests to journalists. It is accompanied by a full page half tone engraving of a table at the Banquet at which sit Vice President Stevenson, Chauncy Depew, Senator Hill, Senator Gorman, Speaker Reed, and a numbr of other notables.

Late Literary News.

The most intensely interesting people of the world just at this moment are the millions of famine and plague stricken India. But little is known of this region by the people of the United States. Such reports as come to us are the things seen through British glasses. What has been the effect of British rule in India? Why these terrible famines? Why plagues? Julian Hawthorne has been sent by THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE to India to obtain answers to these questions at first hand and depict the situation as it appears to an American. The March COSMOPOLITAN contains the first of what is probably the most important series of articles ever presented in this magazine. Nothing has been published which gives an adequate idea of the larger operations of business—at least nothing by the class of men fitted for such work by thorough familiarity with the subjects of which they write. The article in the March COSMOPOLITAN on "The Methods of Banking," by the President of one of the largest banks of New York—a man of widest business experience—former Postmaster-General James—is one which every person, howevdr humble his clerkship or high his place in the financial world, will find interesting and instructive. This series will constitute a very complete course of business training, and every young man just entering business life and every old man will alike find it of immense value.

Beginning the first of the new year, the Weekly Courrier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., will be changed to the Twice-a-week Courier-Journal. It will be published Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The paper will be six pages, or twelve pages a week, instead of ten pages weekly, as at present, an increase of 832 columns of matter during the year. The Wednesday issue will be devoted exclusively to news and politics, while the Saturday issue will be strictly a family paper—filled with stories, miscellany, pictures, poetry, sketches, etc. The politics of the paper will not be changed, and the battle for pure Democracy and true Democratic principles will be continued successfully, in the future as in the past. In spite of the expence involved in the inprovements noted, the price of the Twice-a-week Courrier-Journal will remain the same, one dollar a year, with liberal inducements to agents or to old subscribers who send in new ones. A feature during the coming year will be the editorials of Mr. Henry Watterson on political and other topics of the day.

The present year promises to be an important one in railroad construction. Steel rails are cheap, and some roads that have long been under construction will be put through.

A scientist connected with the United States fish commission claims to have discovered that fish have the power to change color. No well-regulated fish could abide the colorless lying of the average Izaak Walton.

The state of New Jersey is not large, but brainy. Her common roads are the best in the union, and her legislature proposes to spend $1,000,000 more for "good country roads." There are plenty of richer states which are swamped and unable to transact business during one-third of the year because of impassable roads, and have been that way ever since the oldest citizen can remember.

The records of the marine underwriters show that the three months ended March 1 were more disastrous to shipping interests than any corresponding period since records have been made. As the result of these storms several steam ships and more than 30 American sailing vessels have foundered and 23 derelicts are now adrift to offer further perils to ocean navigation. This list does not include the many foreign wrecks that have occurred during the same period, nor does it take into account the many marine disasters that have occurred since the first of the month.

The civil service commission has prepared a report to congress, showing that there are 178,717 people in the employ of Uncle Samuel, not including those in the military and naval service, and that they receive as compensation for their services annually the enormous sum of $99,589,827. Of the total number of persons employed in the civil service 91,609 are unclassified and are not subject to examinations for appointment. The total number in the classified service, who cannot be discharged without good cause and cannot be appointed without competitive examination, is 87,108.

The explosion which took place recently on board the Russian turret ship, Cizoi Veliky, while lying in Canea harbor, was one of the most shocking disasters that ever occurred on a war vessel, involving, as it did, the loss of 28 lives. The gun exploded in the turret, blowing it to pieces, and killing everyone in it, while falling fragments killed others on deck. The vessel was one of the most powerful in the Russian fleet. It was launched in 1895. Its length over all is 348 feet, and displacement 8,880 tons. Its armor is 17 inches thick and seven feet in depth, and above the armor belt is a redoubt protected by steel.

HARD BLOW TO CUBA.

Spanish Troops Capture Gen. Rivera, Maceo's Successor.

His Command Is Defeated After a Hard Fight—Ten of the Insurgents Killed—Fate of a Newspaper Correspondent.

Havana, March 30.—Gen. Hernandez Velasco, who is operating in the hills of the province of Pinar del Rio, has sent a report to the government which has caused much elation to all classes of loyal Spaniards. He says that while his command was in the vicinity of Cabezadas, in the Rio Hondo district, Sunday they encountered a party of rebels 100 strong, who were under the command of Ruis Rivera, who was appointed to the command of the insurgents in Pinar del Rio after the death of Antonio Maceo. The rebels occupied a strong position and fought stubbornly, but after an engagement which lasted an hour they were defeated and dispersed. Before the rebel position was captured a grenade was thrown by the Spaniards, which fell among the insurgents, and, exploding, wounded many of them. This caused a panic and many of the rebels fled.

Shortly after the explosion the Spanish infantry penetrated the rebel position. They found Col. Bacallao, chief of staff to Gen. Rivera, attempting to carry the latter, who had been wounded by three Mauser bullets, to a place of safety. Both were made prisoners.

Washington, March 30.—Consul-General Lee has sent the state department a telegram from Havana under Sunday's date, saying that Mr. C. F. Crosby, of New York, representative of the Chicago Record, is reported to have been killed while watching with a field glass a combat between the Spanish and insurgent forces near Arrayo Blanco, close to the boundary line between Puerto Principe and Santa Clara. He came to the island January 30 last. He is said to have been graduated at St. Cyr, France.

The expedition was in charge of Gen. Carlos Roloff, the insurgent minister of war. There were 40 others on the Laurada when she left, and in her hold were stored 7,000 rifles, 1,700,000 rounds of ammunition, 25 tons of stick dynamite and a large supply of food and medicine.

"OLIVER OPTIC" DEAD.

Popular Writer of Juvenile Stories Passes Away—Sketch of His Work.

Boston, March 29.—William T. Adams (Oliver Optic) died shortly before nine o'clock in the morning.

As "Oliver Optic," he was known to every child in this country who reads story books. He was a most prolific writer. At the age of 73 he had written 126 books and more than 1,000 newspaper stories.

Mr. Adams as a boy was full of healthy spirits and abounding energy. As a teacher in a Boston school he had an opportunity for broadly studying the tastes of young America. For strong, vigorous, healthy young America he wrote all his love and experience. He was remarkably successful in obtaining from the first the attention of his readers, and for more than 50 years he enjoyed the distinction of being the most popular writer of juvenile stories. His first book was called "Hatchie, the Guardian Slave," and was written under the nom de plume "Warren T. Ashton." For this book he received $37.50. It was the first money he ever earned with his pen. His next book was "The Boat Club," and it met with a ready sale. The name "Oliver Optic" was adopted in 1851. The "Riverside Series" in six volumes for boys appeared in 1862.

Oliver Optic wrote but two novels for older readers. They were "The Way of the World" and "Living Too Fast."

At various times he edited the Student and Schoolmate, Our Little Ones, and Oliver Optic's Magazine for Boys and Girls.

Washington, March 29. — Senator Thomas C. Platt called on President McKinley Saturday afternoon and was given positive assurance that Prof. Andrew D. White would be nominated as ambassador to Germany.

Onion Market Cornered.

Kansas City, Mo., March 30.—James McKinney, a wholesale produce and commission merchant, has apparently succeeded in cornering the onion market. He has contracted for 27,000 barrels of fancy kiln-dried stock that will keep for months, and has stored them awaiting an advance in price. Many wholesalers needing immediate orders have been compelled to pay $3.50 a barrel for the same stock, which, previous to the present scarcity, could have been bought for $1.75 and $2.25.

Citizens' Convention.

Nashville, Tenn., March 27.—Rev. R. W. Binkley, chairman, and S. Nicholson, secretary of the provisional executive committee, have issued a call for a national good citizens' convention, to be held in Nashville May 18, addressed to "All lovers of liberty, prosperity, truth, righteousness and good government." The call is signed by citizens from 24 states, including Neal Dow, Maine; Josiah Strong, D. D., New York; Bishop W. X. Ninde, Detroit; George C. Lorimer, Boston; Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., Brooklyn; Kerr Boyce Tupper, Philadelphia.

SITUATION IS GRAVE.

Powers Not in Concert Regarding Crete—Crown Prince to the Front.

London, March 30. — The Graphic gives prominence to a statement which it claims to have received from an unquestionable source, to the effect that the Greek situation is extremely grave. It says that with the departure of Crown Prince Constantine from Athens to take command of the troops in Thessaly, the die seems to have been cast. War would be inevitable if Greece recalled her army. It would march to Athens and dethrone the king. The most serious element of the situation is the undoubted fact, despite denials, that the concert of the powers is no longer solid. There has not been an actual rupture, but the members have come to the conclusion that concerted action is a failure. The statement ascribes the position to the impatience of the powers with Greece's reckless conduct and Great Britain's reluctance to coerce her. The powers will not accept Lord Salisbury's proposal for the establishment of a neutral zone.

Reports from various places in Crete show that there is not the slightest improvement in the condition of affairs in that island. The fighting between the Moslems and the Christians continues, and the burning of villages is a matter of daily occurrence. There is no prospect of any betterment in the situation. It is apparent that the bombardment of the Christians by the foreign warships is merely a waste of shot and shell. When the insurgents are scattered by the fire from the warships they disperse, only to reappear shortly after in some other place in the vicinity.

London, March 29.—The Sun publishes a dispatch from Athens saying that Crown Prince Constantine finally started for the frontier on Thessaly Saturday evening. The fact that he was to leave to assume command of the Greek forces which are now confronting the Turks on the frontier became known to the public some time previous to his departure. The streets in the vicinity of the palace were jammed with people, who frantically acclaimed the crown prince when he appeared. The wildest enthusiasm was everywhere displayed, and the crowds shouted for war until they were hoarse.

PASSING MUTILATED COIN.

New Law Makes It a Criminal Offense and Provides Penalties.

Washington, March 27.—Letters by the bushel have been pouring in on the treasury department asking for information concerning the new law in relation to the passing of mutilated coin, although those seeking the information might, in the majority of cases, have secured it from the United States district attorneys or secret service officers of their respective localities. In brief it may be explained that the law is in the main an extension of that against counterfeiting. It provides that the passing of mutilated or defaced coins, or the mutilation and defacement of coin for any purpose shall be held to be a criminal offense, punishable by imprisonment for a period of one to five years and a fine of $100 to $2,000. Under this law the practice of presenting ladies with coins of gold or silver, with the initials of the donor engraved thereon, to be worn as bangles, is a criminal offense. The law also drives out of business a number of people who have made a good living by purchasing mutilated coins at a reduction from their face value and plugging up the holes so skillfully that the original mutilation could not be discovered. Even this kind of tampering with the money of the government will be regarded as an offense under the statute.

Cuts Rates.

Chicago, March 30.—The Missouri Pacific railroad has made the first open, flat cut rate since the anti-association decision was rendered by the federal supreme court. This road, without any intimation of its intention, made a rate of 33½ cents on eggs in car lots from all points in Kansas to St. Louis, with the proviso, however, that the rate be subject to the Missouri river minimums. It is understood other western lines will prepare an equalizing tariff, to go into effect at once. The tariff rate at present is from 45 to 75 cents per 100 pounds. The effect of the cut, it is expected, will be to send at least 300,000 cases of eggs for storage from Chicago concerns to cities east of Buffalo and Pittsburgh. The withdrawal of so many roads from the freight association is given as the cause of this cut, and local railroad men predict the demoralization of all the western freights in the near future.

United Press Assigns.

New York, March 30.—At a meeting of the directors of the United Press, of New York, held Monday afternoon, a general assignment for the benefit of creditors was made to the auditor and assistant secretary of the company, Frederick G. Bank Quits Business.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 29.—The American exchange bank went into voluntary liquidation at the close of business Saturday. Those who are interested in the bank say the closing up of the business is due to the hard times and to the fact that none of the small banks in this city has been making money recently. The depositors will be paid in full on demand at the office of the Marine bank of Buffalo.

TO CHANGE ITS STANDARD.

Japan Preparing to Discard Silver and Adopt Gold.

Washington, March 30.—The secretary of the treasury is in receipt of information from the United States minister at Tokio, Japan, to the effect that during the present session of the Japanese diet a government coinage bill will be presented for the consideration of that body, which will, if passed, change the standard of values in Japan from silver to gold. It is proposed to fix the government parity of or ratio between the two metals at thirty-two to one. The unit of value will be a gold yen, which will be one-half the weight and value of the Japanese gold yen, which is of the same weight and fineness as the gold dollar of the United States. The further coinage of silver will be limited to subsidiary coins. The silver yen now in circulation will be maintained at par with the gold yen by the government being prepared to redeem them in gold whenever called upon to do so.

The vernacular press reports considerable dissatisfaction among manufacturing classes upon the proposed change of standard, and it is reported that the Cotton Spinners' association have prepared a protest against it to present to the diet. Those interested in manufacture in Japan are at present very prosperous and satisfied with the returns their investments are bringing in. They are naturally, as a class, not disposed to view favorably a proposed change, the effects of which upon their interests they have no means of determining beforehand. It is generally believed, however, that the government bill will, in a perhaps modified form, become a law. It is supposed that the principal object the government has in view in bringing about the change is to enable it, should such a measure become necessary or expedient, to negotiate a loan in Europe on better terms than would be possible, as they believe, if Japan remains on a silver basis.

CROWDED OUT.

Tariff Bill to Be Disposed of Before Other Legislation.

Washington, March 27.—The executive committee, which was created at the monetary convention held in Indianapolis January last, to secure the appointment of a commission to revise the currency system of the United States, called on Speaker Reed at the capitol Friday. Among the number were Mr. H. H. Hanna, of Indianapolis, who was the chairman of the Indianapolis convention; ex-Gov. Stanard, of St. Louis; George F. Peabody, of New York, and John P. Irish, of San Francisco.

The committee set forth to Speaker Reed the necessity not only of maintaining the present gold standard, but of insuring the ultimate retirement of all classes of United States notes and the establishment of a banking system which should furnish credit facilities to every portion of the country and at the same time afford a safe and elastic circulation. They stated that a congressional commission, or a commission of outsiders, or a mixed commission of senators and representatives and business men would be equally satisfactory to them. What they desired, primarily, was the appointment of a commission.

The speaker replied that congress had been called together to pass a tariff bill, and that it was obviously to the interests of this country that this bill should be passed at the earliest possible practicable moment. He expressed the opinion that it would be better if this bill would be passed in May, than if its passage were delayed until July next. Until final action had been taken on this bill he did not deem it advisable to complicate matters by the formulation of any new legislation.

The committee agreed that this was doubtless the better course to be pursued, and with this the interview closed.

Dun Reports Greater Confidence.

New York, March 27.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say: "Rarely have markets sustained such surprise as they have received of late with so little loss. Foreign conditions and London alarms, the collapse of the iron ore combination, the destructive floods in the Mississippi valley and the decision of the supreme court against railway associations have been used to the utmost, but not even in railroad stocks has the result been important. With confidence that better times and larger business are coming men are less disposed every day to throw away good investments, and the very fact that prices of products are now low is regarded as a guarantee against much further decline. In all industries, also, the number of mills and shops and hands at work gradually increases.

"Failures for the week have been 291 in the United States, against 259 last year, and 50 in Canada, against 39 last year."

New York, March 30. — Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Gen. Ruger was made a major general February 8, 1895. Born at Lima, Livingston county, N. Y., April 2, 1833, Gen. St. Johns, N. F., March 29.—News from the east coast sealing fleet was received Saturday. Out of 16 steamers fishing in the North Atlantic 11 have been heard from, whose combined catches are only 21,000 seals, less than a load for one steamer. This is the worst record for 100 years. There is little likelihood of the fishery being retrieved later from total failure.

Milton Reizenstein, a graduate student of the Johns Hopkins University, of Baltimore, has prepared a monograph as a thesis for a degree which he expects to receive next June. He has chosen for his subject the history of the B. & O. R. R. from its inception on the night of February 12th, 1827, when 25 of the leading business men of Baltimore met at the home of Philip E. Thomas and devised means whereby the trade of Baltimore with the West could be restored. It was at this meeting that the company was organized which afterwards built the B. & O. R. R. Mr. Reizenstein's monograph takes up the history of the road from that night until tracks were laid to Wheeling, W. Va., in 1853. The 70th anniversary of the B. & O. R. R. YOUR ENEMY STOLE IN. An enemy stole into your house one day last week and touched you lightly in passing. You thought little of the matter at the time, for the enemy was only a vagrant current of air. But now you are beginning to learn what mischief the little intruder did, for your back is stiff and painful. Your head aches, and at times you feel dizzy. What has happened? . . . Simply this: the cold has settled on your kidneys. They are overcharged with blood and inflamed. Instead of passing the waste matter out of the body they are damming it up in the blood. Every minute, yes, every heart beat adds to the poison in you. Normal action of the kidneys will purify the blood. Nothing else will.

LOVE'S REQUEST.

Sweetheart, if there should come a time
When in my careworn face
The beauty of a vanished prime
You strive in vain to trace;
When faded tresses, gray and thin,
Defy the binder's skill;
Sweetheart, betray no sign,
By word nor look repine.
Think of the grace that once was mine;
Kiss me and be still.

Sweetheart, if there should come a year
When from my withered lips
The loving word that now rings clear,
In tuneless weakness slips;
If I should sing with quavering voice
Some old song worse than ill,
Sweetheart, with kind deceit,
No mocking words repeat.
Think of the voice that once was sweet;
Kiss me and be still.

Sweetheart, if there should come a day—
I know not when or how—
When your love beams with lessening ray,
That burns so brightly now;
When you can meet my faithful eyes,
And feel no answering thrill;
Sweetheart, let me not know—
I could not bear the woe—
Think of the dear, dear long ago;
Kiss me and be still.

MR. MEEKS' PRISONER.

BY LESTER KETCHUM.

HE SAID his name was Meeks, and it struck thoughtful ones in Buffalo Horn that the patronymic was singularly appropriate; for the gentleman himself was a mild-eyed, "sandy - lookin'" little man, with a self-depreciatory air that suggested a standing apology on his part for presuming to exist. He floated into town quietly, and so unobtrusive and modest was he that it was several days before his presence began to be noticed, and then only on account of a rumor that had gained circulation to the effect that he was an officer of the United States secret service. Then Buffalo Hornites smiled. Of course, like all western people, they understood that it is not best to judge from appearances; but, oh! what a chump Uncle Sam must be, to send a wee bit of a man like this to arrest an Oklahoma malefactor!

To be sure, nobody had the temerity to suggest this to Mr. Meeks. There are communities in which the one who presumes upon appearances is taking very long chances, and Buffalo Horn was one of these. Therefore, Mr. Meeks was treated with great show of respect by all the leading citizens, who squared things with themselves by privately "giving him the horse laugh." And, all unconscious, Mr. Meeks kept on his way, or, rather, stayed where he was and lay in wait for some certain criminal who was wanted for violating a score, more or less, of the federal statutes.

In strictest confidence, and with childlike faith, he had imparted more or less information concerning his mission to Mart Winslow, the landlord of the little hotel where he was staying—and Mart being, after the manner of his kind, an inveterate gossip, soon spread what information he had gleaned from the stranger, thereby causing a broad grin to appear whenever his guest was mentioned.

"Oh, but ain't 'e easy?" chuckled Mart to a couple of friends, one day, as he nodded towards the barroom, where Mr. Meeks was engaged in "settin' 'em up" to the ever-ready crowd. "D' ye ever see sech a sucker? Comes yere an' 'expec's th' duck 'e's layin' fer t' lop right intuh th' camp an' give 'isself up, I s'pose; so yere 'e stays, diggin' up 15 a week f'r board an' spendin' copious at th' bar. Oh. I c'n stand it awhile."

"Gawd! S'posin' th' man sh'd come in, all of a suddint?" said Jim Wylie,

"HANDS UP, MR. WILLIAMS!"

the city marshal. "Say, I bet 'e'd die o' scare!"

"Who is it th' little feller wants, Mart?" asked some one sitting by the window.

"Sh-h-h! Easy, Frank! . . . Oh, I d'no', not now. But I'll bet ye one thing—'tain't nobody he's a-goin' t' ketch right off."

It came to be rumored, within a day or two, that "Kingfisher" Williams was the man Mr. Meeks was after, this rumor being based upon the fact that the little man had been—very quietly, of course—making inquiries concerning that notorious person, whom numerous county and national officers were more or less anxious to meet. He was not known personally to anyone in Buffalo Horn, but Mr. Wylie assured the little man that Kingfisher Williams was a very bad man indeed, and that if Mr. Meeks effected his capture, it would be a great feather in his cap—whereupon the little man swelled up considerably and invited Mr. Wylie to join him at the bar.

It was about a week after this conversation that the secret service officer and the city marshal were standing in the barroom, discussing some question or other, when the door opened and a stranger entered and, walking up to the bar, called for whisky. Mr. Meeks was looking earnestly upward into the big marshal's face as the stranger entered, but withdrew his gaze for a moment to glanced at the newcomer. Then he reached for his revolver.

"There's my man!" he remarked, calmly, in an undertone, to the marshal. "Get back from the bar, please."

Wylie, dumfounded, did as he was bidden, in time to see the stranger look up just as Mr. Meeks got him covered.

"Hands up, Mr. Williams!" commanded the little man. "I want you!"

With an oath, the other "drew," and for a few seconds there was a confusion of shots, in which the city marshal could take no part by reason of his revolver getting stuck and refusing to come forth. Then the stranger threw up both hands, in token of surrender.

"Have you—er—a pair of handcuffs, Mr. Wylie?" asked Mr. Meeks. "Put 'em on him, please. Sorry, Mr. Williams, but I can't take any chances with you."

Williams did not answer, but growled angrily under his breath as he submitted to being handcuffed.

"I'll git you for this!" he said to Wylie, as the latter stepped back after finishing the operation.

"Oh, ye will, will ye? Wait ontell my friend, Mr. Meeks, gits through 'ith ye, Mr. Williams," was the cheerful reply.

"Want t' put 'im in th' cooler?" asked the marshal, presently.

"No, thanks. He'll bunk with me tonight, and to-morrow we leave. Much obliged, all the same."

It was not more than an hour before every one in Buffalo Horn knew that little Mr. Meeks had, single-handed, captured the notorious Kingfisher Williams, after a short battle in which nobody was hurt; and the general sentiment was of the "well, I'll be dogoned!" variety.

That night Mr. Meeks had a levee and blushingly received the congratulations of the best citizens of Buffalo Horn during a period of two hours, the while his new stanch friend, Jim Wylie, obligingly guarded his deperate prisoner. Had he had been a less temperate man, he might have retired somewhat the worse for liquor, as did most of the citizens of Buffalo Horn; but he kept his wits about him and was as sober as his prisoner when they turned in.

Next morning a half-score of leading citizens had sufficiently recovered from the night's revelries to accompany him and his prisoner to Four-Mile Creek. This honor was modestly protested against by the little man, who seemed not to see that he had done anything remarkable, but he was hooted down, and when they reached Four-Mile his escort parted with him with three rousing cheers and a volley of revolver-shots by way of salute.

It was about one o'clock in the afternoon when an excited, hatless man, mounted on a panting horse that dripped with perspiration, dashed up to the Hotel Winslow, in front of which a number of citizens were sitting discussing the events of the day and night previous, and hoarsely announced: "Kingfisher—he's killed 'im!"

"What? Who?" asked Winslow. "What ye talkin' about, man?"

The stranger was gasping for breath, but presently managed to explain that, 20 miles south, he had been resting under a tree by a stream, when a little man and a big man, whom he had known in Kingfisher as "Kingfisher" Williams, came along and dismounted near by. The little man was leaning over to get a drink when Williams sneaked up behind him and struck him down with his handcuffs. After this, said the stranger, he saw Williams take the keys from the little man's pocket and unlock his handcuffs. Then he shot the insensible victim with the latter's own gun, mounted and rode away; and the newcomer hurried into Buffalo Horn the faster because Williams caught sight of him as he was leaving and took a few shots at him.

"W'y didn't ye shoot back—'r else git th' drop on 'im w'en 'e hit little Meeks wi' th' bracelets?" asked Jim Wylie, fiercely.

"'Cause, in the first place, I didn't think 'e'd kill th' man. Second"—and the stranger eyed Wylie quizzically—"I reckon ye hain't real well acquainted 'ith Kingfisher Williams, be ye?"

In less than an hour the little town was practically depopulated of men, all but the cashier of the local bank and a few bartenders having gone on the warpath to catch and hang Kingfisher Williams for the murder of Mr. Meeks. The stranger did not accompany them, his horse being blown and himself not being anxious to meet Mr. Williams. However, it made no difference, as every one knew the ford which the stranger said was the scene of the tragedy.

Thus, nearly every one being gone southward to mete out justice to the alleged murderer of Mr. Meeks, it was really child's play for that gentleman and Mr. Williams, emerging from their hiding places in the hills just north of the town, and joining the stranger who had brought the news, to loot the bank, three stores, the hotel and every saloon in the place, and to get safely away on fresh horses at least three hours before the pursuit could be organized.

And that is why every officer whose business takes him into Buffalo Horn and neighboring towns is looked upon with suspicion until his credentials are approved.—San Francisco Argonaut.

A New Salad.

Crisp, white celery cut in dice, and rice, boiled so that each grain is distinct and snowy white, and yet thoroughly well boiled, and therefore tender; to a teacup allow about a quart of water; let it boil briskly without burning; do not stir except at first to mix the salt in; in half an hour try the grains, and if tender throw into a colander kept for the purpose; drain well, then set on a plate in the mouth of the oven or inside a moderate one, to dry, and when the grains look distinct it is ready to be cooled for the salad. Allow about the same quantity of rice and celery, sprinkle salt and white pepper lightly through, using two forks; make into light, flaky-looking mound; spread mayonnaise sauce on top; garnish with beets and serve with game.—Boston Globe.

Long Ago.

Count Saint Germain, who appeared in Paris in the reign of Louis XV., and pretended to be possessed of the elixir of life, had a valet who was almost as great as his master in the art of lying. Once, when the count was describing at a dinner party a circumstance which occurred at the court of "his friend King Richard I., of England," he appealed to his servant for the confirmation of his story, who, with the greatest composure, replied: "You forget, sir, I have only been 500 years in your service." "True," said his master musingly, "it was a little before your time."—Household Words.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Both Bodies Are in Good Working Order.

Gossipy Letters Giving in Detail the More Important Work of the Senate and House of Representatives.

St. Paul, March 24.—Yesterday was an eventful day in legislative circles. In the senate the tax levy for the support of the state university was doubled, the bill passing with only four negative votes. There was quite a protracted discussion over the bill providing that treasurers in counties having over 75,000 people should furnish bonds from some approved surety company. Some of the country senators opposed it, but the city senators won and the bill was recommended to pass.

The great event of the day occured in the house during the afternoon. The bill taxing iron mines 5 cents per ton on their output was under consideration, having been reconsidered after its defeat last Friday. Messrs. Reeves, Donnelly, Jacobson and Staples led the forces favoring the bill while Schmidt, Feig, Stockwell and Hicks led the opposition. Efforts were made to reduce the tax to 3 cents, and that failing to 4 cents. but that also failed, and after two hours debate the the bill was passed by 62 to 46. Representative Johnson created sensation by announcing that he had been offered money to vote against the bill.

Mr. Donnelly said he wanted to say to the republican party, of which he was once an ornament, that they would have no party if they allowed this bill to be defeated.

It looks as though Anoka had been given its quietus in the fourth insane asylum fight. The senate committee on insane asylums, to whom had been referred the resolution to inquire as to the advisability of enlarging present asylums instead of building a fourth one, submitted two reports yesterday, Senators Cole, Stebbins and Schaller favoring the fourth asylum and Senators Dunham and Peterson opposing. The majority report was adopted after several hours' debate, and the bill appropriating $15,000 to buy the Hastings site, which has already passed the house, was placed on the calendar for passage by 37 affirmative votes, which is nine more votes than is required to pass the bill.

St. Paul, March 25.—The new military code bill, which has passed the house, received a backset in the senate yesterday, where it was attacked by Senator Ringdahl. The bill was ready for passage, but was reconsidered and sent to the committee of the whole for further consideration. The bill providing that Olmsted county shall share alike with her sister counties in the agricultural fair fund, instead of receiving $2,000 for the Southern Minnesota fair, was passed.

The committee on railroads submitted a majority report against the house bill making the railroad commissioners elective. Two members of the committee favored the bill, and it was made the special order for next Tuesday.

The senate banking committee submitted a report which was favorable to the work of the bank examiner. The railroad commission sent in a statement that the Milwaukee road declined to change its time table at Austin to make connections with trains for the Twin Cities. A bill is to be introduced compelling the road to do so.

The senate finance committee has lopped off $2,200 from the bill presented for the expenses of the Day-Dunn contest. The saving is chiefly on the attorneys' fees, each side being allowed $500 for attorneys instead of $1,500. As pruned the bill is $1,346.25.

A large portion of the day in the house yesterday was devoted to considering the new banking bill. It entirely revises the present law relative to state banks, and is designed to surround them with more safeguards in the interest of the public. The changes are very radical. Late in the afternoon the bill was passed by 83 to 3.

An unsuccessful effort was made to revive the bill extending the terms of county auditors to four years. A bill was introduced making the salaries of county auditors and treasurers based on the assessed valuation of property in the various counties.

The senate bill giving the publication of the supreme court reports for six years to Frank P. Dufresne at $1.50 per volume was passed.

The joint reapportionment committee has decided on a bill making the senate consist of 60 members and the house of 119. This is an increase of six in the senate and five in the house.

St. Paul, March 26.—As was expected the senate, yesterday, passed the bill appropriating $15,000 to buy the site at Hastings for a fourth insane asylum. Senators Dunham, Culkin and Howard filed a formal protest to be spread on the journal, but the bill received 38 yeas to 15 nays. A strong effort was made to increase the attorneys' fees in the Day-Dunn election contest. The finance committee had agreed to make it $500 for each side. An effort was made to increase it to $1,000 and that failing to make it $750. This also failed and the amount as reported stood.

The triune city charter bill, gotten up especially for Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth was introduced in both houses, and judging from the objections made to going to the expense of printing it, it has but few friends. As no one seems to want it, it seems to be a wonder that it was ever born.

The senate, by 22 yeas to 29 nays, defeated the bill for the organization of Cass and Beltrami counties. The bill levying a special tax on department stores was discussed at great length in the senate yesterday afternoon and every available foot of space was occupied, a large number of ladies being present. At the end of a long debate the bill was referred back to the special committee to be amended. The amendments proposed materially change the bill.

The most important contention in the house was the bill allowing five-sixths of a jury—10 men—to render a verdict in civil cases. Messrs. Donnelly and Douglas led the debate for the bill and Messrs. Abbott and Jacobson were leaders of the opposition. The bill passed by 66 to 36.

The house passed a bill yesterday, under suspension of the rules, ordering the American flag to be displayed at election booths on election day.

St. Paul, March 27.—The end is not yet. Anoka has been holding a card up her sleve for emergencies. Yesterday it was played when Gov. Clough sent a message to the house vetoing the bill appropriating $15,000 to buy a site at Hastings for the fourth insane asylum. The coming of the message had been a well preserved secret, and its reading created great surprise in the house and an excitement which spread throughout the capitol. The governor based his objections on two points: First, considerations of public policy; and, second, his "desire to maintain unimpaired and unimpeached the honor and the reputation for good faith and fair dealing of our state." From these premises he argued that the commission to select the site was duly authorized by law, and its acts were therefore the acts of the state. They had purchased the Anoka site and the citizens of Anoka had voluntarily contributed $10,000 to aid in that purchase. The action of the commission was approved by the district court of Ramsey county and this decision was affirmed by the supreme court. The Legislature investigated and found nothing improper or illegal had been done by the commission. The bill purchasing the Hastings site would annul the work of the commission and besides, as Anoka has already received $15,000, it would involve another expenditure of a similar sum which in view of the hard times is not wise. For these reasons the governer refused his signature. The bill was made the special order for next Tuesday afternoon when an effort will be made in the house to pass it over the veto. The bill passed the house originally by nine less than a two-thirds vote, and that will not be sufficent to pass it over the governor's objections. The general belief now is that it will fail of passage. The senate had two more than two-thirds, but the house must keep all it has and gain nine more. Unless the house does this the bill will never reach the senate.

As a result in part of the labor bureau investigation a bill was introduced yesterday in the senate reorganizing the whole department and cutting down salaries. Another bill offered allows papers printed in foreign languages to publish the state laws. Senator Dunn also introduced a bill compelling the Milwaukee & St. Paul road to make better connections for the Twin Cities at Austin. The bill which was lost yesterday allowing the organization of Cass and Beltrami counties was reconsidered, on motion of Senator Potter, and now lies on the table subject to being called up at a latter date.

St. Paul, March 29.—The house (the senate not being in session) furnished quite a war episode on Saturday. One of the somewhat famous bills of the session has been the one appropriating a sum of money to enable the survivors of the First Minnesota to attend the dedication of a monument to their fallen comrades at Gettysburg, Pa., next July. Bills were introduced in both branches appropriating $10,000 and the house the bill for that sum; the senate cut the appropriation to $5,000 and passed in that shape. The house had the senate bill under consideration Saturday. In the original bill, Judge Wm. Lochren was named as one of three commissioners to disburse the appropriation, but the committee on military affairs had stricken Lochren's name from the bill and substituted Adjutant General Muehlberg. The ground given was that Lochren was not with the regiment at the battle, but in reality it was based on his course as commissioner of pensions. Everyone who has read Judge Lochren's sketch of the First Minnesota in "Minnesota in the Civil War," published by the state, knows that Lochren was at the battle of Gettysburg, but the house military committee seemed to think otherwise and struck his name out of the bill. Saturday morning Judge Hicks went to the adjutant general's office to get some data to show that Judge Lochren was at Gettysburg and became involved with Assistant Adjutant General H. T. Bevans over the subject. Judge Hicks intimated that Bevans had circulated the report against Judge Lochren, and the lie passing between them blows were exchanged but no serious damage was done to either party before they were separated. This episode added decided zest to the debate in the house when the bill came up in committee of the whole a few hours later, and there was a lively debate when the question of restoring Judge Lochren's name was considered. Judge Hicks, Messrs. Donnelly, Johns, and Snyder led in favor of the restoration, while Messrs. Abbott, Sloan and Boutwell opposed it. In the end Judge Lochren and Col. Colville were added to the commission and the bill recommended to pass.

The house put in a full working day though only eight unimportant measures were actually passed. A large number of bills were considered in committee of the whole and 33 were reported back from committees, some 15 of them being for indefinite postponement. It was a big cleaning up day of minor matters and cleared the way for the wind storm tomorrow over the veto of the Hastings asylum bill.

St. Paul, March 30.—Yesterday was the last day for the introduction of bills and the senate improved the occasion by bringing in 82, though it did not convene until 2:30 p. m. This makes the total number of bills introduced in the senate 656, or 73 less than two years ago. In the house there were 84 new bills offered, making the house total 1,011, or 151 more than two years ago. The grand total of bills offered in both houses is 1,667. No more bills can now be offered unless the request of the governor is secured. As a matter of practice the governor rarely refuses a member of the legislature who makes such a request.

Among the bills introduced in the senate was one appropriating $1,000 for the erection of a monument to ex-Gov. W. R. Marshall, and another making it an offense to encourage suicide or to encourage it in the papers or by lectures.

No attempt was made by the senate to pass any bills, but a number were considered in committee of the whole. Aside from the introduction of bills the important item of business was the confirmation of J. S. O'Brien as surveyor of logs and lumber for the Stillwater district.

The house passed 20 bills, in addition to the large number introduced. Among them was the senate bill appropriating $5,000 for the trip to Gettysburg to dedicate the First Minnesota monument. The only change made was the addition of Col. Colville's name as one of the commissioners to expend the money. New state printing bills were offered in both senate and house. There seems to be a general determination to cut down the state printing expenses.

YUCATAN. KING OF GUMS.

Stop! Women,

And Consider the All-Important Fact,

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's diseases is greater than that of any living physician—male or female.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local physician in the world. The following invitation is freely offered; accept it in the same spirit:

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

The Electric Light of Mowerdom

The pine knot—the tallow candle—the oil lamp—gas—these are stages in the evolution of illumination, which today finds its highest exponent in the electric light.

Similar and no less striking has been the evolution of grain and grass cutting machinery. In 1831 the scythe and the cradle were superseded by the McCormick Reaper. The intervening years have seen many improvements, until now we have that model Harvester and Binder, the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator, and that veritable electric light of mowerdom, the —The little girl in charge of the Children's Home Society, that was brought here by Mrs. Russel a couple of weeks ago has been stopping with Ferdinand Kelsey's family this week.

--A number of High School scholars met at Mrs. Johnson's on Saturday evening and gave a surprise to Miss Daisy Johns one of their classmates, who was to leave next morning for the South.

—Joe Merriam and Frank Mann started up Joe's wood saw Monday and sawed up several ranks of wood piled on the river bank and hauled it beyond the highest water mark. They didn't finish the job.

—Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of Martain Conzet, of Greenwood celebrated her 76th birthday, on Monday, March 29. As many of the family as could be present visited her at her home, and enjoyed a regular old fashioned family reunion on the day before.

--The Epworth League's poverty sociable at the city hall, Friday evening was well attended. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves. For so poverty stricken a crowd they did quite well raising about $8 which went to buy stoves in the M. E. church.

—Misses Kelly, Quinn and Davis, attended teachers meeting at Waverly last Saturday. They speak in high praises of the entertainment they received and of the meeting, and of the people of Waverly generally, as will as of the teachers present from neighboring districts.

--The high water reached such a stage in the power house on Tuesday as to preclude the use of electric lights and thoroughly convinced patrons of the plant who were at all skeptical on that point, that it would have been much wiser to have built their power house on higher land.

--Frank Straue received a car load of lumber Tuesday, and with the aid of about a dozen teams hauled it through the water and muddy roads to his farm on the Montrose road, where, on the site of the old homestead, he will build a nice residence and barn and soon go to keeping house.

—A horse got down in the water at the edge of town on the Rockford road Tuesday and nearly dronwed before he could be rescued. The roads through running torrents are not safe. The bottom may wash out in a very short time, and people be deceived in the depth of water through which they undertake to pass.

--John Muckenheirn, on Tuesday, morning found the water had raised so much during the night as to flood his pig styes. The old gentelmen was equal to the emergency and boldly waded in ice and water up to his armpits, nearly, to the swine, and by holding them by the ears induced them to swim to terrafirma.

--Sectionboss, John Kuka, assisted by heavy artillerymen, J. P. Bernick and John Ludasher fired several charges of dynamite under the ice gorge above the railroad bridge on Tuesday. Pieces of ice flew thirty or fourty feet, or more, into the air and the obstruction to navigation moved on. Some of the boys say Joe will next apply to Gen. Gomez for a commission as chief dynamiter, and that the Spanish army will soon be distributed among the mountain peaks, while Cuba will take her place among the Free Republics of the western hemisphere.

--It is hoped that every person that can, will make a mark on the piers of the iron bridge, or on some other indestructable thing, of the high water mark of 1897. There has been no end of jangling over whether the river was ever so high before or not. On the inner walls of the power house might be a good place to preserve the mark from the weather. Everybody using electric lights, (or that used to use them) will remember that on account of high water the balance of the town was left in about as great darkness, for a time, as that under which the council that would not counsel with those who lived in Delano long enough to know, in regard to locating the power house labored when they built the plant down by the river.

Robins have arrived.

—Wagons are once more in use, and so far the appearance of summer has come.

—Among pensions granted this week we notice the name of Louis Stein, Watertown.

The water after reaching its hight last night (which is about the highest ever konwn) started to fall rapidly.

—Joe Stein has traded his team for a span of mules. He seems satisfied with his bargain, so others will have to be.

—The bridge at Wright's Ford is said to have been floated ffom its position across the river on Monday afternoon.

—A number of scholars from west of the river have had to miss school for a few days on account of high water.

—The Eagle force observed several holidays this week on account of inability to get proofs back from the cities.

—Jim Hill's trains usually come along pretty close to time but snow and high water will deter them occasionally.

—August Bernecks chickens, some of them, are swimmers. At least they kept themselves up while the current carried them quite a distance.

—One of the Bruggeman brothers of St. Paul had a man with him recently looking over their property here, with the view of putting in a saloon shortly.

--Brick and lumber for Geoorge P. Schaffer's new store, cor. of River and Elm Streets is on hand. If a sidewalk is built brom River to 3rd street Geo. can catch North Delano trade.

—Dave Reibel and Ed Bock were the two first citizens to go in swimming this year. Wednesday morning while trying to capture several stands of bees that had started for the Sunny South their boat overturned.

--Joe Bernick has made and placed on the east pier of the wagon bridge an ingenious self regestering contrivance whereby he hopes to secure an indisputable high water mark for reference in the future.

--A crew of men have worked night and day for several days to save the approaches washing out from the railroad bridge. The street commissioner has labored industriously saving the west approach to the wagon bridge also.

--Recorder Maxfield now resides in the second story of one of the tallest houses in town, and looks down with a sympathing smile on those who are obliged to paddle or wade to their suburban homes in the shades of evenings.

—Teams genrally gave up trying to cross the river Tuesday on acconnt of high water. George Cunningham, of Watertown, however, drove through lots and the alley on the west side and got over all right. Mr. Redmond then drove his livery team that had been on that side, across.

—Simon Weldele and a crew of men are at work clearing up the old rubbish and removing the stones from the foundation of the burned building preporatory to the building of a double building of brick. The place for Casper Janikula's new brick saloon is being cleared of what was left by the fire.

—On Monday evening at the M. E. church, Rev. A. E. Hatch, of Minneapolis lectured on the Eastern question. He quoted from Daniel and Revelations to prove that the time had been fulfilled for the Turkish government to cease in Europe. He predicted that the Russian Bear from the North, would come down on the Mohamedans and drive them out very soon. He had a fair sized audience which enjoyed his lecture very much.

—Some of the Delano High School scholars have received returns from papers sent in to the state authorities being answers to state questions. Those of the higher room are disappointed in having marks of 98 given here, made 65 by the state markers: and 89 turned into 58 depriving the writer of the paper of a certificate, certainly needs explaining. Some claim that students in the "U" are set to marking papers sent in; if so and they are so much stricter than home teachers, the work of the two should be gone over by a practiced hand in the business, and the faults, for faults there must be, somewhere, corrected. The grammar department fared better with their papers.

—A few days ogo a man presented a small, foreign coin at the bank and inquired what they would give him for it saying: "I have kept it for a long time, just for fun, and now I have to spend him". It evidently was a keep sake for years, possibly a present from a relative, or friend across the sea. And now after these years, and after the promise that as soon as McKinley was elected, which he was last November, confidence would be restored, and prosperity would come, and money would then, again be put in circulation he is obliged to pay it out. The bank did not offer him what he knew its value was, so he said: "This man" a companion "is going to the old country soon, I will let him take it along". It seems the money of the people, all the old keep sakes, and pocket pieces, even to the toe of the traditional old stockings are being put in circulation, and unless a change soon comes even it, will have been raked in by those wealthy enough to hold on to it while prices go down, down till you can buy twice as much with it as when they get hold of it. What better interest could they get? And when, and why should they wish for more money?

--The Delano Band is again getting on a firm footing.

--The Shakespeare Club met at the residence of A. W. Wittman on Wednesday evening.

--The first good bran new wheel that we saw this spring was rode by Enos Epple, one he purchased of A. L. Mealey, the name of it is "Gilt Edge" and it is a "Beby".

--It is reported that the Messrs Drew of Minneapolis, will build a brick butcher shop on the ground recently occupied by W. R. Johns as a grocery store. This would be an acquisition to our village and tend to make a better market for butcher's stock.

—Notwithstanding hard times, high water and numerous other difficulties the west side continues to show enterprise. Andrew Reider is enlarging his dwelling. John Longuish is reshingling his barn, carrying lumber over the railroad bridge. William Sabel has a foundation the top of which has managed to keep above high water awaiting a subsidence of the flood for the erection of a fine new dwelling.

County Cullings.

The Evening Press of March 31, has an interesting communication, "What Women Have Done for Minnesota" from the pen of Allen G. Sexton, of Annandale.

Forty hours devotion were observed at the Catholic church this week. Several priests from abroad participated in the exercises. Rev. Fr. Nugent of Watertown, spoke in English Sunday evening. The congregation here would enjoy hearing more sermons in English than they have been in the habit of having.

John Alley and Frank Lamson and Jerald Woolley will probably have clear sailing for political preferment among republicans from the time Senator Culkin goes to Duluth. Of course they will have to let Mr. Dare be Senator so as to appease Sherbune voters and not let the democats in. Unless the bill to set Sherburne off should go through.

Our legislators seem in great danger of having their morals corrupted in many ways. Everything a legislator does that doesn't suit everybody else brings out charges of bribery, corruption, etc., etc. And according to dailies they have been having lessons in swearing and cursing and even the art of knocking each other out with the fists. As our men are pretty staid kind of fellows, and quiet, it may not hurt them much.

The Eagle complains that we are "wrong as usual" in our article last week on reapportionment. We never said that Hon. A. N. Dare had accepted "Billy Culkin's" old shoes. The published list of changes in senatorial districts did not give Wright in a District by itself, and as we were aware that Mr. Dare favored a separation from our county we had, taking the Eagle's word for the promises made different persons by the G. O. P. for years back, a right to suspect that he had been offered the place of senator. It would be in keeping with the party reputation here. But we are glad to see that the thing if offered, didn't work, and that our representative from Sherbune has a prospect of getting a say in the re apportionment. The Eagle, by the way, didn't dispute that the old shoes had been offered, or that the party in this county would'nt give a pile of old clothes to prevent the separation of Sherbune and Wright counties from one Legislative district.

Fred Stevens' Rival.

G. Fred Stephens will have to look out for his laurels as a Swede dialect promoter. Here is something from the pen of Charles F. Scott, of Northwestern Kansas, clipped from the Kansas City Star that is mighty clever to say the least:

Oh, da spring tam now ban kooming,
En da grass ban toorning green,
Ay kan hear da bees a hooming
As da voork dar "buzz" masheen.
En da boys ha ban a smiling
Kos ha knows das poorty quick,
Da shall shake off shoort en trousers,
En vent sviming een da krick.

Lot of tams, ven ay ban yoonger,
Ay ban voorking round da place,
Ved ma leetle heart yoost busting,
En beeg tears streak down ma face,
Kos ay seen soom odder fallers,
Through da field, dar pathvay pic',
As da sneak off from dair fadder
To vent sviming een da krick.

How ay vant to vent long ved dam,
Vare da sun-kissed vatters gleam,
Dare to hape a game at leap frog,
As ve yoomp een to da stream.
Dans ay look at dose long corn rows
En cet meck ma poorty sick
To tank ay moost ban voorken
Sted of sviming in the krick.

Oh, da "sviming days" of boyhood,
Ha shal naffer ban forgot,
How ha skampered round da san'bar,
Ven da sun ban blazing hot,
How ha roob mood on has blisters,
Broosh has hair dry ved a stick,
So das fader not kan find ote
Ha ban sviming een da krick.
—Duluth Herald.

Where is the Globe at?

"The St. Paul Globe's attacts on the Democracy of the New York Sun form a rare exhibition of cheek, since the Globe deserted the democratic party nearly a year ago."—Duluth Evening Herald.

Where is the Globe at anyway?

THE U. S. Senate has at last waked up and taken the Cuban question, or Gen. Wyler by the herns, by passing a protest to the drum head court marshal and shooting of war prisoner, Gen. Ruis Revera, as is reported in contemplation by General Weyler. It is about time that people cease killing each other in Cuba. It looks terrible to have Turks kill Armenians and yet Spain is permitted to dispose of Cuban war prisoners in this summary manner right under our noses. Let the protest be strong enough to do some good.

Hard up for Argument.

"It is announced that Senator Harris, of Kansas, will loom up as a rival to William J. Bryan for the Populist presidential nomination in 1900. It is hardly probable that the pops will throw away their chances on such a shallow statesman as Bryan again."—Minneapolis tribune.

The Tribune is evidently hard up for campaign thunder when it begins four years, nearly, before the next Presidential election to attack William Jennings Bryan, the man who made one of the most wonderful campaigns the world ever knew, proving himsels a gentelman and a schollar, a leader of men, a man to be respected by all, as "a shallow statesman". Shallow Statesman! Does the Tribune consider every one of the six millions of voters in this country who voted for Bimetallism as represented by Mr. Bryan as "shallow"? Does the Tribune think the thousands more who are daily seeing plainly the futility of voting for "gold" expecting "bimetallism" and are convinced that W. Jennings Bryan was no "Shallow Statesman", can be won by such arguments?

The Tribune editor can not be well acquainted with the rank and file of American citizens; with the men whose votes it seeks to influence by this shallow argument. Too many men, and women through this country; in our own state, even here in Delano and our neighboring village Waverly, have listened to the words of the orator, the statesman, the man who united the people so strongly as candidate for the highest office in their gift for the "shallow" arguments of the Tribune to do him or his cause injury.

William J. Bryan himself has asked that no more clubs be named for him; that he be not paraded for four long years as the candidate for President. He claims the cause rather than the candidate is the thing to look out for. That is correct. But Mr. Bryan's friends will not see him abused and his cause trampled underfoot by such "shallow" arguments as that of the Tribune.

ELECTIONS just held in the cities in Ohio show Democratic gains. Canton McKinley's home going democratic. Michigan showed gains for the silver cause.

Punishments Need Regulating.

A telegram from Granite Falls to the Minneapolis Tribune says that Osten Olson, convicted of manslaughter in the first degree for killing his brother, Martin, was sentenced to Stillwater for eight years. Albert Hillman pleaded guilty to highway robbery and was sentenced to 14 years. His offence was stealing a knife and toy watch from a boy. Gust Benton, convicted of horse stealig was sent to the county jail for fifteen days.—Minneota Mascot.

It seems that the caprice of the judge has much to do with the punisment of different individuals. The idea of sending a man to penitentary for 14 years for stealing a knife and toy watch when he plead guilty, and sending one for 8 years for killing his brother don't on the face of it, look right, and letting a horse thief off with 15 days in the county jail. It looks as if it would be a good plan for punishments to be regulated by law a little closer than to permit of such differences.

Reformers get Together.

This is an age of reformation. A time when the world needs reforming. Reformers are numerous. They abound on every hand. They inhabit the countries of the globe Their subjects for reformation are legion. Their zeal is unbounded. Their faith undismayed. They are at work. Sooner or later they will succeed. In our own country we have the "Silver Crank", the "Temperance fanatic", the "Government Ownership of Railroads Advocates", the "Civil Service Reformer", the "License Lunatic", the "Single Tax Monomaniac", the "Anti-Monopolist Polymaniac", and many other voters who have by their reform ideas secured unto themselves nick names of more or less ignominious meaning. These men are honest in their convictions that the country needs reforming. They are in the majority. But they are not exactly agreed as to what particular thing needs reforming first and as to the best way to go at the matter of correcting abuses they know exist.

The world has progressed through reformations. Some have been by wars; by force of arms, some without bloodshed. Ours must come through the ballot. Our people quietly submit to the will of the majority as expressed by the vote of the country. Several times when elections were close and excitement was high has trouble been averted by the willingness of the people to submit to the laws and customs of the country.

If the reformers of the United States, the people who know that reformation is necessary, will unite, where possible to elect men with reform ideas, men who believe in equal rights and justice to all; men who believe that the money should be alike for the rich and the poor and not of a kind that will permit of being contracted against; men who will keep sober, who can get along in law making halls without having a saloon in the building, or being absent looking after a drink while the voting on some measure is going on; men who believe that railroads have rights and so have the people; men who believe that officials should be qualified for their especial duties, but that there are more men than one in this country who is qualified and deserving for most places and who believe that the government moves best when in harmony; men who are not ready for a few dollars in money to grant license to every thing they consider wrong, claming that the town or county might as well get the money as not, for they can't stop. the crime anyway; men who believe in having taxes made as nearly equal as possible, so that injustice is done no man; men who don't believe in voting privileges to combines, trusts, and monopolies; who don't believe in making monopolies at the expense of the people then will they accomplish something; then will the country be in the way to reform existing evils.

As yet people seem too much inclined to have their own particular ways; to let the country go on from bad to worse so far as their vote is concerned, until the one particular evil they happen to know most about, or are most interested in is righted. The party man is led to think that he must vote with his party, whether or not he believes in what it advocates. Leading issues, issues on which a majority of the people are a unit are thus kept from winning the battle.

Last fall most of the reform forces were agreed that Bimetallism was the thing that would help the country. Republicans, many of them, believed the same, but by party promises, were kept in line for gold standard. A few democrats seem to have been promised also, at least those howling loudest for a gold standard have, in several instances been appointed to offices which some republicans would like to have, and which according to established usages they should have.

Already elections have been made only once in two years, and there are advocates of removing the "business" of the country still farther from the people by making them still less frequent. If a law is bad now we must put up with it for two years anyway. If the Supreme Court sees fit to pronounce a law unconstitutional the Legislature can't fix it before two years rolls round, and then some "local issue" will be trumped up on which to elect members, and the people still left to growl and groan under bad laws.

Under the present mode of government and elections there seems a chance for reform to make headway on but one question at a time. If anything is to be done a unity of forces on a leading question will certainly win. Voters who favor other reforms must take their chances that they will be the next, and thus enough reformers may reach Washington to enable the country to get the Referendum allowing all questions of National importance to be voted on by the people. Then we could have interesting elections. Every man could work for his particular hobby and, at the same time vote as he saw fit. For the present it looks as if the reformers in all parties should vote together on the money question and restore to the people so much as they can of values depreciated by the gold standard.

Next Legislative Issue.

"If the asylum matter is not settled this session of the legislature it will be made an issue in the next campaign. Can the Republicans of the Legislature afford to bequeath this fight to the people to settle?"—Anoka Herald.

The Asylum question should be properly settled. Statesmen of sufficient caliber should occupy the seats in our legislative halls to dispose of such an important question in a manly manner. But, as for making the fight between Anoka and Hastings the issue in electing members to the Legislature in this great state, it would of course, be in keeping with the insane manner which has manifested itself so conspicuously so far in the the location of that institution, but would, nevertheless, be entirely wrong.

So long as our legislative body constitute the electorial college for the selecting of a United States Senator, so long will the legislators on each recurring year when those chosen will participate in the election of a United States Senator be chosen, so far as possible, because of their prefference for this or that candidate for that high office. We have only to recall the disgraceful affairs of the last few years, in political circles, to be thoroughly ashamed of such doings. Men whose only qualifications are their agreement to support the candidate for U. S. Senator seem to fill the bill.

In choosing a legislature two years from now, we choose an electorial college for the successor of Cushman K. Davis, in the Senate of our land. Does anyone suppose for a minute, that those interested from other motives than pure patriotism care whether the Insane Asylum goes to Anoka, Hastings, or Hades, so long as their man goes to Washington?

In order to be sure of votes enough in the legislature to elect the man the politicians want, it is necessary to begin years before, at least two years before the selection is to be made, to lay the political wires; to arrange the issues; to select the men to vote right on U. S. Senator. This has been going on for some time already. It is not only necessary to have candidates, and get out the party vote as of yore, but, when the state is classed among the doubtful, it is necessary to have a local issue; an issue that will elicit the sympathies of the people; that will get votes from all parties for members of the legislature. An issue on which Eustis and his ilk can harp and work on the sympathies of the dear people. How nicely they could talk on this. After hastening over the balance of the ticket in one of their grand orations and coming down to this they could say: "And now dear people, we come to an important part of our 'talk' we should hitch the old gray mare and the big bay colt up together; we should so adjust the evener; (I knew that when I was a boy: before I was Mayor and run Minneapolis on my policy) that they can travel together. We can carry the water in a pail on a stick between us, but we mustn't let the stick get into the water. Minnesota can carry the front end of the pole and the boss political wire puller can carry the other end of the pole and the manipulator of votes for U. S. Senator can keep slipping the bail of the pail a little closer to the front end until Minnesota is carrying most all the load for U. S. Senator. When my brother and I used to carry water on the farm, I went behind and that is the way I did him, and he never found it out, and I have been limping along behind, politically speaking, ever since.

There seems a chance, reasoning from analogy, for a nigger or two in the woodpile in making the issue of the legislative campaigner next time whether or not Anoka or Hastings shall have the Fourth Hospital for Insane. Is it of so much importance that either have it? If it cannot be settled without electing a legislature ostensibly for the purpose let some other place have it.

Is it not possible that the asylum issue would only be made a cloak for the senatorial aspirants? May not the Hon. C. K. Davis be the candidate for the Hastings people; he and Hastings be St. Paul's favorites, while beneath the Anoka toga is His Excellency David Clough? Will not the woods ring with "vote for Clough for he is for putting the asylum at Anoka" or "vote for Davis he is for Hastings". Will not this hollow pretense catch the unwary voter? Will it not tend to assist the republicans in electing another; just one more legislature? Is it not about time a halt was called on this kind of proceedings?

Our legislature should be elected for the purpose of making our laws, for our own state, as nearly correct as they can. If they are elected for this purpose they are apt to be better adapted to the business. These disgraceful Senatorial squabbles, asylum fights, and other unpleasant things would become things of the past.

If Anoka and Hastings want the people to decide where the asylum shall be let the people vote directly on that question, and not tie up the legislature for other purposes in order to settle that question.

If the people want a United States Senator let them elect him and not elect a lot of fellows with that string tied to them to go to the legislature and after that important job is over, turn loose and make a botch of everything the state needs.

Voters don't be mislsd by little local disagreements into casting a vote for U. S. Senator for either of two candidates you do not want. You know what you want, vote for it.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 2, 1897.

There is no limit to republican audacity. Not only was the tariff bill number 2 put through the House—forced through is nearer true—before an opportunity had been given members to go through even the farce of offering ammendments to have them overruled by the chair, instead of being voted down by the members, to more than one-sixth the entire bill, but an amendment was forced down the throats of the republican members which is generally conceded to be unconstitutional, and to be in direct conflict with a decision handed down by the U. S. Supreme court since the Wilson tariff bill became a law. This amendment makes the duties which will finally be imposed by the bill go into effect April 1, although no one expects it to become a law for at least three months, and no one has any means of knowing how the duties will stand when the bill passes the Senate. This amendment is a bluff pure and simple, intended to frighten importers into stopping importations while the bill is pending in the Senate. If it works, the importers are a timid set as there are no lawyers of any prominence who regarded the amendment as worth the paper it is printed on.

Mr. McKinley is still daily wrestling with the office seekers, but he isn't making many appointments and the few that he is making are unsatisfactory to the rank and file. He has sprung a new dodge on the Senators and Representatives. When he gets ready to make a personal appointment he lets the Senators and the Representatives from the same state know his intention, thus giving them the opportunity to save their prestige by adding their indorsement. It may be imagined that this sort of thing isn't pleasant to the Senators and Representatives but they are afraid to kick at this stage of the game.

Representative "Champ" Clark, of Mo., made a semihumorous speech on the tariff bill, just before the gag rule under which it was forced through the House stoped all talk which contained some very serious ideas. For instance, he said: "If this is not a sectional bill how is it the Western farmers find their green hides not only on the fence, but on the free list, while the New England shoe manufacturer has a high tariff on his finished products? How does it happen that the cotton growers find their products on the free list while the cotton manufacturers find theirs on the protected list? I will tell you why. It was stated with brutal frankness by the gentleman from Indiana, the other day, that the Southern and Western people would have to vote the republican ticket or what is equivalent to that vote for a high tariff, or else be debarred from the benefits of your tariff legislation," Mr. Clarks concluding words were: "We may be fools and leather-heads and all that sort of thing, but I tell you, gentleman, the people living west of the Alegana Mountains and south of the Potamac have got sense enough to know when they are sand-bagged and held up, and fools as we are, we have some rights that the New England highwayman ought to respect."

Senator Hansborough's measure entitled "a bill to prevent inventors and others from being deceived and defrauded by alleged patent attorneys" is now before the Senate Committee on Patents. The bill is the result of numerous complaints which have come to Washington, and is intended to put a stop to a practice which makes the U. S. Government appear in the eyes of some people as an abettor of a lotery scheme. It makes it unlawful for patent attorneys or solicitors to offer or award any prize or premium, or chance to win one as an inducement to lure inventors into entering alleged competitions of ideas, and provides as penalties fines for $500 to $1000 or imprisonment from six months to one year. The bill also directs the Commissioner of Patents to prepare rules of practice for patent attorneys.

Senator Foraker has introduced a bill to permit pooling by railroads. This speakes for itself. Only last week the U. S. Supreme Court decided that railroad pooling was illegal, and now a republican Senator promptly comes forward with a bill to meet the Court's decision and to legalized railroad pooling, which is only another name for railroad trusts. It seems that all the campaign debts to corporations and trusts were not paid in the tariff bill.

The new republican members of the Senate did so much vigorous kicking that a republican caucus has decided to try to fill the vacancies on Senate Committees. Whether they succeed will depend on how much they try to grab. Senator Gorman, chairman of the democratic steering committee, made them a fair offer weeks ago—that republican vacancies be filled by republicans, democratic vacancies by democrats and populist vacancies by populists. They have so far refused to accept that offer.

Waseca Herald: The game wardens of this state who occasionally prosecute some boy or some needy man for catching fish or game, out of season, draw from the tax payers of the State $50 a month—$600 a year and expenses. Farm Stock and Home: Sometimes we wonder if the new administration really comprehends the weight and importance of the responsibilities it has assumed, infinitely the most important in our history! In 1861 preserving the Union was the great question; in 1897 perserving the mass of our people from the bondage of corporate power and greed is the greater question.

Both the Herald and Times are in favor of swearing to their bills to be presented to the county for payment just what advantage they see in the custom they don't state. When people have to pay 25 cts to swear to a bill not much bigger and then have the board cut it in the proportion it did some of the bills a few meetings back, we don't see who is gainer by it, unless it be the Notary who gets the quarter for swearing.

In the sixteenth century the average length of a doctor's life was 36 years 5 months, in the seventeenth century it was 45 years and 8 months, in the eighteenth century 49 years and 8 months, and in the nineteenth, 58 years and 7 months. It thus appears that doctors were 300 years in learning not to take their own medicine.

In bicycle literature the reader is told that nobody can ride a wheel in France without puncturing a tire, because the roads are strewn with small nails. Labored investigation discovered that these nails dropped out of the soles of peasants' wooden shoes, slightly shrunken by the sun. Four Buffalo (N. Y.) reporters attended a prize fight in a professional capacity, and, the "mill" being raided by the police, were promptly captured with the party. C. A. Totten, the forecaster, comes forward once more to remark that "we are at the initial date for the long-predicted beginning of the end." "Long-predicted" is the proper term to use in this connection. Since the days of Mother Shipton, and even centuries before that, these predictions of the approaching end of the world have been made with frequency and regularity. Even Mr. Totten has made quite a number of them, changing his dates when the expected failed to come to pass.

Greater New York is now an accomplished fact as far as the legislature is concerned, and only awaits the signatures of the governor and the mayors of New York, Brooklyn and Long Island City, which are assured. Under this charter the population of Greater New York, based upon latest estimates, will be 3,159,059, which will make it rank second in the world. Greater New York will have an area of 317.77 square miles, making it next in size to London. Its greatest length will be nearly 35 miles—from Mount St. Vincent to Tottenville. The street mileage of Greater New York is estimated at about 3,000.

Lieut. Thence he will take half a dozen married couples and push on northward to the farthest point where a colony could live, making the latter place the final base of operations. Peary thinks he can get within 360 miles of the pole in this way, and by waiting for a favorable opportunity finally reach it by means of dog sledges. In the house the Dingley tariff bill was passed by a vote of 205 to 122 and an amendment was adopted giving immediate effect to the law.

The tariff bill passed by the house was received by the United States senate on the 1st and referred to the finance committee. It is said that a blockade of Greece by the war ships of the powers will hasten a conflict between the Turks and the Greeks on the frontier of Thessaly.

LATER NEWS.

The president the 5th nominated Alfred E. Buck, of Georgia, as minister to Japan, and James Boyle, of Ohio, to be consul at Liverpool.

The Mississippi river at Minneapolis, the 5th, reached the highest point ever known. Over a hundred families were compelled to move out of their homes on the West Side flats.

The congress of Venezuela has unanimously ratified their Guiana arbitration treaty with Great Britain, which was negotiated by the United States.

The U. S. senate the 5th, by unanimous vote, adopted a resolution reciting the reports that Gen. Ruis Rivera, is about to be tried by drum-head court martial and shot, and expressing the judgment of the senate that if these reports are true the president of the United States should protest to the Spanish government against such a violation of the rules of civilized warfare.

The vote was light in the municipal elections throughout the West the 5th. In Michigan, Charles D. Long, republican, is elected chief justice. Detroit elects a democratic mayor. At Cincinnati, O., the democrats were successful. Cleveland re-elects McKisson mayor by small majority.

The Missouri river at Bismarck, N. D., the 5th, was seven miles wide. No attempt was made to run the Northern Pacific trains beyond that point.

Canton, O., McKinley's home, elects a democratic mayor.

All records of the Red river have been eclipsed. Both passenger bridges between Fargo and Moorhead were closed and the water was two feet high on Front street, and on Northern Pacific avenue four blocks of paving were headed toward Winnipeg. Booms were put in to prevent further damage to the streets. The water was nearly up to the cross-ties on the Northern Pacific bridge, but trains were sent over in both directions, though great care has been taken to keep weight on the bridge at all times.

Staples & King's ice house at St. Paul collapsed the 6th, after standing as long as it could against a curaent of water six feet deep. The bulk of the ice was swept down stream. The house contained 1,500 tons of ice.

W. J. Bryan called upon President McKinley at the White House the 6th. It was the first time they had met since they were in congress together.

The situation at Fargo the 6th was worse than ever. The big coulee west of town rose 14 inches, flooding the whole west side of town and driving hundreds of families from their homes. The Northern Pacific bridge had to be abandoned. Six blocks of paving on Eighth street went out.

The result of the election in Chicago the 6th was an overwhelming victory for Harrison, the democratic candidate for mayor. At midnight the available figures gave Sears, Rep., 60,000; Harrison, Dem., 148,000. The democrats made a clean sweep of all the town offices in the West town and North town, and propably in the South town also, although the republicans have a fighting chance to get an assessor in that part of the city.

The U. S. treasury the 6th had an available cash balance of $255,234,542; gold reserve, $152,285,403.

The republicans of St. Louis, Mo., the 6th, elected Henry Zeigenhein for mayor by about 14,000 plurality.

The archbishop of Canterbury will personally deliver into the hands of Mr. Bayard, when the latter returns from London, the log of the Mayflower, which the constitutional court recently decided to give to the United States.

The president the 6th made the following nominations: Theodore Roosevelt of New York to be assistant secretary of the navy. Captain A. S. Crowninshield, U. S. N. to be chief of the bureau af navigation in the department of the navy.

Rev. Chas. S. Stockwether mayor of Superior, Wis., for only three months, when he was turned out for accepting "tokens" from firemen and policemen, and for having extorted money from gamblers and sports, was the 6th vindicated, running independent against the regular Republican nominee, Perry J. Ekstrand, and the Populist and Democratic nominee, William Munro. He has a plurality of about 400 votes, and is easily elected.

The president has decided to take no action in the matter of revoking the order of Mr. Cleveland setting aside 21 forest reserves in the west until he ascertains whether congress will legislate on the subject.

A SCENE OF DESOLATION.

Starvation Faces Fifty Thousand Flood Sufferers.

Memphis, Tenn., April 5.—Fifty thousand persons are confronted with famine. This is the shocking result of the floods in the lower Mississippi valley, which are spreading with every hour that passes. All of the country must come to the rescue of the homeless refugees, or hunger, possibly pestilence, will make dire inroads on the victims.

Memphis, Tenn., April 5. — Another disastrous break in the Mississippi levee occurred Sunday morning at eight o'clock at Flower lake, six miles below Tunica, Miss. The most fertile farm lands of Mississippi, lying in Coahoma, La Flore, Quitman and Tallahatchie counties, in the northern part of the state, will be inundated and the newly-planted corn crops will be laid in waste.

The condition of the poorer classes throughout the flooded area is indeed critical. Thousands of refugees are being huddled on levees and spots of land waiting for relief. The towns of Rosedale and Tunica report that everything possible is being done for these poor people, but that funds and provisions are fast becoming exhausted. In the little city of Rosedale alone 1,200 refugees are being cared for by the citizens. Half a hundred towns stand in six feet of water and the yellow stream is creeping up slowly but surely.

Advices received tell of a break in the levee two miles south of Helena, Ark. This is the levee for which the people of southeastern Arkansas have made such a desperate fight. The waters from this break will flood a great area and in all probability will back up into the streets of Helena.

Omaha, Neb., April 5. — Special telegrams to the Bee from points in South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska bring word of increasing floods in all the rivers. Rain has fallen almost incessantly for the last 72 hours over an area of more than 100 miles in radius from Omaha, the fall being fully four inches for that time. This has greatly increased the volume of water in the already swollen streams, and now what are usually babbling brooks have been transformed into raging torrents. Thousands of acres of farmland are under from four to six feet of running water, and many families have moved from homes in boats. Along the James river in South Dakota a great many farmers had gone back to their homes when the water receded early last week, and are now caught in the second flood. Sioux City reports that the Missouri has passed the danger line there and is overflowing the lower part of the city. Cherokee reports the second flood on the Little Sioux worse than the first.

Washington, April 6.—The situation in the flooded Mississippi district is being earnestly inquired into by the president, and the Arkansas congressional delegation, headed by Senator Jones, called upon Mr. McKinley to urge upon him the advisability of sending a special message to congress urging appropriate legislation for the relief of the flood sufferers. A delegation of citizens from Memphis, headed by Representative Carmack, also called on the same mission.

The president has received from the governors of Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi replies to his telegrams sent out Saturday. All emphasize the need of help in relieving the flood sufferers.

Memphis, Tenn., April 6. — The predictions made Friday that great disaster to the Mississippi delta would follow the breaking of the levee at a point on the east side of the river north of Helena, Ark., has been terribly realized. The break at Flower lake, which occurred Sunday morning, has rapidly grown from a dozen feet in length to a thousand.

This crevasse is at the head of the delta and will cause an overflow of the northern tier of counties in Mississippi with the exception of a part of Tunica.

St. Paul, Minn., April 6. — The river at this point is still rising slowly, passing the 18-foot mark Monday afternoon. This is four feet above the danger line and the flats on the West side are mostly submerged, the residents of the shanties and the smaller houses there having been compelled to move out some days ago. The loss is chiefly to the poorer people, who are being cared for by the city. Monday afternoon the water swept away several icehouses at South St. Paul, with several thousand tons of ice.

A Democrat Succeeds Pingree.

Detroit, Mich, April 6.—William C. Maybury, democrat, was elected mayor Monday by about 400 majority over Capt. Albert E. Stewart, republican. In view of Mr. Maybury's victory it is considered surprising that Judge John Miller, democratic candidate for police justice, was defeated by Judge Albert F. Sellers, republican, who was reelected by 1,000 majority. Maybury's election is looked upon as a decided defeat for Gov. Pingree, who practically named Capt. Stewart as his successor as mayor after the courts had overruled the governor's contention that he could hold both offices of governor and mayor.

Our Circulation.

Washington, April 3.—The monthly statement showing the amount of gold and silver coins and certificates, United States notes, and national bank notes in circulation on April 1, issued by the treasury department, gives the circulation per capita as $23.01, based on an estimated population of 72,547,000.

Big Opera Firm Fails.

New York, April 5.—Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau are not to be given a renewal for next season of their present lease of the Metropolitan opera house, and will abandon all further operatic enterprises. They will proceed shortly either to wind up their business altogether or confine their attention to the Tremont theater, Boston, which they own above a mortgage for $100,000.

Tax Collector Suicides.

Erie, Pa., April 6.—W. S. Ball, tax-collector of this city, suicided by taking strychnine. An examination of his accounts has not yet been made.

Cut in Price of Coffee.

New York, April 3. — The Woolson Spice company, of Toledo, O., have reduced the price of their brand of roasted coffee to 11 cents a pound net. It is expected that the Arbuckles will make a corresponding reduction in order to keep on the same footing in the trade.

Lake Navigation Opened.

Port Huron, Mich., April 2. — The steamer Porter Chamberlain and consort left for Alpena to load lumber for Cleveland. This opens navigation here for the season. Reports from the Canadian shore indicate that there is little ice of any account.

DEMOCRATIC GAINS.

Shown in Some of the Ohio Municipal Elections.

Cincinnati, April 6.—The result of the municipal elections in Ohio Monday shows democratic gains. The large cities which gave McKinley such enormous pluralities last November have gone democratic. The election in Cincinnati was for mayor and other city officers and members of the board of legislators. The republican ticket was headed by Levi C. Goodale for mayor and the democratic ticket by Gustav Tafel, the latter being elected by a plurality of 7,320.

Cleveland—Indications are that Farley (dem.) is elected mayor over McKisson (rep.). The remainder of the republican ticket is probably successful.

Hamilton—Busch (dem.) was elected mayor here by a majority of over 1,000. The entire democratic city ticket was elected.

Toledo—Samuel M. Jones as mayor and the entire city republican ticket was elected in this city by majorities ranging from 700 to 2,000. Toledo has been a wide-open town and Jones is supposed to represent the restrictive element.

Canton—The home of McKinley went democratic, Mayor Rice, for reelection, carrying it by over 400. The remainder of the ticket is divided, the democrats winning a majority of the offices. The vote was lighter than last fall, but nearly up to the average spring vote.

Columbus—For mayor Samuel L. Black (dem.) was elected over Emmett Tompkins (rep.) by 427 plurality. Total vote, 24,607, about 6,000 less than registration.

Springfield—The democrats carried the home of Gov. Bushnell, electing John M. Good mayor by 600 majority. The rest of the republican ticket was elected.

MUST NOT KILL RIVERA.

Secretary Sherman Tells Spain to Spare the Cuban Leader.

Washington, April 3. — Secretary Sherman has protested against the execution of Gen. Ruis Rivera, the Cuban leader in Pinar del Rio who was recently captured by the Spanish forces.

Secretary Sherman, in his blunt way, told the Spanish representative that the execution of prisoners of war was abhorrent to the American people. In the Rivera case this repugnance to the murder of men captured in civilized warfare was aggravated by the fact that the prisoner is badly wounded.

Washington, April 6. — The senate Monday by unanimous vote adopted a resolution reciting the reports that Gen. Ruis Rivera, the Cuban commander, is about to be tried by drumhead court-martial and shot, and expressing the judgment of the senate that if these reports are true the president of the United States should protest to the Spanish government against such a violation of the rules of civilized warfare. This resolution does not go to the house of representatives and becomes effective as a measure of advice to the president by its adoption.

A Batch of Nominations.

Washington, April 6.—The president Monday sent to the senate the following nominations:

State—Alfred E. Buck, of Georgia, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Japan; James Boyle, of Ohio, consul of the United States at Liverpool, England; S. S. Day, of Connecticut, consul of the United States at Bradford, England; Fenton R. McCreary, of Michigan, secretary of the legation of the United States at City of Mexico.

War—Brig. Gen. Frank Wheaton, to be major general.

[Alfred E. Buck, the new minister to Japan, has been for some time the recognized head of the republican party in the state of Georgia. He supported Mr. McKinley for the presidential nomination, and by hard work won over the Georgia delegates to his way of thinking, a number of them being inclined towards Mr. Reed. Mr. Buck went south from Maine shortly after the war, and during reconstruction days represented the Mobile (Ala.) district in congress. He subsequently went to Georgia, and was clerk of the United States circuit and district courts for the Northern district of Georgia until 1889. In that year he was appointed United States marshal for the Northern district of Georgia by President Harrison. He held this position four years.]

Was Once Mayor of Duluth.

New York, April 6.—Alonzo J. Whiteman, once mayor of Duluth, and subsequently an inmate of the California state prison, was placed on trial Monday, charged with grand larceny in the first degree. The Columbia bank of New York claims to have been defrauded of $580 by Whiteman in February, and the bank cashier, Walter S. Griffith, was the first witness for the prosecution. He testified that Whiteman, under the name of J. H. Williams, deposited a check on a Brooklyn bank for $3,716 in the Columbia bank, then drew a check against his account in the latter bank for $580. The Brooklyn check proved to be worthless.

Can't Stand the Expense.

Washington, April 5.—The state department has received notice from the Turkish government that it finds it inconvenient to raise the grade of its mission in Washington to that of an embassy, on account of the increased expense which would thereby be incurred. This decision of the Turkish government will prevent the president, under the existing law, from nominating ex-Secretary John W. Foster as ambassador to Constantinople, as it is understood was his desire.

Cattlemen Lose Heavily.

Denver, Col., April 5.—A special to the News from Cheyenne, Wyo., says: Reports of losses sustained by cattlemen during the recent storm are coming in slowly. On many of the large ranches it is estimated the losses will range from five to twenty-five per cent. of the herd. The snow lies 1½ feet deep in Cheyenne and from five to ten feet deep in the ravines. Much anxiety is felt for many persons reported missing.

Gage Gives Instructions.

Washington, April 6.—The secretary of the treasury has issued a circular of instructions to customs officers throughout the country, carrying into effect section 27 of the pending tariff bill. This section requires the secretary of the treasury to make provisions for the collection of increased rates of duties contemplated by the bill, and with that view he is required to retain samples of goods purchased and imported after April 1, 1897, and prior to the date on which the bill becomes a law.

Great Carpet House Burned.

Cincinnati, April 5.—The George G. Otte company's carpet store on the south side of Fourth street, one door west of Race street, with a stock valued at $300,000 and insured for $150,000, was destroyed by fire in less than two hours Sunday morning. The total loss to building and stock will be $400,000.

Famous Yacht Sold.

London, April 6.—The Exchange Telegraph company hears that the prince of Wales has sold his famous racing yacht Britannia to Mr. James Gordon Bennett, proprietor of the New York Herald.

DISARMED.

Foreign Troops Take Weapons Away from the Bedouins.

Canea, April 5.—The actual work of disarming the Bashi Bazouks began early Sunday morning and continued throughout the day. At the village of Kalieni they refused to deliver up their arms and demanded an order from the governor of the island and the personal presence of Edhem Pasha. The foreign troops then cordoned the village and the Austrian colonel, who was in command, ordered that search for arms should begin, when Edhem Pasha arrived. Then the cordon closed round the Bashi Bazouks, who yielded quietly. The European troops guard the gates of the town. The Arab quarter also is surrounded by European pickets. A proclamation has been issued announcing that all who refuse to yield up their arms will be shot. The insurgents have succeeded in exploding heavy dynamite cartridges upon the walls of the fort at Kissamo.

Canea, April 5.—Cretans and Mussulmans had a fierce fight on the plain of Arkotiri Saturday. The battle took place in the presence of the international forces. Arkotiri is a peninsula between Canea and Suda. The insurgents were cut off from communication with the interior by the guards along the Suda road. It became known that the admirals had permitted the insurgents to go down to the plain, and armed Moslems streamed out of the town unhindered, passed the Austrian guard and Saturday morning in full view of the admirals at Suda attacked the Christians at 200 yards. Maj. Bor and the Italian officers endeavored to stop the fight. The Moslems, driven back by the insurgents, came to the town and were disarmed by the international troops. Most of them left their arms behind. Fifty Moslems, killed or wounded, were brought into town. The Moslems held an indignation meeting because the European troops had not supported them.

THE TRADE SITUATION.

Bradstreet Reports Some Improvement in Business.

New York, April 3. — Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

"The course of general trade shows some improvement, notwithstanding an almost complete stoppage of business in the south Mississippi valley by washouts, overflows and floods. The condition of country roads throughout the central western states and the northwest is such as to further delay collections and check demand from interior merchants. Another drop is recorded in prices of Bessemer pig iron and steel billets, and in wheat, flour and coal, coffee and lard, which is, in part, offset by increased activity and higher prices for wool and for woolens, for corn, oats, sugar and petroleum.

"Special reports from 56 cities with reference to revival of activity in industrial lines indicate there are at work at those centers probably not to exceed 100,000 in excess of the number employed in November last. The increases are largely among employes of manufacturers of woolen goods, shoes, clothing, machinery, engines, agricultural implements, bicycles, carriages, furniture, iron, steel, glass and ship building. Depression still exists among some branches of the woolen goods industry, in coal mining and cotton goods manufacture."

According to R. G. Dun & Co., failures reported for the first quarter of 1897 number 3,992, against 4,031 last year, with liabilities of $48,007,911, against $57,425,125 last year.

Fatal Flames.

Erie, Pa., April 2. — Thirty business houses and a dozen dwellings were destroyed by fire at Cambridge Springs Thursday afternoon, causing a loss of one life and doing $225,000 damage to property. During the excitement of the fire an explosion occurred and the walls of Fellows & Hays' store fell in, and Hon. W. A. Hays, one of the proprietors, was buried in the wreck. Several others were struck by the falling walls, but were not seriously injured. Hays' body was recovered, but the head and limbs were missing. He was a former member of the Pennsylvania legislature from Erie county. The fire was the result of the careless use of matches by some boys. The total insurance is estimated at $125,000.

Forest Fires.

Bellefonte, Pa., April 5.—The forest fires in the surrounding mountains are spreading at an alarming rate. All efforts to check the flames have proven futile, and unless a heavy rain sets in many thousands of acres of valuable timber land will go up in smoke. The fire originated in the the middle section of the Nittany mountains from a spark from a locomotive falling on a tract of dry grass. The worst damage has been done in the timber lands several miles north of Milesburg, and at night the flames illuminate the sky as far as the eye can see. Another fire has broken out in the Seven mountains near here and is burning fiercely. This blaze is in the heart of the hemlock district and is doing much damage.

A Chicago Bank Fails.

Chicago, April 6.—The Globe savings bank, organized in 1891, with eastern capital, assigned to the Chicago Title & Trust company. Ex-Gov. John P. Altgeld assisted in the organization, and was its first vice president. The last statement, published February 13, showed a capital of $200,000 and surplus of $12,600, with deposits of $142,000 and savings $313,000. The liabilities of the bank are given at $600,000. One-half of this is owing to the people who placed their savings there. The other depositors who maintained checking accounts are creditors of the bank to the sum of $100,000. The stock liability is $200,000. The assets are given as $800,0000 nominally.

Betrayed His Trust.

Kansas City, Mo., April 6.—J. H. Aldrich, for several years cashier and paymaster in this city of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis railroad, was arrested in his lawyer's office here Monday afternoon charged with embezzling $27,000 of the company's money. He quietly submitted to arrest and says he will plead guilty and throw himself on the mercy of the court. Aldrich's stealings have been carried on for eight years. The company does not know exactly how much he is short, and has only his word that $27,000 is the amount.

Must Submit to Arrest.

Washington, April 6. — The United States supreme court has refused to grant the motion of Joseph Iazigi, late consul general of Turkey, at Boston, for a writ of habeas corpus releasing him from arrest on the charge of embezzlement. The decision of Justice Brown, of the Second circuit, dismissed Iazigi's petition and remanded him to the custody of the city authorities.

Many Immigrants Arrive.

New York, April 5.—The steamship Fuerst Bismarck, which arrived from Mediterranean ports Sunday, brought nearly 1,000 Italian immigrants.

Happy and Contented Deaf Children.

It is generally supposed that the deaf have a tendency to moroseness and melancholy. This is least true of the orally educated adult, and among the children in the oral schools is not true at all. I know of no happier or more contented lot of children than are to be found in these schools. The visitor who expects to enter a place of silent halls, quiet playrooms and noiseless yards is much surprised to hear peals of childish laughter and cries and shouts as the children romp and frolic out of school hours.—John Dutton Wright, in Century.

Standard of the World.

For nearly two score of years the Winchester has been the standard rifle of the world. It is found in all lands and it is always very highly thought of on account of its accuracy, strength and durability. There are over two million Winchester guns in use to-day, but the makers have yet to learn of any dissatisfaction with them. Such a recommendation as this should convince everybody of the exceptionally high quality of Winchester guns. Winchester ammunition is of as exactly as high a standard and always gives entire satisfaction. When used in Winchester guns the results obtained cannot be equalled. "For several months my health had been failing, and I did not have a well day in this time. I had severe pains in my back, my limbs ached and I was restless at night. I suffered with loss of appetite and severe nervous headaches. A friend advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking this medicine for a while I found I was gaining in health rapidly. I now have a good appetite, can sleep well, and the pains with which I suffered have almost entirely disappeared. I am gaining in flesh. I am still taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and I recommend it wherever I go." MISS SARAH SMITH, 311 North Park Street, Chillicothe, Ohio.

BATTLE IN A TREE.

How Bold Robin Redbreast Vanquished His Enemy.

[Copyright, 1897.]

They were a very devoted couple just at this time, though I have reason to believe that at other seasons of the year they nagged at one another a good bit, like other husbands and wives. He was a handsome fellow, and as for her she was as fond and affectionate as a lovesick little robin redbreast can be. They had built and furnished their house in the topmost branches of the only tree in our street, close to my study window—a poplar—and I enjoyed a splendid view of their honeymooning, and of his kindnesses and courtesy to her—behavior which made me smile as coming from him, because it was so very unlike him as he was for 11 months or so of the year. Well, they built what appeared to be a satisfactory home from their own point of view, and chirped and congratulated one another endlessly over the accomplishment. Soon after it was finished she laid an egg therein, and presently another; then a third and a fourth, and I think a fifth.

Then there came a time of comparative quiet; there was less chirping and idle conversation. She sat and dozed on her eggs as he did much the same upon the garden paling, or on an adjacent branch of the poplar, or anywhere that came, looking deeply dejected. Occasionally when she left the house in order to get a bit of dinner or breakfast, he would go and sit on the edge of the nest, and sometimes hopped in and fussed around, and kept poking the eggs with his beak, turning them over and over and gloating over them in a way which displeased the missus, seemingly; for he was always turned out with personalities on her return, and would then sail away to the fence and sit there more dejected than ever.

At last the eggs hatched and a busy time began; a time of innumerable expeditions on the part of both parents, foraging expeditions to every point of the compass; a time of funny noises from tiny, unseen personalities among the straws which formed their home; a bad time for the worms and such like game, for the youngsters were voracious and insatiable and kept their parents on the move all day and every day.

About a week after the hatching of the eggs, Thomas, the cat from No. 15, down this row, began to take an interest in the family. He had, apparently, made his calculations as to the hatching of those eggs, having watched the parent birds at their honeymooning, and, probably, taken a note of the date of the laying. When the youngsters were a week or so old, Thomas gave up all his other engagements in order to come and lie in my garden and gaze up into the poplar tree, and blink, licking his lips at intervals. During this time nothing could seduce Thomas from this fascinating occupation. His friends would come over the wall and speak to him, and try to wean him from the contemplation of the robin's nest, but he took no notice of them, he hadn't time; his calculations were too absorbing. It was so difficult, you see, to decide as to the exact age at which a young robin has attained his high water mark of succulency.

So Thomas' friends would come and shake their heads over him and go and talk to their other acquaintances about the deplorable falling away of dear Thomas and the hope they entertained that he might still recover his lost ground when he should have got over that unfortunate craze of his. Some of the community laughed consumedly over this phase of Thomas' career; they said they could not help recalling what happened to Eliza—another member of the society—a couple of years ago, when she took to bird hunting. She had made a bid for the season's brood of this very couple of robins and had fared badly at their hands—or heads; it had been a killing sight, they said—killing! It might be there would be a parallel spectacle on this occasion, if Thomas really intended to make a bid for the youngsters up aloft.

Thomas certainly did intend to do so. He was only waiting until the proper moment; there was plenty of time! Every day, every hour, added its quota of succulent bird flesh to the already rotund little bodies in the nest! Ha, ha! the time would soon arrive! it was nearly here!

Mr. and Mrs. Robin took no notice whatever of Thomas—indeed, they never once betrayed the fact that they knew he was there, though Thomas lay and blinked up at their happy domestic home and calculated and licked his lips all day long. I thought it odd that these devoted parents should feel no anxiety as to the proceedings of Thomas. To me it seemed clear that his intentions were far from being honorable; yet these optimistic people either disregarded him altogether, or—if they observed his presence at all—desired to show their contempt for his machinations by pretending to be unaware of his existence.

But presently the little speckle-breasted boys and girls had nearly grown out of the parental mansion; they would take to flying soon; their fat little bodies were as succulent and delicious as they would ever be, and Thomas knew that the time had come for his climb. Thomas knew very well what had befallen Eliza. She had been foolhardy. Eliza had rushed the thing, and had been detected and ignominiously sent home by a combined attack of the enemy. Thomas intended to act with discretion and intelligence.

One morning Mr. Robin had left the premises upon a foraging expedition. Mrs. R—— had absented herself upon a similar enterprise; the time had come. Thomas crept, snakelike, along the grass of the lawn, looked up the poplar, blinked, opened his mouth without speaking, and jumped four or five feet up the long bare trunk of the tree. At the same instant Mr. Robin pere arrived on the scene. He darted quickly in from the opposite side, so that the trunk was between Thomas and himself, and settled himself quietly upon a branch, whence he could see all that passed.

The cat Thomas, ignorant of the proximity of danger, clung on to the trunk like grim death and hauled himself up a few feet. Mr. Robin, supremely ignorant of the circumstance, interested himself in a feather far away under his wing; he worked hard to find the feather, pulling it out at last, and letting it float away out of his beak.

Thomas clung on to the tree trunk, all the claws of all his feet being requisitioned for the exertion, and stared up at the nest, gathering strength for a rush. Mr. Robin yawned and pretended to be deeply interested in the foliage of the poplar, which, of course, formed no portion of his real diet, though he picked at it now and nibbled a little, for effect. He did this in case Thomas should have caught sight of him, in order that Thomas might, in that case, suppose that his own movements had not been observed. The bare trunk of the poplar was a long one, you see, and Mr. Robin was anxious that Thomas should not be alarmed before he had reached an elevation which would suit the plans he had laid out. As a matter of fact Thomas had not seen him at all, up to now.

At length the assassin—the would-be assassin—took a long breath, blinked twice or thrice, and scrambled about 20 feet higher up the tree. Then he stopped to rest. Mr. Robin yawned again, spat out the leaf he was pretending to eat, chucked concealment to the winds and his own round body into the air, and flopped down upon the branch nearest to Thomas' head; to the unutterable disgust of that dishonest individual, who thus found himself suddenly in an extremely awkward position between the devil and the deep sea—Mr. Robin representing the devil, whom he rather resembled just now, and the drop of nearly 30 feet the deep sea.

Thomas looked upwards and perceived a climb of 15 feet, at least, to the nearest bough; he looked downwards—and it made him quite giddy, so high had he climbed. Also his paws and muscles generally were strained and weary, and the devil, in the shape of Mr. Robin, sat and yawned and watched him, as though with indifference, though with a very nasty look about the eye, up above. Thomas blinked and his ears lay back on his head with rage and fear, and his back tried to arch, but failed by reason of his uncomfortable attitude, which did not lay itself out for arching; and Thomas opened his mouth to swear or say his prayers, and I cannot say for certain which, because no sound came.

Mr. Robin allowed Thomas to thoroughly enjoy his position for a minute or two; then he called up his wife. "Come on, missus," he cried, "and you shall see some fun; I have Thomas, the cat, on toast; no hurry!" or words to that effect. Mrs. Robin arrived at once and sat down to watch, and I verily believe the five little ones popped their heads out of the nest and watched also.

Mr. Robin now took the field. He quietly left his bough and poised himself in air close to Thomas' distracted person. Thomas rudely spat at him and viciously struck at him with one of his front paws, which he unfastened from the bark of the tree for the purpose. This nearly lost him his hold and he quickly grabbed the trunk again and spat freely. Then Mr. Robin delivered his main attack. He swooped at Thomas and dug his businesslike beak into his head and his body; once, twice and a third time he repeated his blow, and Thomas found his voice and rummaged his vocabulary for all the worst things it contained.

But hard swearing did not save Thomas. He could not hit Mr. Robin back, because he knew that if he did he must let go his hold and fall to the earth. Nevertheless he did strike at Mr. Robin, for that hero had aimed a fourth and a fifth shot at him, and the attack was painful, as well as dangerous to the eyesight. Thomas flashed his wicked green orbs at the enemy—swore, spat and struck out at him. The inevitable happened, of course. Thomas fell.

A baffled, beaten, dejected cat was Thomas as he crept across the lawn, accompanied by Mr. Robin, who was now joined by his lady; and over the paling into No. 4 he went, and across No. 4 garden and into No. 3, still jeered at and insulted by his escort, and there I lost sight of the party. What sanctuary the defeated one sought I do not know; but this I know—that I saw no more of Thomas for many days, and when he did return his countenance wore that chastened expression which is assumed by those who have seen the error of their wicked ways and have made good resolutions for the future.

As for the little Robins, they grew up in peace, and in peace they took their ultimate departure, whither I know not.

It was after the departure of these birds and their heroic parents that Thomas reappeared in society.

A Prompt Lesson.

Some years ago there was in a western town a judge whose ideas of the majesty of the law, at the time of his accession to office, were unbounded; and his sense of his own importance as the representative of justice was also great. At one time two persons quarreled in the judge's presence; one man struck the other, and the judge immediately ordered his arrest on a charge of assault and battery. On the day of the trial the defendant pleaded: "Not guilty." Instantly the judge, who was a short, stout man, was on his feet, crimson-faced and puffing with indignation. "What do you mean?" he demanded of the prisoner, without any preamble. "What do you mean by saying that, when I saw you, and had you arrested? I fine you $100 for breach of peace, and another $100 for contempt of court, sir. I reckon," said the judge, his nostrils dilating with rage and injured dignity, "I reckon that'll teach folks to be careful how they call this court a liar!"—Youth's Companion.

Gold.

Some time ago it was reported that a marvelous run of ore had been struck at the Ferguson gold mine on the Seine river, and soon after it was learned that the ore was being sacked in the shaft instead of being put on the stock pile. Now comes a report that the new stamp mill just put in is being worked by the officers of the company only and that no one outside is allowed step into the mill while the ore is being crushed. This is taken to indicate the fact that the run of rich ore is holding out and that it is not a mere pocket, as was feared at first. Charles Nelson & Co., of St. Paul, representing a new syndicate capitalized at $1,000,000, has purchased for $20,000 rich property in the Manitou country on the American side. There is quite a stir and several companies are prospecting for nickel.

Released.

The land office at Crookston is notified that Secretary Bliss has released the pine lands bought by T. B. Walker, Weyerhauser and other lumbermen, which were held up on the report of Colonel Wright that the estimates had not been fair and the lands were sold too cheap, and has ordered the land patented to purchasers. This will settle a question which has seriously retarded the pine sales and will add $500,000 to the fund due the Chippewas.

Found Dying.

An unknown man was found on the Great Northern track at Paret in a dying condition. He was removed to a stable, where it was found his back was broken, besides other internal injuries, from which he died soon after being picked up. He regained consciousness before death, and made a statement that death was the result of being thrown from a freight train by the train crew.

Fatal Quarrel.

Charles Deimore, a wood chopper, was killed seven miles from East Grand Forks. He was working for John Pelky, who had a hauling bee and five gallons of alcohol. Desmore and a man named Alphonse Cota became involved in a quarrel. Pelky separated the men and took Desmore to camp, where he soon died. A wound on the temple is the supposed cause. Cota was arrested.

THE SICK BED.

Some Essentials to the Comfort of the Patient.

In arranging the sick bed the two essential things to be thought of are the comfort of the patient and, after that, the convenience of the nurse.

The bedstead should be firm, light and simple. If it is firm, it cannot be easily jarred; if it is light, it can be easily moved; and if it is simple, it can be easily kept clean. All these requirements are met in the plain iron bedstead, which has the additional advantage that its width and heighth are adapted both to the needs of the patient and the convenience of the nurse.

If the bedstead is light, it is better to have only the head-end provided with castors, otherwise the bed will move too easily. By lifting the foot end off the floor the bed can be moved and guided without causing the patient the least discomfort.

The mattress should be sufficiently soft and yielding to be perfectly comfortable for the patient, but not so yielding as to allow his body to sink into it. It is very difficult to make a sick person comfortable on a saggy mattress.

Feather beds should never be used in cases of sickness. They are uncomfortable for the patient, it is impossible to keep them clean, almost of necessity they keep the patient's body unnecessarily warm and they are extremely inconvenient for the nurse.

To prevent the mattress from becoming soiled, a good-sized piece of waterproof material—preferably a rubber blanket—should be smoothly spread over it before the under sheet is put on. This sheet should be large enough to be securely tucked under the edges of the mattress, and the greatest care should be taken to smooth out all the creases.

The pillows should be thoroughly aired at least once a day, and whenever the pillow slip becomes soiled, or damp with perspiration, a clean one should be substituted. Changing and shaking up the pillows when they have become hard and mussed is a small service, but very refreshing to the patient.

The covering for the sick bed—other than the top sheet—should vary according to the temperature of the room, the nature of the sickness, the feelings of the patient and the season of the year. Whatever these conditions, the covering should be as light as is consistent with the comfort of the patient.—Youth's Companion.

PILOT FOR AN EMERGENCY.

Tells Examiners What He Would Do in a Tight Fix.

There was a party aboard the boat and the members were telling stories about civil service reform. Everybody had told of some preposterous questions excepting the old salt at the wheel. He had puffed his clay pipe in silence and listened. There was a moment or two of quiet after the last story, and the old salt spoke up. "Never he-erd o' civil service regardin' th' pilotin' business, didja?" he demanded.

"Never did," said two or three of the party.

"Well, we got it," said the old salt; "got it bad, too. You fellers been talkin' about fool questions, what d'ja think o' this here one that was asked me when I war up t' pass? They says t' me, they says: 'Now, assume there war a fog thicker'n any fog there ever was,' they says; ' 'n' supposin' you war in command, 'n' you suddint he-erd a whistle dead ahead,' they says, ' 'n' then,' they says, 'you he-erd a whistle on your port bow 'n' then you he-erd a whistle on your scabbard bow, 'n' then you he-erd a whistle on your port quarter 'n' then you he-erd a whistle on your stabbord quarter 'n' then you he-erd a whistle dead astern,' they says, ' 'n' you could't see nothin', what wouldja do?' they says."

The old salt puffed at his pipe and gave the wheel a couple of twists. Everybody was silent. The old salt puffed a full minute before he said a word. Then he asked:

"D'ye know what I said to 'em?" He took two more puffs and made some remarks about the wind and the possibility of reaching the city in two hours. Finally he asked again: "D'ye know what I said to 'em?"

"What did you say?" asked one man.

"I says to 'em," said the old salt; "I says to 'em, 'I'd go below,' I says, ' 'n' cuss,' I says, ' 'cause I don't think I could do nothin' better under them circumstances,' I says, 'n' d'ye know they marked me a hundred fur that answer t' that there fool question. That's what they done. They says that's the only thing a sensible man could do under the circumstances, they says."—N. Y. Sun.

Violet Russe.

Cover one box of gelatin with a half cupful of cold water, and soak for half an hour. Whip one quart of cream, turn it in a pan; place this in another of cracked ice or very cold water. Add one cupful of powdered sugar, ten drops of extract of rose, a teaspoonful of vanilla, and the grated rind of half an orange. Add half a cupful of cream to the gelatin, stand it over hot water. Stir until dissolved, strain it in the cream and stir carefully until it begins to thicken. Turn at once into a melon mold which has been lined with candied violets. The violets may be fastened in place with a little melted gelatin. Stand in the cold for at least two hours. When ready to serve turn out on a white platter that has been covered with maidenhair fern or violet leaves. A few fresh violets may be added as a garnish. This pudding may be made suitable for a green tea or luncheon by substituting pistachio coloring for rose and dusting the mold with chopped pistachio nuts. Garnish with ferns only.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Spoiled by Thoughtlessness.

The best way to make a child good is to expect good things from him. How many children are ruined by hearing from the lips of their mother or nurses words that come thoughtlessly, "Naughty child!" I have heard a little boy proclaim as an excuse for his misdeeds: "I can't help it. I'm naughty." He had been convinced that it was of no use to try to be good.—Woman's Home Companion.

Good for the Children.

A variation of the custard cups which ought to appear frequently on the children's table is made by leaving out the milk and sugar of the usual formula and substituting chicken stock and salt and pepper. Use the yolk or whole egg as if a custard cup was to be made, adding the chicken stock in the proportion of a half cupful to an egg. Bake in a basin of warm water till just set.—N. Y. Post.

Rheumatism and Heart Trouble.

From the Reporter, Oconto, Wis.

A representative of the Oconto County Reporter, while in conversation with Mrs. John Daley, of Kellybrook, Wis., the other day elicited the following interesting story, which we publish for the good it may do like sufferers. Mrs. Daley said:

"For about fifteen years I have been so troubled with heart disease that I have been unable to make a quick movement. I have been hardly able to climb a flight of stairs and it has been as much as my life was worth to attempt to lie down for any length of time on my left side. And for the last ten years rheumatism has so bothered me that at times I could not raise my hand to my head. I believe I spent the price of a good farm for medicines during those years of illness, but with no permanent relief.

"About a year ago I noticed in the papers accounts of wonderful cures attributed to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and made up my mind I would try them. They could at least do me no hurt.

"I had taken them only about ten days when I began to feel better and I have steadily improved up to the present time. I can now go up and down stairs as lively as a ten-year-old girl, and all trouble with my heart has disappeared. My rheumatism has almost ceased to trouble me and the headaches which formerly kept me sick a large part of the time are less frequent and painful.

"My son was also troubled with nervousness and sleeplessness, but three boxes of Pink Pills have made him a well man. I am glad to recommend this remedy to any who have been troubled as I have been.

(Signed) "MRS. JOHN DALEY."

They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. CALIFORNIA HISTORY.

Only Accident Prevented It from Becoming Russian Territory.

Nothing perhaps but the accident of the establishment of the Hudson Bay company and the Northwest Fur company saved northern California from becoming a Russian province. Virtus Bering closed a life of adventure by planting the Russian flag in Alaska in 1741. Four years later Sitka was founded. A quarter of a century elapsed before the Spaniards undertook their first northward advance from San Diego and Monterey. If the English fur hunters had not intervened between the two, Spaniards and Russians would have gravitated towards each other, and in that case the chances are that the Golden Gate and the Sacramento would have been the dividing line between them.

Until the close of the eighteenth century hunting and fishing on the Alaskan shores were conducted by individual enterprise. The fur seal and sea otter were hunted by the Siberians, who sailed the stormy seas of the north in craft sewn together with thongs and calked with moss. They belonged to the primitive order of savages, among whom robbery, outrage and murder were the ordinary events of the day, and at whose hands the meek Alent bent his neck to the knife as the inoffensive Peruvian had crouched before the countrymen of Pizarro a century before. In the last year of the eighteenth century order was established in Russian America. A company, in which members of the imperial family and the muscovite nobility were shareholders, was founded on the plan of the British East India company and the Hudson Bay company. Exclusive rights of hunting and fishing were conferred upon it. Its jurisdiction within its territory was as broad as that of the czar himself. The Aleuts and their neighbors held their lives and property at its mercy. They were not only slaves, but no slave code threw over them a semblance of protection. Over this corporation was set Gen. Baranoff, whom Astor's agent, Hunt, described as a hyperborean veteran, overflowing with hospitality, who, if his guests do not drink raw rum and boiling punch as strong as sulphur, will insult them when he gets drunk, which will be soon after he sits down to the table. He served the company faithfully for 30 years, and then was thrown over to starve at the age of 72.—San Francisco Chronicle.

HEATING ROOMS.

Necessary Precautions for the Preservation of Health.

Living and working rooms, where the occupants are actively engaged, should have a thermometrical register ranging between 62 degrees and 68 degrees F.; for sedentary habits, from 64 degrees to 70 degrees F.; bath rooms, 72 degrees to 76 degrees F., these records to be varied at different hours of the day or night, with due consideration to the given amount of sunshine or shade bearing upon the rooms.

Students of hygiene quite generally maintain that coal containing any considerable amount of sulphur contaminates the air offensively and unhealthfully.

A thin layer of coal on stove or furnace grate bars gives better results than when unduly overloaded.

A small stove or furnace crowded to overheat is not as economical of fuel or as considerate of health as are larger heating facilities and a less use of fuel.

Open grate fires, while they furnish an element of goed cheer, are not as economical of fuel as are multitudes of the close heating appliances. For purposes of ventilation, the open methods of heating have a decided advantage over the closed ones.

Self feeding heaters are generally considered as mediums demanding less attention and less fuel than those "brought up by hand."

All warmed rooms in winter should have arrangements for the use of good quantities of fresh water basins daily.

Ordinary steam house heating apparatus should have a register pressure of not more than five pounds of steam to the square inch.

Radiators neither take in nor drive out bad air, and have no elements of ventilation whatever. A vessel of water holding prominent place in rooms heated by radiators is always desirable.

Hot water heating gives a moister tone to the air of the room than dry air systems of heating, generally speaking.—Amateur Gardening.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

DELANO, FRIDAY, APR. 9, '97.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—The school board has engaged the old corps of teachers for next year.

—G. P. Schaffer has had the old Sieloff shop moved from the corner Where his new store is to stand.

—John B. Plattner intends building 30 feet to the rear of his brick store. He desires to keep up with the procession.

—The Shakespeare Club has postponed its meeting for one week, as the teachers are nearly all away from town.

—Several of our townsmen have been subsisting mostly on fish for several days. Some fine pickerel have been caught.

—The Eagle's musical column by L. W. Everson gives the musical readers of that paper an opportunity to post up on things musical. L. W. E. is quite a spicy writer himself.

—Olof Peterson has some horse hide leather which he says will make shoes that will turn water. Rubbers will soon become unfashionable when he gets the people supplied.

—Mrs. Russel, superintending the placing of children from the Childrens Home Society, was in town this week looking after the little one here. The train was late but Mr. Kelsey's folks failed to get the girl there in time, so Mrs. R. was obliged to wait for the next train.

—Yes, Peterson is the man to see, if you want to get a pair of shoes. My spring stock is the finest that ever came to Delano. My ladies dongola, leather insole and counter at $1.50 can't be beat also my Miller's oil grain water-proof congress for men at $1.75 is the best you ever saw for the money.

—Scorchers in St. Paul have already run down two men, and the scorcher haven't been caught. Wheelmen should assist in catching such fellows before laws are made prohibiting wheels from being used on the streets at all. People don't want to be run over just because they have to walk.

—The Howard Lake Herald says it cost one saloon man about $80 and the right to take out another license on account of selling a drink; and then the loss of a citizen because he objected to being "bossed" so much. Here they keep right on selling and send the victims to the insane asylum or the cemetery.

—The Board of Public Education at their Saturday evening's meeting voted to have two weeks vacation. They refused to allow but one week vacation for Christmas and now have learned that unless two weeks are taken the school will be out too early for state examinations. Surely the board is learning something.

—Charley Eppel has been looking after his orchard this week. Something, the boys say rabbits, but Charley insists it was mice, has girdled several fine fruit trees, and ceder trees. Trees all along the Rockford road, of every variety have been served in a similar manner and in many places it is as bad as a fire on young trees.

—Complaints are made in the Sherburn County Times that corn raised last year don't all come up, when planted. Try your seed corn thoroughly before planting time comes. You may save yourself some hard work and much vexation, and escape wrongfully accusing the gophers, crows, cutworms or other innocent "insects" of robbing you.

—Friday the 30th day of April has been set apart by Governor Clough as Arbor Day. He recommends that trees be planted and appropriate exercises be held in schools throughout the state. This can be made an interesting and profitable occasion. How would it do for all the scholars of all the schools in town and as many as desire to come from elsewhere to meet in the City Hall for an hour in the afternoon, and have some special exercises. It would be enjoyed by young and old.

—Almost a drowning occurred last Saturday. As it came out we only have three more names to add to the list of those who have, so early in the spring, taken a bath. Leslie Bartlett and Elmer Babb had just finished a fine new boat which would take them safe and dry over the raging Crow. Joined by Herman Zierman, they set out for Bartlett's slaughter house, on a trial trip. On striking the swiftly flowing stream they were hurried along toward the river proper; the paddles were not sufficient to steer and propel with, and not having figured on such an extensive and swift voyage, having no provisions aboard they didn't know but they would perish from hunger before arriving at New Orleans. Then of course there was St. Anthony falls to shoot, the Hanover and Rockford dams to be dashed over, the Rockford and McKinley bridges might be grasped as they rushed under, but they struck a snag before even the last named was reached and the boat, "Texas" like, made for the bottom, filled with the swift stream it was sucked down. The officers and crew, by hanging onto the brush and yelling lustily, after a few minutes soaking, were rescued by George Cramer and Darv Welker. A narrow escape. The boat has since been recovered from her perilous position.

—Isn't the Old Bird getting in her dotage for sure, when she endeavors to make her readers believe that two absent members of the Board of Education are the equivalent of four that are present? That 2 is half of 6?

County Cullings.

Senator Culkin secured an amendment to the re-appointment bill giving to Wright County three mmebers of the legislature.

The votes of our members of the Legislature are reported on the Re-apportionment bill to have been cast as follows: For the bill, Dare; agaigst, Belden, Boutwell, Mattson. We didn't think the Wright County Republicans wanted to get rid of Sherburne County very bad.

Senator Culkin is not yet sure of moving to Duluth. The faithful there may be able to attend the Land Office business even though the town did elect Towne to Congress.

Prosperity struck the Cokato Enterprise on the first day of the new administration. Six mortgage sales for publication, commencing March 4, all on farm lands. And the gold standard prevailed.

The Howard Lake Herald devotes a half column to the residence of Hon. Belden at the Bethel Home, in St. Paul. That is showing partiality. Give us the homes of the balance of the House, Herald if you dare.

On the question of prohibition the wearing of sectarian garb, and sectarian instruction in public schools, our delegation in the House are registered as voting. For the bill Dare, Mattson; against Belden, Boutwell.

The bill for local option came before toe House Monday. The motion to place the bill upon the calander was lost by a vote of 39 to 47. Our representatives didn't help it much. Representative Belden voted for it. Dare against it, while Boutwell and Mattson didn't vote.

Erick Westburg, age 73, was found dead near Cokato. The Buffalo Journal says Dr. Shannon, Coroner, drove over and held an investigation, and the verdict was: Died of alcoholic narcosis and exposure. And still saloons which furnish liquors are licensed by law "the village has to have the money" is the story. Of course the saloons must get the money to pay license.

ROCKFORD RUMBLINGS.

The regular meeting of the village council was held at M. G. Warens on Friday evening April 2nd 1897: all members present; meeting called to order by the President; records of the last meeting, also the records of the Village election read and approved; the official bonds of C. M. Johnson, Village Treasurer; C. W. Haynes, Recorder; W. H. Guptil, J. W. Mounts, Justices of the Peace; and Amos R. Kinney, Constable were presented and approved.

On motion, voted that the regular meetings of the Village council shall be held at M. G. Waren's Store on the first Friday evening of each month during the year. The President appointed the following standing committee on side walks and street crossing: Hamilton, Waren, and Haynes; on streets and culverts: Benner, Heyner, Farnham; on street lamps and lighting streets: Waren, Benner, and Hamilton; on taxes and expenses: Farnham, Haynes, and Benner; on bills and accounts: Waren, Hamilton, and Benner. Amos R. Kinney was appointed Village Constable in place of J. E. Hoppe, who failed to qualify. The following bills were audited and allowed:

C. W. Haynes, Recorder	$11.20
A. C. Farnham, Street Com.	1.50
A. R. Kinney, Judge of Election	1.50
B. S. Mattison, Clerk of Election	1.50
Aleck Farnham, Judge of Election	1.50
Frank E. Warner, Will Jacobs, and All Toey $1.25 each for one day street work.
Aleck Farnham, lighting lamps 12 days $3.60
M. E. Fuller, repairing street lamps $1.50

On motion, voted that the pay for extra work shall be, during the year, for a man and team $2.50 per day; for ordinary labor, each man $1.25 per day. C. L. Matteson appeared and asked for a culvert at his place, on the corner of Maple and Linden streets. The committee on streets and culverts were ordered to examine the matter and report at next meeting.

The village has been troubled a little with high water in the Crow during the past week. Several families on Mechanic street had to change quarters, and many cellars are quite wet, but not much damage done the dam, mill, or bridge; all stood the racket. A few timbers went off the dam and the ice breaker above the mill went below, that was all. The river is falling fast. The water is nearly all gone out of the village, and stragglers are getting home again.

Fish are plenty, most of them pickerel are caught from the front platform of the flour mill. The suckers that we have had each spring time for so many years, we sadly miss. We can only take fish legally with a hook and line. The Legislature neglected to incorporate in the elaborate fishing laws anything to compel suckers to bite, so they are safe. There is no way to legally get them, and we miss them so much after being acquainted with them so many years.

D. R. Thompson is improving; he has been out several times, but the damp weather during the past few days keeps him at home most of the time. Mrs. Thompson is slowly recovering.

Will Swartcont's youngest child is quite sick but seems to be better today.

Mr. J. Benner and H. E. Pitt are on the sick list today; but there is not much sickness in and about the village.

The woollen mill, flour mill and saw mill are each taking a vacation during the high water season.

Haley Young will start up the box factory in a few days.

The creamery is about finished and is as good as any in this part of the county. Everything is new and of the most modern and improved make. Mr. Roosen will, no doubt, in the future as he has in the past, give entire satisfaction.

Silver, Gold and Debts.

"We were Pharaoh's Bondsmen in Egypt."

Spring and prosperity is coming slow "and they made their lives bitter with hard bondage in mortar, and in brick". According to the census report of 1890 which is official and political and also gives correct reports up to 1896,—the principal of our public debt was $1,785,412,640.90 and that of States and Territories including cities and counties $1,135,210,442 and that of mortgages on real estate $9,019,679,985 say nothing about private debts, etc.—Now Mr. Editor, if you can, tell me how this country can pull out of this hole of indebtness with a forty-thousand-horse-power engine, and at the same time start a breeze of prosperity. I will give it up that you are more than a philosopher. The city debt of Minneapolis is $6,540,000, and that of other cities accordingly and yet the country is getting farther and farther in debt.

When worshipers of the single gold standard and a high protective tariff get their fill then things may take a turn in the right direction. When gold values are put upon every thing (as it will be unless there is a change) then people will find out it was for Mammon this thing was wanted and not for the people or country. The silver dollar is still in circulation and goes for 100 cents, on one side written E. Pluribus unum with the head of a soyereign and on it stamped liberty, on the other side is the wide spred eagle, and writen thereon United States of America one dollar and yet men of high and low rank, some dressed in broadcloth and some in shoddy goods, said last fall that this dollar of the constitution was spurious money and only fit to be cast to the dogs. Who was it that lead you out of Egyptian bondage and through the wilderness Was it the banker and bond holder, or he who girdled on his armor and went forth to battle? "He who steals my purse steals trash. But he who steals my good name steals all that I have."

Because silver bullion was only worth 65 cents per oz. does not lessen the value of the dollar. The government must first change the number of grains in a dollar before its value is increased or deminished. All the bull frog oratory that was brought against the silver dollar last fall was nothing but bosh, and deception from the ground floor up. Has farm produce gone up on a gold basis? Has realestate took a jump out of sight? Then what are you gold standard men and high protectionists looking for? I can think of nothing unless it is the millenium. Is money seaking investment? No. And how many mills are starting up? And when they do they cut the wages of their employes. When the people of this country swallowed the golden pill last fall I fear they got one in their interior that will neither go up nor down. FARMER.

BLUE AND GRAY.

'Twas a sight to be long remembered,
That I saw on the cars one day,
As the train was flying southward,
In the latter part of May.
It was only two aged women
Who met by chance that day,
One had eyes of loveliest blue,
The other, the sweetest gray.

"Where go you?" said the blue-eyed one
To her with the eyes of gray.
"I'm going to visit my husband's grave,
In the Southland far away.
"Was he a soldier?" the blue-eyed asked,
As she gazed in the eyes of gray:
And half unconsciously she grasped
Her hand in a loving way.

The eyes of gray lit up with pride:
"Yes, he was a soldier true;
He fell at the battle of Shiloh,"—
"Oh! there's where mine fell too,"
And then they clasped each other and wept,
The eyes of the blue and gray
Mingled their flood of sympathy
As the train sped on its way.

"What uniform did your soldier wear?"
"My soldier wore the blue."
"Ah," said the other, "mine wore the gray."
"No matter they both were true."
"Yes, they were true, our loved and lost.
True till their dying day.
And it matters not what they wore on earth,
They are clothed in white today."

And when we came to the station,
A very small town by the way,
The men all stood bareheaded
As the two went on their way.
They walked up the street together,
Like children hand in hand,
Out on the country highway
Where the old church used to stand.

And on and on till they reached the place
Where the soldiers brave were laid;
Then they kissed and wept o'er each grave alike.
And together they knelt down and prayed;
Then each told the other about the past,
How they lived with their children dear,
And agreed while God would spare their lives,
To meet there once a year.

And then they walked back to the station,
These soldiers' widows in tears,
Helped by each others sympathy,
To bear their burden of years,
Back to the west they traveled,
To their children brave and true;
One with eyes of the sweetest gray,
The other, the loveliest blue.

—Portland, Ore, Telegram.

DANIEL W. VOORHEES, the Tall Sycamore of the Wabash. Ex United States Senator from Indiana died April 10th, at his home in Washington. In his death Democracy looses a leader, and the country a statesman and orator. His public life was a long and an eventful one.

JUDGE BENN and the jury have squashed one of the late campaign arguments against John Lind by giving him a vindication of character and $600 for expenses in prosecuting the St. Paul Dispatch for calling him an infidel. Surely next time no one canbe induced to vote for Dave Clough in preffernce to John Lind, on account of his being a better christian.

BISHOP IRELAND is given credit for having considerable of a pull with the new administration at Washington. Perhaps that's how so many old political hulks come to be declared unseaworthy in Minnesota. The Bishop is said to have endorsed the Consul to Rome and now is favoring Storer of Ohio for the first Assistant Secretary of State. His influence seems bigger than Minnesota. But he helped elect McKinley.

SEVERAL city dailies have almost destroyed their reputations, what little they had left, for truth and veracity by their foolish and absurd stories about the flying machine being seen in so many places at nearly the same time. Flying machines may be one of the quickest, easiest and safest modes of moving about in the nodistant future. But few if any people now believe that one has been proulling about over our heads for the past week without lighting anywhere.

Apologizes for the Appointment.

The Aitkin Republican apologizes for the Governor's appointment to a fat office, as follows:

"Governor Clough has appointed James S. O'Brien, of Stillwater, to be surveyor general of logs and lumber. The appointment was considered by the senate on Monday last. Mr. O'Brien is a democrat, but supported the republican ticket last fall."

Republicans are like other people they can stand a few of these kind, but, when they get to be so numerous that there is little or nothing left for the faithful old timers it grows very monotonous.

THE Star-News, Representative Dare's paper, thinks legislaters earn all they get for their services.

Bimetallic Commission.
